RADIUM'S USE IN CANCER.

Harvard Report Says It Cures in Superficial Cases Only.

The outburst of sensational discussion of radium as a cure for cancer having subsided, this method of treatment is finding its true place and value as an aid to surgery. Through constant study at the hands of many experts a new and better understanding of its action is being attained. The latest statement from an authoritative source is found in the annual report of the Havard Cancer Commission.

At the Collis P. Huntington Hospital in Boston 200 milligrams of radium are in use under all the advantages of new and ingenious methods of application devised by the hospital staff. As a result of another whole year of observation the Harvard Commission repeats its conclusion, first published in 1914, that the curative value of radium is limited to certain types of skin cancer and other localized forms of the disease. Its value as a palliative in relieving pain and discharge in inoperable cases has been fully confirmed.

It has also been found effective in leukemia, a disease marked by an enormour increase in the white blood cells, with enlargement of the spleen. Large cancerous growths were sometimes found to disappear under the influence of radium, but the spreading of the cancer to other parts of the body was not prevented in these cases, and, indeed, it appeared that patients might even succumb to the poisons released into the system as a direct result of the breaking up of the tumor under radium treatment.

Most significant of all is the statement that radium treatment has been refused at the Huntington Hospital in cases where a surgical cure seemed reasonably probable.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION IN AMERICA AND EUROPE

If any proof were needed that the operations on the Stock Exchange included a large volume of speculative transactions it could be found in the fact that Westinghouse common, a stock which during all of last year contributed 39,000 shares to the trading on the Stock Exchange, was dealt in last week to the extent of over 600,000 shares, or 80 per cent. of the total amount of common stock outstanding. But the security markets were not left to speculation alone. The action of the bond market showed very clearly the presence of a large investment demand which offered very satisfactory compensation for the rather too great freedom with which another department of the security market accepted hasty estimates of the profits to accrue from war orders. Those profits may prove very great in individual cases and will no doubt be large in the aggregate, but they are based on a fickle sort of business which is not of a kind upon which to build permanent prosperity. The stockholders of the New York Central who subscribed for practically all of the $100,000,000 of 6 per cent. convertible debentures which were recently offered to them and which were formally approved last week by the Public Service Commission of New York State could not have based their response to this offering on any estimates of profits to accrue from the business which the war is now perforce throwing to this country. Neither was the generally good demand for a wide variety of bond issues the outgrowth of enthusiasm over the huge orders which have come or are forthcoming from European belligerents. Such demand has reference rather to the more fundamental things which control the business of this country, and it is confidence in respect to this which constitutes by far the most satisfactory phase of the present public attitude toward the security market.

It takes real improvement in underlying business conditions to bring about favorable change of general application in so basic an industry as the steel trade, and it was in the light of that thought that great importance was attached to the progress which last week's quarterly statement of the Steel Corporation revealed in the earnings of that company. The total for the quarter was not very satisfactory, being so small as to be second only to that of the previous low record quarter, but the monthly earnings reflected a really noteworthy upturn from the excessive depression into which the steel trade had fallen at the beginning of the year. February's earnings were more than double those of January, and March's earnings were practically double those of February. That is a rate of improvement which of course cannot be maintained, but it establishes through very concrete proof the fact of noteworthy recovery. April may possibly not hold true to the standard set in March—the unfilled orders of the Steel Corporation are believed to have decreased during the month—but by comparison with conditions prevailing only a few months ago the present scale of earnings are encouraging even though they must seem unsatisfactory as compared with earlier periods of greater prosperity. There is no doubt that the reception accorded to the publication of this quarterly statement of the Steel Corporation, the most important of the earnings statements which come from the industrial world, showed very clearly the present disposition of the public to look hopefully to the future. The statement was satisfactory chiefly in that it promised better things, and that promise in the existing temper of the public was held to be much more important than results actually attained in the period covered by the report.

Estimates of the possible earnings of the Steel Corporation, however, were by no means the sole factor in maintaining the price of Steel through a succession of recoveries following large realizing sales in that stock. The thought of the financial community turns very frequently to the decision in the Steel anti-trust suit, and it is in keeping with its present attitude in many other matters that the public whose view finds reflection in current Stock Exchange operations, is expressing confidence in a decision in favor of the company. It is known that some of those who have examined the record of the suit closely from the point of view of the Steel Corporation are very hopeful that the decision will be a clean-cut opinion in favor of the corporation. In these circles the possibility of the corporation being required to dispose of its control of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company, and of the railroads which it manages, is talked about as something which many people have suggested, but which does not necessarily represent the probabilities of the case. It is believed that a decision favorable to the Steel Corporation would have pronounced effect upon financial sentiment, and it is in this belief that many think of a possible favorable decision in the Steel suit as the most potent single factor which is likely to develop in the relatively near future. It is thought that the handing down of the decision is now a matter of weeks, and some even think that it is merely a matter of days. It is a striking indication of the broad character of the confidence which has been finding reflection on the Stock Exchange that there seem to be relatively few who feel called upon to guard against the possibility of disappointment of the hope of a favorable decision in the Steel case.

The financial community outside of the Stock Exchange supplied some additional evidence last week of the feeling of hopefulness with which the future is looked to. The formulation and ready underwriting of a new plan of reorganization for the Wabash Railroad, the drawing up of plans for the removal of other railroad properties from receivership and the favorable response made to the Missouri, Kansas & Texas offer to extend its notes as a preliminary to a comprehensive plan of financing were all things which indicated the belief in financial circles that we have entered a period of constructive possibilities.

Had there lately been no allowance of increases in freight rates the grant of higher wages to a large number of Western railroad employes by the Board of Arbitration would have had more adverse effect upon sentiment. As it was it stimulated liquidation of railroad stocks under which, however, they suffered only minor price losses. It is to be expected that the grant of higher wages will move the Western roads to still more energetic effort in support of a rate readjustment to offset this further expense and other items which have been added to the cost of railroad operation. More practical recognition has recently been shown of the truth that railroad expenses cannot be increased indefinitely without forcing up railroad rates, and to the extent of the wage increase the Western case in favor of higher rates is stronger than it was before last week's award.

Monetary conditions continued last week to favor operations in stocks and bonds, for despite the increased demands on credit—actual and prospective—rates remain very easy. They have receded in some quarters in which rates recently showed signs of hardening. Particularly in this true of the commercial paper market, where rates are almost as low as they have ever been. Four months' paper has been placed in the West as low as 3 per cent., and business has been done in six and seven months' paper as low as 3¼. In the East the market is somewhat higher, but is really easy. The bank statement on Saturday showed how easily current demands are met by the banks, thanks in part to the very large surplus which the new reserve requirements give and impart to the continued inflow of cash. The immediate over-subscription last week of the $40,000,000 issue of Baltimore & Ohio notes afforded another indication of the great abundance of money available for short time investment in high grade issues. The market continues to discuss the likelihood of huge credits for European countries, but this discussion has had no active influence upon money rates, so confident is the market of its ability to handle the demands which may be made upon it. There may lurk in this confidence a conscious or unconscious reliance upon inflationary possibilities of existing credit machinery, but even that thought suggests possibilities which are very welcome to the majority even though they admit in a theoretical sort of way the ultimate disadvantage of inflation. That may eventually be guarded against, but in any event on the record as it stands there can be no doubt about the betterment which has taken place in underlying conditions nor about the strong feeling of hopefulness with which the business world as a whole looks to the future.

LONDON MARKET STEADY.

Government May Take Share of War-Contract Profits.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 2.—A quiet week ended with prices for stocks holding steady. Last Monday's less favorable war news was not reflected by weakness in quotations, but buyers appeared to lose something of their former confidence, and the check given business was not lessened during the succeeding days. While trading was quiet in your shares also, prices in late days of the week advanced each morning to levels close to the New York equivalents.

The Treasury definitely refused permission for Stock Exchange dealings in the renewed Missouri, Kansas & Texas notes. British holdings of the old issue are less than £500,000, and no opposition to the plan of renewal has arisen. The Wabash reorganization plan was well received here.

The budget to be introduced in Parliament on Tuesday may contain a proposal that the State take two-thirds of the profits made on war contracts above the average profits made in the three years before the war. There is much uncertainty regarding the possible effect of the new liquor laws, a condition that is reflected in a nominal market for brewery shares. In connection with the new French policy of releasing gold for New York and other centres, Minister Ribot's visit to London and his conferences with financial leaders are attracting much attention.

A substantial amount of new financing is scheduled for this week. Ten-year 4½ per cent. bonds to the amount of £3,000,000 are to be brought out tomorrow for the Union of South Africa at 98½, and a loan of longer maturity for £3,000,000 or £4,000,000 for the Indian Railways is looked for shortly. The amount of Argentine Treasury bills maturing here this year is £8,000,000. The proposed Anglo-American loan to Argentina, in 6 per cent. five-year bonds at 99 is likely to be well taken here and should involve the transfer of funds to London from New York on balance.

PARIS TAKES PROFITS.

Some Reactions, but Prices Generally Above March Level.

PARIS, May 2.—Some profit taking at the close of the week brought moderate reactions in a number of issues, but prices generally at the end of April were above the closing level of March. Exceptions were the shares of several French banks which were influenced by lack of information in regard to reports made at recent shareholders' meetings.

Paris had felt skeptical about the spurt of copper metal on the London market, and yesterday's decline of price for copper in London was reflected by a sharp fall in Rio Tinto shares on the Bourse. The final quotation for Rios was 100 points below the last price on Saturday a week ago.

The Bank of France on balance lost 37,000,000 francs gold during the week, but gained 38,000,000 francs in credits abroad. Gold which was shipped to London was believed to be destined for New York. Nevertheless, sterling and dollars were slightly dearer. Many foreign banks are taking up their financial acceptances which have been held in abeyance since August. They seem to be expecting a decree ordering the settlement of direct bank obligations.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Joseph Wood Rutter and Norman P. Ream have organized the banking firm of Rutter & Ream, 60 Broadway, to deal in bonds and high-grade investment securities. Mr. Rutter was formerly associated with Harris, Forbes & Company, but for the last three years has been manager of the bond department of H. N. Whitney & Sons. Mr. Ream is the eldest son of the late Norman B. Ream.

The Bankers Trust Company is inviting proposals for the sale to it on July 1 of bonds secured by the mortgage of the Metropolitan Telephone & Telegraph Company dated May 24, 1888, at a rate not exceeding 110. There is a fund on hand of over $18,000 for the redemption of these bonds.

A trustee under the first and refunding mortgage of Rogers-Brown Iron Company dated Jan. 3, 1910, and supplemental mortgage bonds dated April 22, 1910, the Bankers Trust Company has called for redemption a number of 5 per cent. serial gold bonds, payable on July 1 at 102½ and accrued interest.

MEETINGS AND ELECTIONS.

TO THE HOLDERS OF THE THIRTY-YEAR FIRST MORTGAGE FIVE PER CENT. GOLD BONDS (SERIES A) OF THE PENNSYLVANIA COAL AND COKE COMPANY UNDER ITS MORTGAGE TO THE COMMERCIAL TRUST COMPANY, DATED JULY 1, 1902:
Take notice that a meeting of the holders of the bonds issued under the above-mentioned mortgage of the PENNSYLVANIA COAL AND COKE COMPANY is called to be held at the office of the Pennsylvania Coal and Coke Corporation in the Land Title Building, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, on the 19th day of May, 1915, at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon for the purpose of acting upon a proposition to release from the lien of said mortgage a certain lease from the BLUBAKER COAL COMPANY to J. L. MITCHELL, dated April 1, 1902, covering certain coal and mining rights in and under approximately 1,730 acres in Elder and Susquehanna Townships, Cambria County, Pennsylvania, together with the improvements and equipment upon the leased premises and all rights appurtenant thereto. The foregoing notice is given by the undersigned, as it has acquired the right, title, and interest of said Pennsylvania Coal and Coke Company in and to the lease and property proposed to be released, as aforesaid.
Dated New York, April 9, 1915.

FINANCIAL.

New Orleans, April 26th, 1915.

The City of New Orleans, acting under authority of Act 179 of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana for the year 1908, ratified by constitutional amendment, and now a part of the Constitution of the State of Louisiana, will receive sealed proposals at the office of the Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans up to twelve (12) o'clock noon, on the 28th day of May, 1915, for the purchase of $500,000.00 in face value of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans, authorized by and to be issued under and subject to the act aforementioned, and the constitutional amendment ratifying same, and of the numbers, denominations and maturities of the authorized issue of $2,000,000, and in the form of and in accordance with the bond schedule of the maturities of the entire authorized issue as given and prescribed by an ordinance of the City of New Orleans, being Ordinance No. 8628, N. C. S., approved May 14, 1912, and Ordinance No. 2340 Commission Council Series, approved April 20th, 1915, of said city, authorizing the present offering.

Three hundred and fifty of said bonds are of the denomination of $1000 and three hundred of the denomination of $500, and bear interest at the rate of five per cent per annum, evidenced by coupons attached, payable semi-annually on the first days of January and July, respectively of each year.

Said bonds are the second issuance out of the total amount authorized by said act and constitutional amendment, and are of the numbers, amounts and maturities, as follows, to-wit:

Three hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($350,000) of said bonds shall be of the denomination of $1000 each, and one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000) of the denomination of $500 each, and of the numbers, amounts and maturities as follows, to-wit:

Said bonds are subject to call by the City of New Orleans on the first day of July, 1939, or on any interest day thereafter, at par and accrued interest on thirty (30) days notice of its intention to so redeem, published in the official newspaper of the City of New Orleans.

They are, by the aforesaid act and constitutional amendment, exempt from all State, Parish and Municipal taxes, and may be legally invested for the estates of minors and of interdicts, and are receivable by State, Parish and Municipal officers, where, by law, deposits of bonds are allowed or required to be made.

The payment of the principal and interest of said bonds is made a preferential charge upon the net revenues of the Public Belt Railroad of the City of New Orleans, and are and will be issued under and subject to the aforementioned statutes and ordinances, all of which are hereby referred to and made part of this advertisement for greater certainty and particularity.

Said proposals shall be received under and subject to the following conditions, to-wit:

Proposals must be in writing, sealed, and marked on the outside of the envelope "Proposals for the purchase of $500,000 of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans," and shall likewise be accompanied by a certified check on some chartered bank in the City of New Orleans, for an amount equal to one per cent. of the aggregate amount of the bid, which said check of the successful bidder or bidders shall be cashed and the proceeds retained by the City of New Orleans as a guarantee that the successful bidder or bidders will comply with its or their bids, and the said proceeds shall be applied to the payment of the bonds last delivered to the successful bidder or bidders, respectively. In case of the neglect or refusal to comply with any bid, the proceeds of said check shall be forfeited to the Public Belt Railroad Commission of the City of New Orleans.

No sale shall be made unless the aggregate of the bids received equals the full amount of the present offering of $500,000, in face value, and the adjudication shall be made to the highest bidder, provided, however, that no adjudication shall take place for less than par and accrued interest. All matured interest coupons shall be cut from said bonds and cancelled, and the successful bidder shall pay the interest which may have accrued on said bonds up to the date of delivery. The bonds shall be paid for in cash as fast as said bonds can be signed and delivered. All bonds will be delivered within thirty days from the opening of said bids. The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

Further particulars and information will be furnished on application to W. B. Thompson, Commissioner of Public Utilities, the Public Belt Railroad Commission, or to the undersigned. The final opinion of Wood & Oakley, lawyers, Chicago, Ill., as to the legality of this issue will be furnished to the successful bidder if so desired.

A. G. RICKS,
Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans.

DANGER IN CHEAP MONEY.

City Bank Points to Play of Credit with Usual Safeguards Lacking.

The National City Bank says in its May letter that with money so cheap in the world markets as it is now there would be possibilities for mischief in ordinary times. It is an axiom, the letter states, that available funds will inevitably find their way into use, and aside from the fact of war the stage is now set for a gigantic play of credit and prices with the usual safeguards wanting.

"Will the demands of the war upon credit and industry," the letter continues, "prevent the readjustment that would otherwise occur under like conditions? In this country there has been stir enough on the Stock Exchange to suggest the inception of such a speculative movement. It usually begins with stocks. The London stock market has been so dead, however, that on March 19 a new and lower list of minimum prices was promulgated and the market quickly dropped to most of them. Since then, on the strength of the New York market, a little more life has been manifested there, but nothing like a speculative fever has appeared.

"The situation in the United States is strong and sound at this time. We have, however, previously pointed out that there are great possibilities of credit expansion here, owing to the reduction in the reserve requirements of the national banks, and that the Federal Reserve system would have no control over such expansion until it had reached the stage where the member banks were needing help. If the existing slack should be taken up rapidly by means of speculation and rising prices, instead of by legitimate growth, the resources of the Federal Reserve system might be seriously strained. It must be borne in mind that the system is new and only comes into its full resources in the course of three years, while the new reserve rule for the member banks is already in full effect. In other words, the old reserves have been reduced before the new reserves are in full working order. Notwithstanding this situation, there are people who think the reserve banks are altogether too slow about getting their funds into use."

GREAT NORTHERN ORE GAINS

The annual report of Louis W. Hill, James N. Hill, Walter J. Hill, and E. T. Nichols as Trustees of the Great Northern iron ore properties for the year ended Dec. 31, 1914, shows net current assets, consisting of cash and investments, of $17,295,000, an increase of $4,149,000 over the preceding year. The cash receipts for the year were $877,959, of which $72,042 was spent for administration expenses, $750,000 was distributed to holders of the 1,500,000 certificates of beneficial interest, and $55,916 was transferred to the balance of $3,763,000 of undistributed receipts carried over from previous years.

The surrender by the United States Steel Corporation of its lease of a large part of the Great Northern properties, which was accomplished on Jan. 1 last, in the belief that the Government would object to it as giving the Steel Corporation a controlling interest in ore deposits, has not interfered with development work, according to figures in the report, which indicate that the Trustees are proceeding in development work in order to be in a position to supply ore to other buyers. The Trustees are holding their resources for the purpose of financing the proprietary companies as the needs of those companies develop under the changed conditions.

There was shipped last year under old leases 1,826,000 tons of ore, a decrease of nearly 900,000 tons. Under the Steel Corporation lease there was shipped 6,014,000 tons.

Evansville & Terre Haute Railroad Company

FIRST GENERAL MORTGAGE FIVE PER CENT. BONDS, DUE APRIL 1, 1942.

In view of the fact that attempts are being made in the pending litigation to create upon the property covered by the above mortgage liens having priority over said mortgage, the deposit on or before May 18th, 1915, with the Depositary of the above bonds, with coupons due April 1, 1915, and subsequently maturing coupons attached, is strongly urged.

This Committee will loan to such depositors as request it, on the security of the bonds and coupons deposited by them respectively, the amount of their coupons which matured April 1, 1915, notation of such loan being made on the Certificates of Deposit issued to such Depositors. The Committee reserves the right to withdraw this offer at any time without further notice.

Copies of the Bondholders' Protective Agreement may be obtained upon application to the Depositary or Secretary of the Committee.

This Committee has been organized solely for the purpose of protecting the holders of bonds of this issue and represents no conflicting interests.

AFTER MAY 18TH, 1915, THE COMMITTEE RESERVES THE RIGHT TO REFUSE DEPOSITS OR TO ACCEPT THEM ONLY UPON SUCH CONDITIONS AS IT MAY AT THE TIME IMPOSE.

DATED NEW YORK, MAY 1ST, 1915.

FORECLOSURE SALES.

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF NEW YORK.—THE NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK OF THE CITY OF ALBANY, Plaintiff, against CLARENCE E. ANDERSON, individually and as executor and trustee under the last Will and Testament of Eva Roxana Anderson, deceased, and others, Defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above entitled action and bearing date the 30th day of November, 1914, I, the undersigned, the Referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the Exchange Salesroom, Nos. 14-16 Vesey Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 4th day of May, 1915, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Joseph P. Day, Auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold and therein described as follows:

"All that lot of land in the City and County of New York, with the buildings thereon, bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at a point on the southerly side of Sixty-eighth Street, distant two hundred and forty-three feet nine inches easterly from the intersection of the southerly side of Sixty-eighth Street and the easterly side of Columbus Avenue, and which point is opposite the centre of a party wall; running thence easterly along the southerly side of Sixty-eighth Street eighteen feet nine inches; thence southerly parallel with Columbus Avenue and part of the way through a party wall one hundred feet five inches to the centre line of the block; thence westerly along said line eighteen feet nine inches to a point opposite the centre of the first mentioned party wall, and thence northerly parallel with Columbus Avenue and part of the way through the centre of said first mentioned party wall one hundred feet five inches to the southerly side of Sixty-eighth Street at the point of beginning.

Dated New York, April 9th, 1915.

EDGAR H. ROSENSTOCK, Referee.

The approximate amount of the lien or charge, to satisfy which the above-described property is to be sold, is eighteen thousand eight hundred seventy-two dollars and fifty cents, with interest thereon from the 20th day of November, 1914, together with the costs and allowances amounting to four hundred eleven dollars and forty-four cents, with interest from November 30th, 1914, together with the expenses of the sale. The approximate amount of the taxes, assessments and water rates, or other liens, which are to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money, or paid by the Referee, is ten hundred thirty-six dollars and ninety-five cents and interest.

Dated New York, April 9th, 1915.

EDGAR H. ROSENSTOCK, Referee.

THOUGHT MAN HAD A BOMB.

Instead Prisoner's Valise Contained 900 Stick Pins.

After he had been followed from a dance held at 20 Hancock Street for the benefit of Carmine Carbone and Frank Abarno, the anarchists, convicted of placing bombs in St. Patrick's Cathedral, a man who described himself as Giuseppe Lariccia, 35 years old, of 183 Mott Street, was arrested in the hallway at that address early yesterday morning by Detectives Polignano and Santaniello. He was locked up in Police Headquarters on a charge of grand larceny.

According to the detectives, who have been assigned to watch anarchistic groups, they followed Lariccia, who carried a valise from the dance hall. When he entered the hallway they thought he was about to place a bomb and questioned him. They examined the valise and found in it 900 silver stickpins, bearing a socialistic emblem. He said the pins were given to him on Saturday by a man he had never seen before.

The detectives say Lariccia was arrested in the Union Square riots on April 4, 1914, and served fifteen days for disorderly conduct. Lariccia was arraigned before Magistrate Marsh in Tombs Court and was held in $1,000 bail for examination today.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—With a general and decided rise in pressure in the South and Southwest the weather was generally fair, while in the East it was generally unsettled, with light rains over the north districts. Temperatures have fallen considerably in the Northwest, and they are much below the seasonal average. In the extreme West they are still very low for the season, but are rising over the eastern half of the country. The Middle West disturbance will move east north eastward, attended by showers Monday in the Central Valleys and the Lake Region, extending Monday night and Tuesday into New England, the Middle Atlantic, and the north portion of the South Atlantic States. There will also be local rains Monday in the Pacific States. Elsewhere the weather will be generally fair Monday and Tuesday. It will be somewhat cooler by Monday night and Tuesday over the central portion of the country and will be warmer in the Far West.

FORECAST TODAY AND TUESDAY.

Eastern New York, New Jersey, and Eastern Pennsylvania—Cloudy today; showers at night and Tuesday.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer of the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

9 A. M.	49	54	9 P. M.	57	58

The thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 54; for the corresponding date last year it was 54; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 58.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 50; at 8 P. M. it was 60; maximum temperature, 62 degrees, at 3 P. M.; minimum, 46 degrees, at 4:45 A. M.; humidity, 72 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 49 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 29.93 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 29.81 inches.

HEN IS TYPHOID CARRIER.

Can Only Spread the Disease in a Mechanical Way.

The problem of the carrier in various infectious diseases has long vexed the sanitarian who is bent on discovering every possible mode of transmission and every portal of entry for the germs. Human carriers of typhoid and diphtheria germs, themselves immune to attacks of the malady, are now watched for in nearly every community, and the danger which they represent as a latent source of infection is clearly recognized.

"Doubtless," says The Journal of the American Medical Association, "many of these possibilities for spreading disease without the presence of detectable symptoms are still unrecognized. In typhoid, it has been shown that some of the lower animals may be made typhoid carriers; and attention has lately been directed to such animals as might be expected to become carriers by reason of their environment or habits.

"Mitchell and Bloomer, of the bacteriologic laboratory of the University of Missouri, have pointed out that the chicken is a domestic animal which might often come into contact with typhoid discharges. The mechanical transference of typhoid bacilli on the feet and bill of a chicken does, without question, occur. By various methods they have attempted to follow the germ. From the work of the Missouri bacteriologists it would seem that the hen is highly resistant to typhoid. It not only fails to take the disease, but apparently cannot be made a carrier except in a mechanical way."

6 IN AUTO THROWN INTO PELHAM BAY

Young Woman Caught Under Car Which Was Embedded in Mud Near Death.

3 IN COLLISION MAY DIE

Three persons were probably fatally injured and many more were seriously hurt yesterday in automobile and motorcycle accidents in and around New York. Those not expected to live are Mildred Meier, 15 years old, of 1,231 Southern Boulevard, the Bronx; Henry Eggers, 20 years old, of 23 Delaware Avenue, Bloomfield, N. J., and Albert F. Wilson, 28 years old, of Hastings, N. Y. Mr. Wilson is the leader of the Republican Party in Hastings and the Tax Collector for the Township of Greenburgh.

When he was injured Mr. Wilson was on his way to visit his father, Charles A. Wilson, who is a patient in St. John's Riverside Hospital in Yonkers, and after the accident the son was taken to the hospital and unintentionally placed in the ward where his father was lying. The injured man was unconscious and his father did not see him as he was brought in. As soon as it was discovered that the two were in the same ward the son was removed to a private room, because it was feared that news of the accident might have a harmful effect on the elder Mr. Wilson, who is very ill with pneumonia.

His Chest Crushed.

Kuchenmiester got Dr. William Doersler, and together they lifted Wilson in Kuchenmiester's car and took him to the physician's home on Broadway, Hastings. The superficial examination of Wilson showed his injuries to be so dangerous that Dr. Doersler summoned a private ambulance and hurried Wilson to St. John's Hospital. Kuchenmiester collapsed after Wilson had been sent away, and the physician had to revive him.

The automobile that caused the accident was constructed by Kuchenmiester, and he was driving it for the first time, to test its mechanism. He said he was on the wrong side of the road because of his efforts to avoid the trolley car.

Richard Stuve, Jr., of 1,355 Vyse Avenue, the Bronx, yesterday invited Mr. and Mrs. John Meier and their three daughters, Misses Florence, Gertrude, and Mildred, to take a ride with him in his automobile. The party spent the early hours of the afternoon in a run along the roads near Pelham Bay, and about 5 o'clock they were returning along City Island Avenue, Mr. Stuve driving.

Auto Plunges Into Bay.

Near Beach Street, the avenue runs on an embankment fifteen feet above the waters of Pelham Bay and only a plank fence on the top of the embankment at the roadside separates th ethoroughfar efrom a sharp descent to the water. The automobile was going smoothly when the steering gear broke, and, befor eStuve could cut off the power, the machine swerved, crashed through the fence, and turned over on its side in the mud and water at the foot of the embankment.

All six occupants of the automobile were carried down with it and nearly buried in the mud in which it sank. The tide was low, the water being only a foot deep, or every one in the accident might have been drowned. As it was, the six persons were pitched about in the car and painfully bruised. None of them except Mildred, however, was dangerously injured. She was caught under the top of the tonneau. She was removed to Fordham Hospital, where it was found that she had suffered probably fatal internal injuries and a fracture of the right hip. The others were able to go to their homes. In addition to his bruises, Mr. Stuve received a sprain of his right ankle.

Henry Eggers and Elliott Gouffreau, 22 years old, of 33 Grant Street, Bloomfield, were riding a motor cycle through Bloomfield Avenue near North Twelfth Street, Newark, yesterday afternoon, when the cycle ran into the curb. Both men were sent flying through the air, Eggers coming in contact with a telephone pole. His skull was fractured and his nose and collarbone were broken. Gouffreau suffered a severe laceration in the left side of his face. The men were removed to the City Hospital, where it was said that Eggers could not live.

Mrs. Hannah Hanrahan, 30 years old, of 458 West 166th Street, was knocked down yesterday, as she was about to board a southbound trolley car at 207th Street and Broadway, by a motorcycle ridden by Paul Norwood of 233 West Forty-third Street. She was found to be unconscious and was taken to Washington Heights Hospital suffering from concussion of the brain and possible internal injuries.

Cars in Collision Overturn.

The force of a collision between the automobiles of Wallace Davis of 178 Miller Avenue, and Jacob Glasser of 512 Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, overturned both cars yesterday morning at Ridgewood and Railroad Avenues, Brooklyn, and hurled nine persons to the road, three of whom were painfully injured. In the Glasser car besides Mr. Glasser himself were Mrs. Archie D. Reber, her seven-year-old son Philip, and three members of Mr. Glasser's family. In the Davis car were Wallace Davis, Jr., who was driving, and his two brother, Henry, 15 years old, and Arthur, 7 years old.

The Glasser car was going south in Railroad Avenue and the other west in Ridgewood Avenue. When Mrs. Reber saw that a collision was inevitable she threw her arms around her son and held him so that in falling he struck on top of her and escaped injury. She herself suffered a sprain of the hip and severe shock, and was taken to her home at 512 Eastern Parkway.

The other injured person was Arthur Davis, who was thrown through the windshield of the automobile in which he was riding. An artery was cut in his left arm, and for a time it was feared that he would bleed to death, but Dr. William F. Saybolt of 114 Pennsylvania Avenue, Brooklyn, who happened to be passing in his car, stopped the flow of blood.

Jennie Cohen, 11 years old, of 77 East 110th Street, was knocked down yesterday afternoon, as she was crossing the zone marked out by the traffic police as the safest place for pedestrian to cross 110th Street at Eighth Avenue, by a motor cycle on which Sylbester Grady, a law clerk of 1,010 Halsey Street, Brooklyn, was riding. Sh esuffered a broken leg.

Policeman Carroll and Sergeant Burke arrested Grady for reckless riding in failing to observe the safety zone.

Motorcyclist Injured.

Miss Rose Arnold, 25 years old, of 222 South Sixth Avenue, Mount Vernon, was seriously injured when she was thrown from a motor cycle in Southern Boulevard at 180th Street, the Bronx. She was riding behind Frank Stero of 510 South Fourth Avenue, Mount Vernon, and lost her seat as the man swerved sharply to avoid striking a crosstown surface car. Stero was uninjured, but Miss Arnold was removed to Fordham Hospital suffering from a scalp wound and many bruises.

Joseph Beubier, 30 years old, a machinist in the Police Department, of 408 Linden Street, Brooklyn, received a fracture of one rib when attempting to crank his automobile in Pelham Parkway near Pelham Bridge.

While going south on Eighth Avenue yesterday afternoon an automobile owned and operated by Dr. Nicholas M. Villone of 344 West Twenty-seventh Street struck a truck driven by Max Shapiro of 271 Broome Street. In the automobile wiht the physician were his 6-year-old son, Ovide, and Theresa Ely, 16 years old, of 329 Eighth Avenue. The boy was thrown to the pavement and the girl against the windshield. Both suffered abrasions and bruises that were treated by Dr. Villone in a near-by drug store.

Louis Mass, 38 years old, of 1,995 Seventh Avenue, was knocked down by a motor cycle yesterday afternoon while attempting to cross Lenox Avenue at 116th Street. He received abrasions of the face and body, and was removed to Harlem Hospital. The motor cycle was driven by Walter Cook of 558 West Forty-second Street, who carried the injured man into a drug store and summoned an ambulance.

A motor cycle ridden by Frank Masse of Teaneck, N. J., crashed into the limousine of former Mayor Cortlandt Linkroum of Hackensack yesterday afternoon at Banta Place and Main Street, Hackensack. Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Linkroum was injured. Masse suffered an injury to his right leg.

JOY RIDERS IN CAR SMASH.

Chauffeur Flood and His Friends Come to Grief at Stamford.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., May 2.—The automobile of R. J. Horner of 331 West 101st Street, New York, was wrecked at West Main Street and Mill River at 3 o'clock this morning. The occupants were more or less hurt. They were Thomas N. Flood of 229 East Twenty-sixth Street, New York, Mr. Horner's chauffeur; Joseph Hanerfield of 958 Kelly Street, the Bronx; Alfred Swartz of 229 West 141st Street, New York; Edward Craig of 325 East Forty-second Street, New York, and Miss Catherine Flynn of 219 Willis Avenue, the Bronx. Mr. Swartz's face was badly bruised and cut; his injuries were dressed at the Stamford Hospital. The others did not go to the hospital.

The party was on the way from Bridgeport to New York. According to Mr. Horner, the chauffeur had permission to use the car. Flood drove through Stamford Centre so fast that the police were about to telephone to Greenwich to head him off, when word came that the car had left the road and crashed through a wooden fence after bouncing off an iron pole. It was turned upside down and one side was crushed in. The occupants were flung away from the car and escaped serious injury.

Flood was arrested on a charge of reckless driving, and the police say he will also be charged with intoxication.

THREE HURT IN AUTO CRASH

T. L. King and Wife of This City Taken to Poughkeepsie Hospital.

POUGHKEEPSIE, May 2.—Pinned in the wreckage of his automobile when run into by a car driven by Joseph Samuels of this city this afternoon, T. L. King of Riverside Drive and Ninety-ninth Street, New York, is in St. Francis Hospital with a broken leg, broken nose, and possible internal injuries. Mrs. King is also in the hospital with a wrenched back and several cuts. The 10-year-old son of Mr. Samuels had his left leg broken. He was taken to his home in this city.

Mr. Samuels, who was accompanied by his wife and two children, was driving south. His car was nearing the top of a grade in front of the gate house of the Frederick Vanderbilt estate at Hyde Park when he tried to pass a carriage which was going in the same direction. Mr. King's car, running north, was descending the grade when the collision occurred. Mr. and Mrs. King were conveyed to the hospital in a car from the Vanderbilt place.

SUNDAY TALKS PROHIBITION

Urges 10,000 to Vote Down Saloon —Luncheon with Judge Gary Today

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., May 2.—"In the name of your pure mother, in the name of your manhood, in the name of your wife and the innocent children that climb up in your lap and twine their arms about your neck, how many of you men, so help you God, will, if you get the chance, cast your vote against the damnable, hellish liquor interests?" shouted Billy Sunday this afternoon and tonight. At each service nearly 10,000 men rose, and, waving their handkerchiefs, cheered and cheered.

Sunday stood on his pulpit, almost twelve feet above the sawdust trail, and waving a great American flag, cried: "'Come on down the trail and take your stand for everything that's decent and against the business that sends men home maudlin, brutish, devilish, blear-eyed, bloated-faced drunkards!'"

Sunday's sermons this afternoon and evening were the same, "Booze; or, Get on the Water Wagon," and were attended by men only. The two services brought out more than 20,000 men, and a mixed audience of 9,000 heard his morning sermon.

"The saloonkeeper and the devil are both pulling on the same rope," said Billy. "Whisky is all right in its place, and, take it from me, its place is in hell."

"Personal liberty!" he yelled. "That argument is for the man that stands up against the bar and fills his hide full of red liquor that transforms him into an irresponsible, dangerous, evil-smelling brute. Personal liberty isn't for the patient, long-suffering wife or the starving children. If you howl personal liberty you're under the wrong flag, and it's up to you to beat it." Then he grabbed an American flag, and as he waved it the choir broke into "America," and the house went wild.

He attacked the system of "regulating the saloons with high licenses," and said: "You might as well try to regulate a powder mill in hell. The only difference between a low-class saloon and a high-toned one is that one stinks and the other smells bad."

"Ma" Sunday led a meeting of 3,000 women in the Regent Theatre in the afternoon and a mixed meeting in the Church of the Redeemer in the evening.

Billy said tonight that he and "Ma" would take luncheon tomorrow at noon as the guests of Judge and Mrs. Elbert H. Gary at their home, at 856 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Collections today amounted to $2,000.17, coming second to the record made early in the campaign. The grand total is $24,688.94.

ASHEVILLE'S WEEK OF SPORT

ASHEVILLE, N. C., May 2.—The marriage of Miss Eleanor Varick Morrison and Dr. Paul H. Ringer last evening closed a busy week for visitors to this place.

Interest is now shown in tennis on the courts of the Country Club, Grove Park Inn, the Manor, and Battery Park Hotel. A tournament is to be arranged at Grove Park this week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Lewis of New York carried a party of friends from the Manor to Esmeralda Inn today for luncheon. Miss Dorothy Coates of New York, who is at Battery Park, will take half a dozen friends to Mount Pisgah tomorrow.

R. G. Jennings of Pittsburgh and several guests motored yesterday to Toxaway, where Mr. Jennings has an extensive fishing preserve.

Mrs. Maurice du Pont gave a dinner last evening at her Montford cottage for Miss Florence Tryon of New York. Covers were laid for twelve.

LITTLEFIELD DIES AFTER OPERATION

NOTED FOR HIS ORATORY

Charles Edgar Littlefield, former Congressman from Maine, who had lived in New York since he resigned from Congress in 1908, died at 8 o'clock yesterday morning at the Post-Graduate Hospital from an embolism following an operation performed about ten days ago.

Mr. Littlefield was elected to Congress June 19, 1899, to fill out the unexpired term of Nelson Dingley, author of the Dingley tariff, who had died in office. He was an insurgent by temperament—not a radical insurgent, such as those who broke away later when the Payne-Aldrich tariff was up for passage, but an insurgent according to his own views. His first speech was made in the case of the exclusion from the House of Brigham H. Roberts, the polygamist elected to a seat from Utah, and he took the unpopular side.

Then the Republican organization put through its bill for a tariff with Porto Rico, and again Littlefield was an insurgent. He disagreed with the party's policy on the Cuban Reciprocity bill, and by this time he was known as a man chronically unsubmissive to orders from the machine, who nevertheless by the force of his personality was making his own way, and winning his own reputation. His district re-elected him to the Fifty-seventh, Fifty-eighth, Fifty-ninth, and Sixtieth Congresses, and he soon acquired a wide reputation through the vigor of his oratory, and his firmness in standing out for his own views. He was described as follows by a correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES in 1904:

The Orator in Action.

"Aggressiveness and pugnacity seem to surround the man as he rises, and before he has said a word. His gestures would be ungraceful if anybody else used them, but they so fit in with his character that they seem exactly right, and as if anything else would be inadequate to the rough and stormy nature of the man. He gesticulates chiefly with his head, beating down the air with it as he brings out his points. Then he takes his hand out of his trousers pocket and swings it through the air with the motion of a man sweeping everything out of the way before him. When he raises his forefinger it is not with the argumentative manner of a man discussing a proposition, but as if it were a weapon with which he would cleave the skull of any one so rash as to get in the way.

"If this suggests that Littlefield is a swashbuckler or ranter it conveys an error. He is a great constitutional lawyer, a man of breadth and profundity, sagacious, clear-headed and liberal. There is no dissent on either the Republican or the Democratic side from the proposition that he is one of the clearest thinkers and ablest men who have ever sat in either branch of the American Congress."

Littlefield was called into conference by President Roosevelt when he first began to consider anti-trust legislation, and for a time there was a report that he would handle the legislative end of the campaign. A series of newspaper attacks, however, had the effect of severing his close relations with the President, who took up another line of less vigorous action against the corporations; so Littlefield, who introduced an anti-trust bill which he thought at the time had the support of the Administration, found his mistake when it failed of passage and other measures went through.

This setback, however, was only temporary, and before long he was again powerful in the House, and now in better relations with the organization. Shortly after this he again started out on an independent course of conduct which led him away from the organization and brought him into a line of action which he followed until the end of his career in Congress.

Fought Labor Bills.

This was opposition to organized labor, which sprang from one of his strongest convictions and made him perhaps the most dangerous opponent that Samuel Gompers and his allies had in the House. Littlefield was a close friend of the late C. W. Post, and community of interests brought him into occasional co-operation with the National Association of Manufacturers. Littlefield had a seat on the Judiciary Committee, and was a firm opponent of the Anti-Injunction bill, the Hepburn amendment to the anti-trust law, and other similar measures.

When the Employers' Liability act passed the House by a vote of 300 to 1, Littlefield was the 1.

One of the measures which he strongly supported while in Congress was the bill for the abolition of the army canteens.

His opposition to labor was so effective that when he was campaigning for re-election in 1906 the labor leaders made a vigorous attack on him, with Samuel Gompers conducting a personal house-to-house canvass. The National Association of Manufacturers gave him some assistance, Martin Mulhall being one of their representatives who worked in his favor, but Littlefield testified later that Mulhall had made an unfavorable impression in the district, and that he had asked to have him withdrawn. The campaign resulted in Littlefield's re-election by a plurality of 1,000 in a district normally Republican by 6,000.

He was still an independent in the days when independents were very few in the House, and when, on March 23, 1908, he announced his resignation in order to resume the practice of law there were many who said that he had given up the fight in discouragement. This was the view taken by most of the labor leaders. His own statement, however, attributed his resignation to the fact that the abandonment of his law parctice necessitated by his public duties had resulted in heavy financial loss, and that he had found it necessary to build up his income. He entered into partnership with his son, Charles W. Littlefield, and with Charles C. Auchincloss, under the firm name of Littlefield & Littlefield, and was engaged in general practice, with offices at 61 Broadway, until his death. His residence was at 250 West Ninety-first Street. He was receiver for the Stock Exchange firm of A. O. Brown & Co. when it failed in the summer of 1908, was Master in the litigation between the States of Virginia and West Virginia, and was administrator of the Pinkney estate. For the last ten years he had been a Director in the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

Mr. Littlefield belonged to the Maine delegation to the Republican National Convention in 1892 and 1896. In the latter year, when he was Chairman of the delegation, he presented the name of Thomas B. Reed for the Presidential nomination.

Son of a Minister.

Mr. Littlefield was born in Lebanon, Me., June 21, 1851, and was the son of the Rev. William H. Littlefield. He was admitted to the bar in 1876 and practiced at Rockland, Me. He belonged to the lower House of the Maine Legislature from 1885 to 1889, being Speaker for the last two years, and was Attorney General of Maine from 1889 to 1893. He is survived by a widow, Clara H. Littlefield, who was the daughter of General William Ayer of Montville, Me.; by a daughter, Caroline, and a son, Charles W. Littlefield, his law partner.

The family will leave tonight with the body for Portland, Me., where the funeral services will be held. The interment will take place on Wednesday at the Acorn Cemetery in that city.

TELL OF JERSEY 'CRACKERS.'

Governor Fielder Pleads for Poor Whites in the Pine Belt.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., May 2.—The conditions under which the people of the Pine Belt, in the southern part of New Jersey, live were vividly portrayed by Governor James Fielder and the Rev. A. W. Bostwick of Vincentown at the morning services of St. Peter's Episcopal Church here today.

Mr. Bostwick spoke of the illiteracy and degeneracy of the people, and also of the struggle they have to make a living. Governor Fielder told of a personal visit he had made to some of the homes in the Pine Belt. He expressed the belief that the greatest need of the inhabitants of this section was education. He laid emphasis on the fact that they were not foreigners, but Americans—Jerseymen, who traced their lineage to some of the refugees of Revolutionary days.

POLICE DEFY PASTORS.

Atlantic City Safety Director Sanctions Sunday Baseball.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 2.—William H. Bartlett, Director of Public Safety, today defied pastors and leaders of the Law Enforcement League, who demanded the suppression of Sunday baseball. Commissioner Bartlett not only failed to prevent the opening of the season this afternoon, but uniformed policemen were present to preserve order. The Philadelphia team won by a score of 8 to 5.

The Law Enforcement League officials refused to comment upon Bartlett's stand for Sunday ball. Last night, however, a church official declared league representatives would go before the May Grand Jury to demand the director's indictment for malfeasance.

No tickets were sold for today's game, a collection being taken to meet expenses. Director Bartlett holds that there was no more harm in teams playing Sunday baseball than for the wealthy hotel men and others to go to Northfield and Sea View to play golf on Sunday.

STRIKERS TO LOSE HOMES.

Twenty-four Summit Families Must Quit Company Houses.

SUMMIT, N. J., May 2.—Although the Arbitration Committee appointed by Mayor Francis H. Bergen is trying to settle the strike of the employes of the Summit Silk Mill Company notice was served last night on twenty-four strikers that they by June 1 must vacate the houses which they occupy, and which are owned by the silk company. Constable John J. Gannon distributed the notices to the heads of the families.

Many of the minor differences between employer and employes have been settled, but the insistence of the mill company heads that the Weavers' Union take in some of the strike breakers has been opposed vigorously by the rank and file of that body.

Convict Dying After Ball Game.

TRENTON, N. J., May 2.—Following an argument between Alonzo Williams, colored, and Benjamin Wooley, two convicts in the convict camp at Rocky Hill, Wooley, convict No. 3,029, is dying in the hospital of the New Jersey State prison here. The convicts played a baseball game at the camp this afternoon, and after retiring to their living quarters an argument was renewed which had started on the baseball field. Williams struck Wooley twice with a baseball bat, fracturing his skull.

Jersey Bond Sale Writ Denied.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., May 2.—It was said here today that Justice Swayze yesterday dismissed the rule to show cause why a writ of certiorari should not issue in connection with the award of $742,000 worth of road bonds by the Bergen County Freeholders to R. M. Grant & Co. of New York at private sale. Judge Swayze ruled that the contestants displayed delay in seeking a writ, the sale having been made on Dec. 14 last and the application on April 12.

IN NEW JERSEY.

BAYONNE.—The health officials have begun measures to keep mosquitos out. The ditches that were dug last year are being recoiled, and other spots where the insects were bred by the million are receiving attention. City Physician John T. Connolly said yesterday he expected the city will enjoy a mosquitoless Summer.

BAYONNE.—A motion will be made before Federal Judge Haight in Newark this morning by counsel for the Directors of the defunct First National Bank of Bayonne to dismiss the bill of complaint, filed by Receiver C. L. Williams in his suit to recover $750,000 from the twenty-five Directors.

BAYONNE.—A strike of carpenters for higher wages is expected to take place today. Building operations may be halted throughout the city.

NEWARK.—Mrs. Maria Nelson, 60 years old, of 378 Eighteenth Avenue, is in the City Hospital with a fractured skull, and William Formosa of 35 Balban Street, Bloomfield, is under arrest. Mrs. Nelson was crossing Warren Street near Myrtle Avenue late last night when she was run down by a horse which Formosa was driving.

NEWARK.—Despondent because of continued illness, Mrs. Elizabeth Street, fifty-four years old, of 759 South Nineteenth Street, committed suicide in the kitchen of her home on Saturday night, by inhaling gas through a tube.

ROSELLE PARK.—The Citizens' League has inaugurated a movement looking to the amalgamation of the boroughs of Roselle and Roselle Park.

BERNARDSVILLE.—Mrs. John F. Dryden, widow of United States Senator Dryden, who was President of the Prudential Insurance Company, is ill at her home here. She returned recently from her Winter home in the South.

BERNARDSVILLE.—Reversing his stand of two years ago, when he openly opposed woman suffrage, the Rev. Howard E. Clarke, pastor of the First Congregational Church, at the evening services today preached a sermon in favor of votes for women, which he said he had been preparing for a year.

NEWTON.—Alleging that her father, J. Ford Shelley, a farmer of Wantage Township, who died on Jan. 13 in St. Joseph's Hospital, Paterson, was not competent and that the will drawn for him on his deathbed was not lucid, Mrs. Margaret Shelley Pepper is contesting the probate of the will. Mr. Shelley was a large land owner.

MILLBURN.—Angus Sinclair of Marion Avenue, in the old Short Hills section of Millburn Township, has left for San Francisco, having been selected by the committee in charge of the machinery exhibit as one of the judges. Mr. Sinclair, who is editor and publisher of The Locomotive Engineering News, was accompanied by his wife.

TRENTON.—Basil Hubbard, 30 years old, living on Enterprise Avenue, a fireman in the Trenton Smelting and Refining Company, is in a critical condition in the McKinley Hospital, as the result of burns received on the head, arms, and chest, when a metal retort overflowed in the plant yesterday.

TRENTON.—Six-year-old Edward Cross of Trenton Junction, died in the Mercer Hospital today. His right lung was punctured yesterday when he was run over by a wagon owned by Charles Williamson.

VISITING MAHARAJA SAYS INDIA IS LOYAL

HIS SON SERVING AT FRONT

Prince, Accompanied by His Spanish Wife, Is on His Way to the Exposition.

After an absence of twenty-two years, the Jagatjit Singh Bahadur, Maharaja of Kapurthala, arrived yesterday from Europe on the Fabre liner Patria to again visit the United States. He was accompanied by the Ranee Prem Kaur and his youngest son, Prince Karamjit Singh. The party traveled with three servants, thirty-five trunks, and twenty-five pieces of small baggage. His secretary explained that the Prince was traveling light, and had not brought any of his Court costumes or the family jewels.

In an interview with a TIMES reporter the Maharaja, who speaks English fluently, said that he had been much impressed by the trip from Quarantine to the pier by the changes in the city's sky line since his visit in 1893. He will remain in New York at the Hotel Ritz, and then go to Buffalo and Chicago on his way to San Francisco to see the fair. He will return through Canada, he said, and then sail from this port for England, about the end of June.

When asked about the reports of revolts in various parts of India among the native troops, he replied:

"There has been some trouble with small sections of troops in isolated districts in India, but when I left Bombay in March the bulk of the people in India and the native army were loyal to the empire. Some of the sons of the noblest families in India are fighting with the British troops in France. The reports of rioting in India have been exaggerated."

From his own principality of Kapurthala he sent three contingents of cavalry and infantry to serve at the Dardanelles. The officers were so eager to go to the war that where there was a vacancy for one Lieutenant the officers in his palace tossed coins for the place, which was won by the youngest, a boy 16 years old.

His third son, Amagit Singh, who is 21 years old, is now with the Indian troops fighting in France, and his other two sons wanted to go, but he refused to permit them leave Kapurthala.

The Maharaja, who is in his forty-third year, is a tall, well-set-up man, with a short beard, turning gray. He wore civilian costume and a soft, brown hat and had no distinctive apparel. On the voyage he talked freely with the other passengers, and was very interested in the war. The Patria stopped especially at Gibraltar to take aboard his party, and on leaving the Maharaja was saluted with eleven guns from the forts.

The Princess, who accompanied him, is a Spanish woman. He married her in Madrid five years ago, after the death of his favorite wife, the Ranee Rinara, who was the mother of Prince Karamjit Singh, and died six years ago. He has three other wives at Kapurthala who are Hindus and lead a strictly secluded life in the Zenana. They never go out except heavily veiled in a carriage with the blinds drawn, and never look on the face of any man except the Prince.

There are 500 servants who live in the two palaces at Kapurthala, and each Princess has her own establishment. His European wife, who is 25 years old and very attractive, accompanies the Maharaja on all his travels.

The State of Kapurthala, over which he rules, has 350,000 inhabitants and contains 640 square miles.

As the Maharaja and his party walked along the pier to get to the automobile waiting at the gate he was stopped by a pier policeman employed by the Fabre Line, who said to him: "Hey, you. Got your doctor's pass?" The Prince of India handed him a pink ticket, and then was allowed to depart.

Croker Gives Montclair Fire Advice.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., May 2.—Former Fire Chief Edward F. Croker of New York, in a letter to Councilman Edward E. Weissenborn, strongly condemns the proposal of the Fire Committee of the Montclair Town Council to abolish the paid fire department and revert to the volunteer system. Mr. Croker said that the main consideration of the Town Aldermen should be to give Montclair citizens the maximum amount of protection regardless of the increased cost, which is advanced as the excuse for reversion to the old system of fire fighting. The maximum efficiency, Mr. Croker contends, can only be obtained by retaining the paid department.

SOUND BEACH GIRL MISSING.

Tired of School, Wants to Earn Money, Miss Fenwick Wrote.

STAMFORD, Conn., May 2.—Miss Lillian Fenwick, 16 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Fenwick of Sound Beach, left her home there last night, and her present whereabouts are unknown. Her parents, in their search for her, have enlisted the aid of police and detectives.

Miss Fenwick, a very pretty brunette, about 5 feet 6 inches tall, slight and with remarkably pretty brown eyes and brown hair, was a third-grade student in the Greenwich High School. She left a note for her parents in their absence from home last night, in which she said that she was tired of going to school; that she was going away to earn money, and that it would be of no use for her father to try to find her. She suggested that curious people could be told that she had entered a hospital training school. The note was dated 8:45 P. M. Her mother found it about 10 P. M.

The search for the girl began immediately. The searchers learned that Miss Fenwick did not leave Sound Beach by railroad. It was found that she drew $200 from a savings bank here Friday, and that she made some purchases for her wardrobe which her parents did not know about at the time.

One sentence in the note Miss Fenwick left puzzled the girl's parents. It was this: "Don't be worried about me, as I am in safe hands." Search is being made by provate detectives in hospital training schools in the metropolitan section tonight for trace of the girl.

Miss Fenwick was active in the work of the Congregational Church at Sound Beach. She kept books for her father after school hours in his store at that place.

$150,000 Loss in Factory Fire.

CAMDEN, N. J., May 2.—Fire in the Michling Brothers Manufacturing Company plant, in Line Street, today caused a loss of about $150,000. The main factory building and the storehouse building were destroyed, with about $50,000 of finished stock. The concern manufactures chemical sodas and phosphates.

DYNAMITE HALL OF BRONX BOROUGH

WRECKS PART OF BUILDING

POLICE HOLD BACK 20,000

The Bronx Borough Hall, which stands on a high plaza in Crotona Park, far back from Tremont and Third Avenues, was dynamited last night and the southeast corner of the building was wrecked. As was the case last Fall when the Bronx County Court House was dynamited no one was seen to leave the place just before the explosion and the police got no clue to the persons who placed the dynamite.

The explosion occurred just a few minutes before 8 o'clock. At 8 o'clock the Borough President, Douglas Mathewson, was to have held his weekly public reception in his offices on the second floor. But he had not reached the building yet and only one woman and five men were in the place. They were knocked over, bruised, and frightened, but not hurt.

Yet the explosion was heard for more than a mile. It shook neighboring houses, shattered windows, and wrecked much of the interior of the Borough Hall. Inspector Owen Egan of the Bureau of Combustibles said the explosion was the worst he ever had seen.

Crowd of 20,000 Alarmed.

Besides Egan, Acting Captain Andrew Wines of the Bronx Detective Bureau and many of his men, Borough President Mathewson, District Attorney Francis Martin, and County Judge Louis Gibbs, part of the crowd of 20,000 which rushed to the hall from all parts of the Bronx, made investigations and speculated on the reason for the explosion. All agreed that it was probably the work of the persons who had dynamited the Court House. None believed the attack was directed at Mr. Mathewson as the dynamite was placed so that his offices escaped the worst damage.

Mr. Mathewson did not name the anarchists or the Industrial Workers of the World, but he suggested that an explosion occasioned so evidently to cause only property damage, could have been planned only by "men dissatisfied with the present régime or law and order. Men who are 'agin Government'."

The dynamite—for Inspector Egan said he was certain there was no bomb, but a bundle of sticks of dynamite—was placed close to a cellar door in the rear of the main building. The Borough Hall consists of two buildings, one behind the other and separated by an automobile passageway, bridged over with pathways between the buildings for all of the three floors. The first building faces west and the cellar entrance is next the southern end of the east wall, facing on the automobile passage way.

Where Dynamite Was Placed.

Three steps lead directly down toward the front of the building. Then there is a turn to the left and three other steps end at a heavy door of three-inch planks giving into a record room. It was on the threshold of this door, a piece of stone some six inches in width and depth, that the dynamite was placed, and after the explosion the door there remained only splinters.

The terrific concussion rocked the big building, which is of brick and stone. It tossed from their feet Miss Catherine Cahill of 60 West 162d Street, who stood in the main hallway, and M. H. Piser and John Crossen, night watchman, who also were in the corridor. It threw William Thompson from his stool in the Marriage License Bureau in the furthest corner of the building, and it overturned Thomas Dolan, attendant to Mr. Mathewson, and John W. S. Bennett, consulting engineer, who were awaiting the Borough President in his office in the southwest corner of the second floor.

Plaster from ceilings and walls fell about them, and over them was showered glass from windows which were shattered throughout the building. Miss Cahill declared that one window was lifted whole from its frame and tossed toward her, breaking only when it dropped to the floor just before it reached her.

Miss Cahill and the men rushed from the building. Quick as they were, they encountered the first of the crowds which had heard the explosion and raced toward the sound. Thousands of persons swarmed up the long flight of 300 steps which lead from Third Avenue to the Plaza. With them were the reserves of the Bathgate Avenue Station under Captain Mead, who had heard the report in the station house, only a block away.

Police Clear Plaza.

The Captain sent a hurry call for reserves from the Simpson Street, Tremont, and Morrisania Stations, and these, under Inspector Walsh, cleared the Plaza and formed lines around the building. Meantime an ambulance and fire apparatus raced up to the Hall. There was nothing for either to do, however.

Investigation of the damage to the building disclosed that the record room, immediately in front of the explosion, had been wrecked. A ragged hole had been torn through the ceiling of this room and the floor of the permit clerk's office of the Bureau of Highways above it. In the upper room the ceiling had fallen. The plaster was gone from the walls. Every window was smashed. A dozen desks had been blown into the air and dropped to break upon spots on the floor far removed from their original positions.

A huge safe, weighing several tons, had been thrown from its place and

WIRELESS NOW OPEN WITH CANAL ZONE

First Daylight and Unrelayed Message from New Government Station Reaches Arlington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Secretary Daniels announced today that the first daylight message from the new naval radio station at Darien, in the Panama Canal Zone, to the navy radio station at Arlington, overlooking Washington from the south bank of the Potomac, was received on Friday, April 30. It was the first official message between these two links in the chain of high-powered radio stations that the navy will have in operation between Washington and the Philippines next Winter. Until this was received, all messages from the Navy Department to the Canal Zone had to be sent at night and be relayed. In the future these messages will be handled day and night via the new Darien station.

The distance from Arlington to the Canal Zone is 2,000 miles. The sending and receiving radius of the new Darien station is 4,000 miles. The opening of direct communication will affect a material saving to the Government in cable tolls, as it is expected that in a short time all official telegrams of the Government to the Canal Zone will be handled by the Arlington-Darien radio route. Captain Bullard said tonight it was not the intention for the present to handle commercial messages over this radio line, because the business of the Government with the vessels of the navy and of the War Department with the Canal Zone would be of sufficient volume for the capacity of the plant.

Radio experts of the navy appear to be much gratified over the success of the Darien station because when it was contracted for the type of equipment selected was practically discredited by a majority of the eminent technical authorities throughout the world. The Navy Department, however, through its own investigations and with the co-operation of the American manufacturers of the apparatus, had come into possession of reassuring data. Scientific development during the last year, the installation of this system at the Tuckerton station in New Jersey, and the success of its installation at Darien has confirmed the decision of the radio experts of the navy to adopt this type of installation for long distance radio telegraphy.

The type of radio installation at the Darien station is the Poulsen arc system, and this station will be the most powerful in the world using exclusively this style of equipment. Since the United States Navy has been in temporary control of the German radio station at Tuckerton, the Poulsen arc system has ben installed at that point and Captain Bullard said tonight that this system was being successfully used there in communicating with Berlin in daylight as well as by night.

Captain Bullard said the Tuckerton station was now sending a large volume of messages daily direct from Tuckerton to the station at Sayville, a suburb of Berlin, a distance of about 4,000 miles, and was also receiving messages from Berlin daily. The station, he said, was handling all the business offered, and the number of words handled between Tuckerton and Berlin each week was now averaging about 10,000.

LEAPS 285 FEET TO DEATH.

C. H. Rounds, Chicago Realty Man, Plunges from Auditorium Tower.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 3.—Charles H. Rounds, a real estate operator, who was formerly wealthy, but had recently met with losses, leaped from the Auditorium tower, this afternoon during a thunderstorm, and plunged down 285 feet, breaking through the steel and glass canopy at the entrance to the Auditorium Theatre, and shattering the entire structure, sixty-fee long.

The body of Rounds struck one of the supporting chains and snapped it like twine. Pedestrians, who had sought refuge from the storm under the canopy, escaped the falling body by dodging into the theatre entrance.

The fact that his body was found beneath the fallen canopy led to reports that he fell and did not jump. The view was advanced that the canopy was struck by lightning and Pounds pinned under the débris.

Pupils in the Berlitz School of Music on the thirteenth floor of the Auditorium Building, however, told of seeing a hat fluttering down just before the crash. L. Thomas of New York, a patron on the sixth floor of the hotel, thought the body passed his window.

STRIKERS REJECT OFFER.

Silk Workers at Summit, N. J., Refuse to Let Non-Union Men Stay.

Special to The New York Times.

SUMMIT, N. J., May 3.—Following the decision of the striking weavers to refuse to accept the proposed terms of settlement offered by the Summit Silk Company, officials, Sheriff George C. Otto doubled the force of Deputies that had been on guard at the silk mills since the beginning of the labor troubles here, more than a month ago. The angry attitude of the strikers has been aggravated by the notice of President Paul Gerli that, beginning the 1st of June, those weavers living in the company's houses on Weaver Street must leave them.

After a five hours' conference today the Citizens' Committee appointed by Mayor Francis H. Bergen to bring about a peaceful settlement of the strike reported that company officials were willing to take the striking weavers back providing the strikebreakers and non-union laborers were allowed to remain at the mill.

At a metting tonight when the proposition of the officials was submitted the strikers greeted it with jeers and hisses. Speakers for the strikers charged the company with insincerity, charging there was not enough work for all of the former employes if strikebreakers were retained.

GEN. GOMEZ MADE PRESIDENT

New Chief Executive of Venezuela Served Under Castro.

CARACAS, Venezuela, May 3.—The National Congress today, by a unanimous ballot, elected General Juan Vicente Gomez President of Venezuela for the term 1915-22.

General Gomez was first Vice President of Venezuela when Cipriano Castro held the Presidential office, and he succeeded to the Presidency after the retirement of Castro in 1909. In April, 1910, he was elected President of Venezuela by Congress, serving out a four year term. He was succeeded by General Bustillos, and became Commander in Chief of the Venezuelan Army.

ROOSEVELT AGAIN ON STAND TODAY

Court, Under New Ruling, Will Let Him Quote Certain Press Attacks on Barnes.

DIG INTO "PRINTING RING"

ADVICE HE GAVE TO HUGHES

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 3.—Both Theodore Roosevelt and William Barnes came near going on the witness stand today in the Barnes-Roosevelt libel trial, which started on its third week this morning in the Supreme Court here. Because officials of the Albany Journal Printing Company, the Barnes concern, testified that they could not produce its private books, John M. Bowers, senior counsel for Mr. Roosevelt, proposed to make Mr. Barnes a witness for his client. Mr. Barnes was about to take his seat in the witness chair when Justice Andrews suggested that it would not be necessary to call him if he would agree to produce the books in court tomorrow. Mr. Barnes agreed.

A few minutes later the Justice announced that he had concluded to reverse himself on a previous ruling and would allow Mr. Bowers to examine the Colonel on matters that he had not been set forth in the pleadings. The Justice said he had decided it would be right for the defense to produce evidence in mitigation if it tended to show an absence of malice on the part of the defendant at the time he uttered the alleged libel, notwithstanding it had not been mentioned in the Colonel's amended answer to the original complaint, and he added: "You may recall any witness and ask any questions you failed to ask because of my previous ruling excluding such testimony."

Mr. Bowers then called upon Mr. Roosevelt to take the stand, but before the Colonel could do so his counsel decided to wait until tomorrow. The Colonel's lawyers considered the new ruling of the court a very important one, as it will let into the record much new evidence on the direct examination and give the Colonel another opportunity to impress the jury in his own convincing and strenuous manner. The Colonel, who had spent an inactive day listening to details about Albany printing contracts, when the Court announced its decision perked up visibly; he seemed delighted at the prospect of getting back on the witness stand.

Two ex-Journalists Heard.

Aside from revelations concerning the Ibany printing which already had been brought out by the Bayne Investigating Committee, both sides scored about evenly on the day's testimony. Mr. Bowers caused a surprise by calling two former Albany correspondents who had had frank talks with Mr. Barnes, and they were allowed to tell about them.

Major Jacob J. Dickinson, who was at Albany for The New York Herald in 1908, testified that Barnes told him that he had induced Senator William J. Grattan to change his mind and cast the deciding vote against Governor Hughes's race track legislation; the evidence corroborated what ex-State eSnator George B. Agnew testified to last week. The witness swore that Barnes, relating a significant conversation he had had with Governor Hughes, todl him that he held party success "paramount in his mind to all other political considerations."

Walter T. Arndt, the other ex-newspaper man, turned out to be a good witness for Barnes. He related how, in 1911, while discussing direct primary legislation with the then Republican State Chairman, Mr. Barnes told him that Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy had sent word that he wanted Barnes's co-operation in his attempt to defeat such legislation, as the Democrats who had kicked over the party traces during the fight over William F. Sheehan, the Tammany candidate for United States, probably would combine with the Republicans and the obnoxious legislation would be passed. The witness said that Barnes informed him that he was not going to help pull any Democratic chestnuts out of the fire for Mr. Murphy. Mr. Barnes's chief counsel, William M. Ivins, laughed outright at the unexpected answer, and Mr. Barnes grinned. The Roosevelt counsel has contended that an alliance existed between Brnes and Murphy to throttle undesirable legislation.

New Platt Letters Ready.

The one other important development of the day was the appearance of Edward T. Platt, son of the late "Easy Boss," with a large package of letters which passed between Senator Platt and Roosevelt or between Platt and Barnes. Their production started a bitter wrangle between Ivins and Bowers, and it had not been settled when the court adjourned for the day.

Mr. Bowers, while anxious to get the Barnes-Platt correspondence into the record, contended that he should be allowed to read to the jury only such letters as he might select. Mr. Ivins insisted that, inasmuch as the entire correspondence had been subpoenaed, it should all go in. Mr. Platt himself asked the Justice to let the entire batch of letters be put in evidence. The Justice reminded Mr. Platt that it was not customary for a witness to inform the court as to his duties. The court allowed representatives of each side to go over the letters and select such ones as were found to be pertinent to the case, and he will rule upon their admission separately.

The letters, it is said, will give many new angles to testimony already produced. Both Mr. Platt and Mr. Barnes, it is said, were exceedingly frank in their epistolary "confidences." The Roosevelt lawyers admitted that some of the letters bore upon the subject of State printing. Some of the most important ones, it is hinted, have been destroyed. Mr. Platt was asked about this point while on the witness stand, and admitted that while some letters were destroyed after his father's death

OPTION ON OLD BALL PARK

P. & S. College and the Hospital Enlarged in Scope to Rival Medical Plants Abroad.

The Trustees of Columbia University, in conjunction with the Presbyterian Hospital, have planned the building of a great medical college and hospital on the site of the old American League Baseball Park, ten acres bounded by 165th Street, 168th Street, Broadway, and Fort Washington Avenue. This became known yesterday after a meeting of the Columbia Trustees.

The plan includes the raising of $7,500,000 by Columbia University within the next five years. The Presbyterian Hospital purposes to erect a large hospital building into which it will move from Madison Avenue and Seventieth Street. The College of Physicians and Surgeons, which is the name of the medical department of Columbia University, will move to the Washington Heights site from its buildings at Fifty-ninth Street and Amsterdam Avenue.

The ability of Columbia and the Presbyterian Hospital to raise the fund necessary for the purpose is the only undecided part of the plan, it was said last night. The authorities of both institutions have committed themselves to the undertaking, and the hospital authorities have already obtained an option on the property. The initial step in Columbia's share of this effort will be made within a few days, when the Trustees will issue a formal announcement of the plan with a prospectus of the proposed college.

College and Hospital Unite.

According to the plan, the Presbyterian Hospital will retain a sufficient part of the tract for the erection of a new and unusually comprehensive chain of buildings. Columbia University will take over the rest of the property and erect on it the buildings of its medical college. The two institutions, the college and hospital, which are closely affiliated now, will thus be brought together physically, which, according to general opinion, will greatly facilitate their related work and permit activities in many directions.

The scope of the proposed united college and hospital is limited only by the extent of the vision of its promoters. If their ideas are carried out the old baseball park will become the greatest centre in America for medical training and research work and for hospital service. The rivaling of such medical centres as are famous in Paris, Vienna, Berlin, and other foreign cities is conceived by the builders of the idea.

The hospital planned will be among the best, if not the very best and most complete institution of its kind in the world, to be equipped for the application of every branch of medical scence and research in every known field of wirk. The new College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University is conceived as a much greater and more comprehensive institution than the present college.

Definite buildings much larger and in greater number than those now occupied by the college have been either planned or sketched, and plots for the erection of other buildings as yet only imagined have been tentatively reserved. Everything conceivable has been made for growth.

Johns Hopkins Indorsement.

When the plan first assumed definite shape, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, wrote of it to Dr. William H. Welch, Professor of Pathology in Johns Hopkins University, who replied as follows:

"A large and far-sighted plan for medical teaching and research outlined in your letter and in the report of the Special Committee presents the most inspiring possibilities for advancement of medical knowledge and practice; or increase in the usefulness and renown of Columbia University and of the Presbyterian Hospital, and for service in promotion of the public welfare.

Notwithstanding its good medical schools and hospitals, New York does not hold the leadership in medical education to which it is entitled by its position, its size, and its importance. The creation of a great centre of medical teaching and research as a part of Columbia University, in co-operation with the Presbyterian Hospital, would present the two institutions foremost rank in medical education and would bring inestimable benefit to the city, the university, and the hospital, and, indeed, to the whole country.

It would be a source of great rejoicing, not only to the friends of Columbia University and of the Presbyterian Hospital, but to all interested in higher medical education and the advancement of medical science and art, to witness the fulfillment of this well-considered, broad plan, looking as it does, with far-sighted vision, beyond the needs of the moment to a future of assured growth and development full of the richest promise and of high usefulness.

Indorsement of the plan has also been given by Dr. Henry Smith Pritchett, President of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, who wrote concerning the undertaking:

To do this New York will not only create a medical institution of the highest rank, but will improve more directly than ever can be done in any other way, the medical conditions throughout the country. I regard the plan as one of the greatest to which a metropolitan university could address itself. There is no other service upon which Columbia could enter that would go further to make of New York a centre of scientific and humanitarian enlightenment.

George L. Rives Hopeful.

George L. Rives, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Columbia University, said last night that he was not in a position to state the methods by which the raising of the $7,500,000 fund would be undertaken, nor would he predict the completion of the fund within any given time, but he heartily outlined the plan.

"We can only say, Mr. Rives added, "that we hope to raise the money and see our plan carried out within five years. A public announcement of as many details as we have decided upon will be issued shortly and efforts to raise the money will begin soon. We can make no definite statements now, except that we hope to be able to carry our plans to completion in every respect."

Indorsements of the plan have come from all quarters since private announcement of it has been made, it was said last night. The vision of New York as the western centre of medical science has been seen by all, it was said, and the actual achievement of the dream is considered by many only a question of time.

BOY MURDERED BY EAST SIDE RIPPER

KILLED LIKE LEONORA COHN

"A Jack-the-Ripper" slashed four-and-a-half-year-old Charles Murray early last evening just as he, or one of his kind, slashed and killed five-year-old Lenora Cohn last March, and left the small boy dead beneath the staircase in the hall of his home, a tenement at 270 First Avenue, near Sixteenth Street. The news spread through the neighborhood for blocks around and threw the entire district into a panic. Mothers, terrified when little Lenora was killed and only now recovering from the shock, ran from their homes and gathered small sons and daughters into the house.

Everywhere for more than a mile in any direction the murder of little Charles was the sole topic of conversation and in First, Second, and Third Avenue homes, and in the homes to the east parents agreed that it was the work of the same man, him who killed Lenora Cohn. Even the police admitted that very likely it was the man they had failed to catch. Inspector Maurot declared the manner of slashing the little victim was identical, and he ordered every available detective on a search immediately.

Within a few hours detectives had found Antonio Cumonella in the Olive Tree Inn, 342 East Twenty-third Street, and had brought him to little Charles's home. In Cumonella's pockets the police found a razor-edged shoemaker's knife, and it was with some such knife, wielded by a strong hand, that Dr. Wolff of Bellevue Hospital said the murder had been committed. But Cumonella had said, even before he was arrested and knew for what he was wanted, that he was a shoemaker and thus he accounted for the knife.

Fitted Description.

Of the hundreds of inmates of nearby lodging houses whom they looked over the detectives picked on Cumonella because he exactly fitted the description given by eight-year-old Mamie Murray, sister of the dead boy, of a man she had seen leaving the tenement a few moments before the body of her brother had been found.

Cumonella was frightened, though the detectives admitted that any one well might be under such circumstances, but when he alighted from the automobile in front of the dead boy's home he crossed himself quickly several times. He plucked up courage when he was led before Mamie, however, and the child, very much excited, said she couldn't tell whether or not he was the man she had seen.

Coroner Feinberg held him, however, on a charge of vagrancy, because of the manner he fitted the description and because there was proof in his pockets that he had frequented the neighborhood of the Murray home. He had two checks which John Ottinger, proprietor of a saloon at 282 First Avenue, in the middle of the block above the Murray home, gives out with drinks. When you get five of them you get a drink free. Ottinger said he had known Cumonella for four years, and Cumonella himself said he was a cousin of Frank Todaro, who has a barber's shop at 286 First Avenue, next to the Murray home. Many persons in the neighborhood recalled the man, and, according to the police, he was regarded generally as peculiar.

The task of examining lodging house inmates was continued after Cumonella's arrest for the description provided by Mamie is the only clue the police have. The little girl was playing on the sidewalk in front of her home just before her brother was killed.

Playing Just Before Death.

The small boy with 5-year-old Frank Damico, who lives on the third floor, had been playing hide and seek in the back yard, and young Damico's parents had called him into the house, because he had cut his head recently, and, playing without a cap, they feared he might take cold in the wound. This was just a little before 7:30 o'clock, and afterward Damico declared he was glad he had called his son in, for he feared it might have been his boy whom the murderer sought. The police pressed him closely, but Damico denied that he had ever received any Black Hand letters or had an enemy he knew of, and at last the police dropped this clue.

It was at 7:30 o'clock that the dead boy was found. Then twelve-year-old Bernard Gaffney's mother sent him to the rear yard with some waste from the table to be deposited in the garbage barrel. On the way he saw little Charlie's body and ran back to his mother. Mrs. Gaffney looked once and then fled screaming through the house, for the slayer had ripped the small boy open with two slashes of a knife, crisscrossed over the stomach.

Nicholas Murray, a plate printer, the boy's father and his mother, rushed down the stairs. The parents were almost prostrated by the sight and sought to lift up the small boy, but the police wouldn't let them touch it until detectives and Coroner Feinberg had arrived. Meantime every one was questioning every one else, and it was disclosed then that only small Mamie had seen the stranger leave the house and that no one else within the walls had heard even a suspicious sound.

Adolph Mesch, a furniture store in one side of the building, and his wife and daughters, Emma and Frances, were seated intheir back room, reading. A thin partition is all that separated them from the hall, and their chairs were within five feet of where the small body was found, yet they heard no sound.

On the other side of the hall Samuel Schwartz has a candy and cigar store and his wife and small children, Annie and Lillie, were in their kitchen, also

SMASH CZAR'S LINE IN WEST GALICIA

CROSS THE RIVER DONAJEC

6,000 Russians and a Large Number of Cannon and Machine Guns Captured.

BERLIN CELEBRATES EVENT

LONDON, Tuesday, May 4.—According to the official statements both of Berlin and Vienna, the German and Austrian arms have achieved a notable victory in West Galacia, smashing the entire Russian centre along a front of many miles, or, as Berlin roughly puts it, across the whole western tip of Galicia, from near the Hungarian border to the point where the River Dunajec joins the Vistula, which is right at the frontier of Poland.

Though the 8,000 prisoners the Teutonic allies say they have taken does not compare with the number some of Field Marshal von Hindenburg's rushes netted him in the north, the achievement, if subsequent reports bear out the Austro-German contentions as to the situation it creates, will, in the opinion of some of the English military writers, seriously affect the whole Russian campaign in the Carpathians, making extremely precarious the position of the Russian troops pressing down the southern slopes toward the plains of Hungary.

The line between the Vistula and the Hungarian frontier was about forty miles east of Cracow. The Austro-Germans have been defending it stubbornly ever since the beginning of the Carpathian fighting.

The general British comment is somewhat reserve pending the Petrograd version of the operations.

In regard to the fighting in the Baltic provinces, rejecting the Russian contention that it is only a sporadic cavalry raid, Berlin wireless comment received [illegible] that the Grodno garrison [illegible] encountered resistance is considered a reflection on the Russian intelligence system.

Berlin celebrated the West Galician victory last night, as is the custom there, though it is admitted that the flags were flown before full details were to hand.

Official Reports of Victory.

BERLIN, May 3.—An important Austrian victory in the eastern campaign is announced in the communication issued today from German Army Headquarters. The statement is made that the Austrians have pierced and broken the entire Russian front in West Galicia. The text of the communication follows:

During further pursuit of the Russians, who were fleeing in the direction of Riga, we yesterday captured four cannon and four machine guns. We also took 1,700 prisoners south of Mitau so that the total number of prisoners was increased to 3,200.

The Russian attacks southeast of Kalwarya failed with heavy losses to the enemy. The Russians were driven back across the Skesinga. They left 330 prisoners in our hands.

Northeast of Skierniewice the Russians also suffered a heavy defeat, in which they lost a great number in killed and 100 men taken prisoners.

In the presence of the Austrian Commander in Chief, Field Marshal Archduke Frederick, and under the leadership of General Colonel von Mackensen, the allied troops yesterday, after bitter fighting, pierced everywhere and crushed the entire Russian front in West Galicia from the neighborhood of the Hungarian frontier to the junction of the Dunajec River with the Vistula.

Such as the enemy as succeeded in escaping are in hasty retreat toward the East, closely pursued by the allied troops. The trophies of the victory cannot yet even be approximately estimated.

The entire City of Berlin is decked with flags. The central telephone stations, the newspapers offices, and hotels were besieged all afternoon and evening by crowds seeking details of the reported success of the Austro-German arms. The excitement began when the authorities received orders to fly the flags "on account of a great victory in the Sarpathians." The details, however, are not yet known here.

Austrians Win in Carpathians, Too.

VIENNA, (via London,) May 3.—The following official statement was issued from Army Headquarters today:

Austro-Hungarian and German forces' great army attacked the fortified positions in West Galicia and repulsed the Russians along the entire front of Malastow, Gorlice, Gromik, and north of these places.

The Russians suffered severe losses. We captured 6,000 Russians and took a great number of cannon and machine guns. Simultaneously we forced our way across the Dunajec River.

On the Carpathian front the Beskid situation has changed. In the wooded Carpathians we gained ground to the east of Beskiouwka. We repulsed several counter attacks with great slaughter, capturing several hundred Russians, and taking three machine guns.

To the north of Osmaloda the enemy was thrown from several heights with heavy losses. The fighting in this region is progressing.

The bulletin adds that on the Russian frontier between the Pruth and the Dniester there is nothing new to report.

DESTROYER RAMMED, FLEES FROM TRAWLER

British Minesweeper and German War Craft Have Brisk Fight; Latter Leaves in Hurry.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROTTERDAM, May 2, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—A story of a duel between a lightly armed minesweeper, the Mauri of Cardiff, and a German destroyer, which was forced to fly to shore for safety after being rammed, is told here by H. Larson, second officer of the Norwegian steamer Larson. He said:

"At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon when we were between the Galloper and North Hinder Lightships two German destroyers came alongside. An officer asked us where we were from, and where bound. I told him from London to Rotterdam, and he told me to go ahead. "Then I saw three British mine-sweepers. The Germans went for them at full speed. Two of the British vessels, which seemed to be faster, went off in one direction with one destroyer after them and the third mine-sweeper dashed off, followed by the other destroyer.

"After a short chase the destroyer, which was overhauling the single trawler, the Mauri, started firing. I do not know whether the Germans were surprised, but I certainly was when I saw the trawler return the fire. They were fine shots, too. Nearly all seemed to hit the German and those that missed were very near.

"They both blazed away as hard as they could for a quarter of an hour. The trawler was too far away for me to see whether she was being hit.

"Then the destroyer came up nearly alongside, and I expected to see the trawler torpedoed, but before the Germans realized it the trawler had put her helm hard over and crashed head on into the destroyer. I saw the bridge of the destroyer fall overboard and five men on it drop into the sea. The destroyer had had enough and to my surprise just turned round and without waiting to pick up any of her men in the sea made off as fast as she could in the direction of Zeebrugge. She never even fired another shot."

SIX MORE VESSELS SUNK BY SUBMARINES

Germans Add Three Norwegian and a Swedish Ship to Their Toll—Scatter Fishing Fleet.

LONDON, May 3.—At least six more cargo vessels, most of them neutrals, are known to have been torpedoed and sunk by German submarines in the last forty-eight hours.

[illegible] from its correspondent at Copenhagen saying that the Swedish steamer Zilida, timber laden, from Helsingborg for Hull, has been torpedoed in the North Sea. She went to the bottom in less than three minutes. The sixteen men and two women on board the vessel barely had time to make their escape in one of the small boats. After cruising about for two hours they were picked up by a Danish schooner and landed at Lemvig, Denmark.

The Norwegian steamer Baldwin was torpedoed and sunk in the North Sea on Sunday. The members of the crew, numbering seventeen men, were allowed to take to their boats. Today they landed at Leith. Nine shots were fired into the Baldwin before she went down.

Another Norwegian steamer, the Laila, a small freighter, was sunk in the North Sea on Friday by a German submarine. Her crew was landed at Copenhagen today by the steamer Anna, which witnessed the sinking, and at the request of the commander of the German submarine took the crew of the Laila aboard.

A third Norwegian steamship, the America, was torpedoed in the North Sea on Saturday. The vessel sank within two hours. The crew of the America, consisting of thirty-nine men, was picked up thirteen hours afterward by the Norwegian mail boat Sterling and was landed at Newcastle today.

The America left Sunderland Saturday morning for Bergen. She was engaged in the transatlantic trade, and sailed from Philadelphia on March 28 on her last trip from the United States.

Trawlers reaching Aberdeen, Scotland, today reported that a German submarine sank two trawlers within fifty miles of Aberdeen on Sunday. The crews of the two vessels were successful in escaping in their small boats and today they came into port.

It would appear as though the submarine ran amuck among the Aberdeen fishing fleet. In addition to sending two to the bottom it chased three other trawlers for twenty miles. A patrol boat was then seen approaching, whereupon the submarine submerged.

AEROPLANE DRIVEN OFF.

Gunfire Stops a German Raider Who Reaches Dover.

LONDON, May 3.—A German aeroplane, coming from the direction of Ostend, scouted over Dover and Folkstone at noon today. It was driven off by gunfire.

It is reported early in the day that a Zeppelin airship was traveling in the direction of England from the island of Vlieland, off the nothern coast of the Netherlands. The airship passed over the island at 10 o'clock in the morning.

BRITISH LABORERS STRIKE.

GAVE NO WARNING TO AMERICAN SHIP

Gulflight Torpedoed Without Being Hailed by Submarine, Says Second Officer.

SAW CRAFT IN THE DISTANCE

She Submerged, Launched a Projectile, and Did Not Reappear.

WEATHER WAS ONLY HAZY

PLYMOUTH, England, Tuesday, May 4.—The steamer Lyonesse last night brought from the Scilly Islands to Penzance thirty-three members of the crew and the body of Captain Alfred Gunther of the American steamer Gulflight, which was torpedoed off the Scilly Islands last Saturday. The chief officer and chief engineer remained with the vessel, which is anchored in Crow Sound, to look after the interests of the steamer's owners.

In an interview at Penzance, Second Officer Paul Bower of the Gulflight, whose home is in Chicago, said:

"When the Gulflight left Port Arthur, Texas, we were followed by a warship of some description, which kept out of sight, but in touch by wireless and warned us not to disclose her position to any one.

"At noon on Saturday we were twenty-five miles west of Scilly. The weather was hazy, but not thick. About two and one-half miles ahead I saw a submarine. I was on watch and notified the Captain and Chief Officer, who also saw the submarine. It remained on the surface for three minutes and then disappeared.

"Twenty-five minutes later we were struck by a torpedo on the starboard side and there was a tremendous shock. The submarine had not reappeared on the surface before discharging the torpedo.

"Previous to this we had been met by two patrol boats, which accompanied us on either side. The boat on our starboard side was so badly shaken by the explosion that her crew imagined that she also had been torpedoed. We immediately lowered the boats and left our ship and were quickly taken on board the patrol boats. But the fog increased and we drifted about all night and did not land at Scilly until 10:30 o'clock Sunday morning."

Captain Died on Patrol Boat.

"At midnight on Saturday, while still on board the patrol boat, Captain Gunther summoned me. I found him in bed, and he said he wanted some one to roll a cigarette for him. He then threw up his arms and fainted. From then until the time of his death, which occurred about 3:30 o'clock Sunday morning, he remained unconscious.

"Captain Gunther's speech was thick and indistinct, but we could distinguish that he wished some one to take care of his wife. The crew had always regarded Captain Gunther as a healthy man, and had never heard him complain.

Second Assistant Engineer Crist of the Gulflight said:

"I was on watch in the engine room when we were torpedoed, and so terrible was the blow that the Gulflight seemed to be tumbling to pieces. She appeared to be lifted high in the air and then to descend rapidly. I told the boys to 'beat it' as quickly as possible and shut the engines down.

"Reaching the deck I found them launching both lifeboats. We all got safetly into them, with the exception of Wireless Operator Short of Chicago and a Spanish seaman, who had dived overboard when they felt the shock. They were drowned."

All the members of the crew of the Gulflight spoke enthusiastically of the crew of the patrol boat Iago, who, they said, did everything possible for them.

PRESIDENT TAKES UP ATTACK ON OIL SHIP

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Official confirmation of the attack on the American oil tank steamer Gulflight off the Scilly Islands on Saturday by a German submarine came to the State Department today in two dispatches from Joseph G. Stephens, the United States Consul at Plymouth, England. The second dispatch said that the vessel had been towed into a Scilly port, and that the cargo apparently was undamaged. Two members of the crew were drowned, the Captain died from heart failure, and thirty-four members of the crew were saved.

President Wilson and Secretary Bryan discussed the Gulflight case at the White House tonight. Afterward Mr. Bryan, while admitting that the case had been considered by the President and himself, declined to make any comment on it or to indicate what were the President's views.

The Government will not take action with regard to the incident on the basis of the information sent by Consul Stephens. It has been determined to ascertain all the circumstances of the attack before a plan of procedure is framed, and to that end inquiries will be sent to James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador in Berlin, and to some official source in England, probably Walter H. Page, the American Ambassador in London.

Secretary Bryan said this afternoon that he thought Consul Stephens's report indicated that it had been based merely on statements reaching Plymouth, and that it had been decided to seek further information as to the details of the torpedoing of the vessel. It was intended, he said, to make inquiries, although up to that time instructions had been cabled to Ambassador Gerard or any American diplomatic or consular officer in England. It is probable that following the course adopted in the case of the American steamer Evelyn in the North Sea by a mine, the naval attaché of the American Embassy in London will be sent to Plymouth and the Scilly Islands to make a personal investigation of the circumstances connected with the attack on the Gulflight.

Consul's Two Reports.

The first cable message to the State Department from Consul Stephens concerning the attack on the Gulflight was received at the department at noon today. It was neither dated nor timed, but the presumption was that it was filed at Plymouth this morning. The text of this dispatch follows:

Plymouth.
Secretary of State, Washington:
American tank steamer Gulflight torpedoed off Scilly, 1st inst. Captain died heart failure; body landed. Two of crew drowned; thirty-four saved. Vessel afloat; patrol boats attempting tow her into Scilly.
STEPHENS.

The second dispatch from the Consul, sent from Plymouth, and also undated and untimed, came about 4 o'clock this afternoon. It follows:

Plymouth.
Secretary of State, Washington:
Gulflight towed into Crow Sound, Scilly, by British patrols. Torpedo struck bluff bow. Vessel down by head. Free board forward about two feet. Forehold full. Cargo apparently undamaged. Blowing gale southeast.
STEPHENS.

The expression "bluff bow" means that the Gulflight had a full or bulging and not a sharp bow, and that she was struck there. The statement that the Gulflight's freeboard is forward about two feet means that the vessel's forward deck is only two feet above the water, showing that she has filled heavily forward.

More Serious Than Frye Case.

Official Washington awoke today to a realization that theer appeared to be a sharp differentiation between the case of the Gulflight and the case of the American sailing ship William P. Frye, which was sunk by the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich last January. In the case of the Frye, the vessel was halted, an officer from the Eitel was sent aboard, her papers were examined, an effort seemed to have been made to throw overboard the cargo of wheat which she was carrying to England. When it became apparent that this process would occupy considerable time, the Captain of the Frye, the members of his family and the crew, were transferred to the Eitel. The Frye was then sent to the bottom.

But in the case of the Gulflight nothing has appeared to indicate that she was boarded and her papers examined. All the information at hand tends to show that even if an attempt was made to ascertain her nationality, she was torpedoed without her oficers and crew being notified to take to the boats. This deduction is drawn from the report that the two members of the crew who lost their lives, jumped overboard and were drowned. The saving of the remaining members of the crew is attributed to the fact that the Gulflight did not sink from the effect of the torpedo explosion. In some quarters it is suggested that Germany may contend that on account of the fog the submarine was unable to ascertain the nationality of the ship.

In all the circumstances the United States Government is confronted with a far graver issue than was presented in the case of the Frye. International law mighty justify the sinking of the vessel of a neutral if she carried contraband of war and it was impossible, for reasons of military exigency, to convoy her or send her with a prize crew to a port of the nation whose warship made the capture. The only redress obtainable would be a money indemnity, which, in the case of the Frye, Germany has already promised.

Regarded as Deliberate Attack.

But the meagre statements concerning the way the Gulflight met her fate give the impression that she was attacked deliberately, with little or no warning, and apparently without any examination of her papers to ascertain the status of her cargo. International law, it s asserted, recognizes no such treatment of a neutral merchant ship, and the fact members of the crew lost their lives makes the case of the Gulflight one of momentous importance in the relations of Germany and the United States. It is easily the most important incident that has arisen between a belligerent nation and the United States since the beginning of the war.

Among the higher officials of the Government strict silence was maintained today with regard to the incident. President Wilson arrived at the White House this morning from Williamstown, Mass., and immediately showed interest in the matter, but no statement was forthcoming from him or anybody authorized to speak for him. Secretary Bryan laid Consul Stephens's reports before the President, and while the Secretary was willing to give the text of the reports he declined to make any comment as to the character of the action likely to be taken by this Government.

That the Government regards the attack on the American vessel as involving important possibilities in the relations between the United States and Germany goes without saying. What course of diplomatic action will be pursued will depend, however, on the circumstances connected with the attack. In some quarters it is believed that the Government will content itself with a protest against the attempted sinking of an American ship and the attendant loss of life, at the same time insisting that the owners and the heirs of those who died in the affair shall be fully compensated. But the opinion prevails generally in well-informed circles in Washington that one of the most serious phases of the Gulflight incident lies in the suspicion that the German Government is making a persistent effort to irritate the United States.

Whether the President and his intimate advisers share this suspicion is not known, but the fact remains that several recent occurrences have produced a feeling that Germany has set out upon a course of showing resentment over the shipment of arms and ammunition from this country to the ports of her enemies.

The action of the German Embassy, under instructions from Berlin, in printing an advertisement in American newspapers last Saturday warning Americans not to take passage on British or other allied vessels is mentioned as the latest case in point.

Hinges on Death of Men.

One of the important questions connected with the attack on the Gulflight is the determination of the circumstances in which two members of the crew lost their lives. Consul Stephens says that two of the crew were drowned and that the remaining thirty-four were saved, but he does not say how the drowning occurred. This is a very important matter. Press dispatches from London and Plymouth have it that the wireless operator and a seaman of the Gulflight jumped overboard and were drowned. Presumably the remainder of the crew remained aboard the vessel and were rescued by the British patrol ships that appeared on the scene and towed the Gulflight to port. Whether this Government will hold that the deaths of the two men were due to the action of the German submarine just as much as if they had been killed by the explosion of the torpedo or drowned through the sinking of the vessel, or will concede that they lost their lives through their own fault in jumping overboard, is something that has not been determined. Upon this point, however, appears to hinge one of the most critical aspects of the case.

Scene of Attack in Doubt.

While the messages from Consul Stephens did not furnish the exact location of the Gulflight when she was torpedoed, it is assumed by the hydrographic and nautical experts here that the attack occurred either south or east of St. Mary's Island, which is one of the Scilly group. The Gulflight was bound for Rouen, France, and naval navigators say the captain of the tank ship, before entering the English Channel, would have headed first for the famous Bishop's Rock light, which is on a rock at the extreme southwest part of the Scilly Islands. The principal isalnds in this group are St. Mary's, which is east of Bishop's Rock light; St. Martin's, in the northern part of the group, and Bryer Island, the largest of the westernmost islands in the group. These islands are twenty-five miles southwest of Land's End, the westernmost point on the mainland of England.

After passing the Bishop's Rock light the captain of the Gulflight probably followed a course along the southern side of the Scilly group, heading for the Lizard light house, on the English coast, and intending to enter the Channel and steer for Rouen. Crow Sound, the place into which the Gulflight was towed by British patrol boats, is in the northeastern part of the Scilly group. It is between St. Mary's and St. Martin's Islands.

Nothing was said in the telegrams from Consul Stephens to show that the Gulflight was torpedoed by a submarine, but the assumption is that the torpedo must have been fired from a submarine, the only kind of German craft that is known to have operated off the west or southwest coast of England since the war began. Submarines with great radius of action are only able to make such a voyage by reason of their invisibility when submerged. When sighted by British craft these submarines may be submerged and escape.

Nor does the American Consul's message indicate whether there was any attempt to exercise the right of visit and search which the United States Government has been steadily insisting upon. Even the Gulflight carried contraband of war, or conditional contraband in the nature of petroleum, which may have been destined for the use of the French Navy, it is the American Government's contention that the officer of the German submarine making the attack was bound by recognized rules of international law to halt the Gulflight, send an officer aboard to examine the ship's papers, to ascertain the nature of the cargo, its destination and to whom consigned, and be certain that the cargo was contraband before destroying the ship.

Even then, it is contended here, the ship should only be sunk as a last resort under the plea of military necessity if the commander of the submarine could not send the prize into a German port, or if the success of his military operations would be endangered by an effort to tow the tank ship into port.

Hit While Crew Was Aboard.

Butif the Gulflight, being a neutral ship, carried no contraband of war, the commander of the submarine would not have a right, according to the American contention, to sink or confiscate the ship or the cargo, and would have been compelled to release the vessel. It is held here that it was the duty of the commander of the vessel attacking the Gulflight, after having first had her boarded and her papers examined, and, after having reached the conclusion that hewould be justified in torpedoing the steamer, to remove all the crew before attmpting to sink her. The interpretation placed on th emessages from Consul Stephens is that the Gulflight was torpedoed while her officers and crew were still on board.

The description of the extent of the damage to the ship and the point hit by the torpedo convinced nautical experts here that nobody could have been injured, except through shock, by the explosion of the torpedo, which struck the bow of the tankship so far forward that it almost missed the vessel entirely. The quarters for the officers and crew were amidships and aft and not near the bow where the torpedo struck.

Experts here believe that the death of the Captain of the vessel leaves not more than three men who will be abl to til a dependable tale as to what happened. These would be the officer of the deck, the man who was at the wheel, and perhaps on eadditional lookout man. These three men would be stationed around the bridge and bow for the handling of the vessel. The lookout would be stationed forward, while the man at the wheel and the officer of the deck would be on the bridge. They will be closely examined in England to ascertain whether they saw any submarine or other warships in the immediate vicinity when the attack was made, or whether the attack was made without warning and without any submarine being sighted.

She Was a Model Ship.

The Gulflight was one of the best tank ships in the transatlantic trade. She was regarded as a model oil ship when launched from the yard of the New York Shipbuilding Company at Camden, N. J., on Aug. 8, 1914. She was designed by George B. Drake of New York City, a naval architect, who has had a great deal of experience with oil ships. She is of the two-deck type, with a raised forecastle, bridge, and poop decks, and has a dead weight capacity of 7,257 tons on 23 feet 6 inches mean draft.

The Gulflight has a continuous expansion trunk between decks, the sides of which are extended by the machinery casing, thus forming a deep girder and stiffening the ship's structure. Outboard of this expansion trunk are wing tanks to be used for light oil in Summer weather. The Gulflight was built on the Isherwood system of longitudinal construction, because this was regarded as particularly adapted to oil ships, and in this case it allowed 230 more tons of cargo to be carried than would have been the case if the Gulflight had been constructed with the ordinary transverse framing.

The cargo capacity of the Gulflight is 2,285,000 gallons of oil, carried in twenty-two tanks. Besides this she has a large cargo hold, as well as smaller spaces, and is fitted with a complete outfit of derrick booms and winches for handling the cargo. The officers' quarters are in the house above the bridge deck amidships. The dining saloon and engineer's quarters are in a house on the poop deck and are reached by a fore and aft bridge from the bridge deck.

The torpedo struck at the opposite end of the ship, near the bow. The Gulflight was fitted to burn oil fuel and her bunkers have a capacity of 176,000 gallons of fuel oil. The cargo pumping arrangements of this model tank ship were very elaborate, consisting of seven very large duplex pumps, so arranged as to work simultaneously, and the cargo may be pumped in or out very rapidly.

TESTING OUR PATIENCE.

London Press Thinks Gulflight Incident Will Cause Trouble.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, May 4.—The London Daily News says: "It is not surprising to learn that the torpedoing of the Gulflight has created a feeling of intense indignation in America. What action will be taken is not yet indicated, but it is clear the provocative policy of Germany toward the United States cannot go much further without serious consequences. There are limits even to the patience of the United States.

"It would seem that Germany is deliberately challenging a rupture. What other construction can be put upon such proceedings as that of the German Embassy in Washington, which advertised in the American press, warning the public if they travel in the Lusitania they do so at their own risk, and followed this up by sending telegrams to passengers telling them the ship was to be torpedoed and advising them to cancel their passages?

"Any more clumsy attempt to bully a great people it would be hard to imagine. Indeed, the best asset of the Allies in the United States throughout the war has been the German Embassy, with its mixture of blunder and bluster."

The Daily Chronicle, commenting on the torpedoing of the Gulflight, quotes a passage from the American note to Germany last February, wherein it was announced that the United States Government would be constrained to hold the German Government to strict accountability should German vessels of war destroy American vessels or the lives of American citizens. The Daily Chronicle adds: "The 'deplorable situation' having now arisen we shall see what 'strict accountability' means. But the Americans will notice that the outrage of which their citizens have been the victims is not an isolated one. It is merely one very small sample of an inhuman atrocity, systematically practiced, by which all neutral States, noncombatants and members of belligerent nations, are alike wickedly threatened. They would do well to consider the practice as well as the xampl of it."

GULFLIGHT CARGO UNDAMAGED

But Water Is in Forehold, Where the Torpedo Struck Her.

LONDON, May 3.—A dispatch to Lloyd's from Scilly says the Gulflight, which is anchored in Crow Sound, has no list, but is down by the bows, so that forward the freeboard is not more than two feet. The forehold is full of water and the propeller blades are eighteen inches above the water.

Apparently the torpedo struck forward, about the bluff of the bow, a foot below the load water line. The cargo apparently has not been damaged.

GULFLIGHT FULLY INSURED.

Owners Will Press No Claim Now Except for Kin of Victims.

PITTSBURGH, May 3.—It is not the purpose of the Gulf Refining Company, whose steamship, the Gulflight, was torpedoed off the Scilly Islands by a German submarine, to press any claim through the United States Government at this time, according to George S. Davidson, President of the company.

"I will be in Washington tomorrow and will call at the State Department," said Mr. Davidson. "Our property was covered by insurance in no way connected with the Government marine insurance. That, of course, will be paid, and the only matter to be taken up with the Government will have to do with relief for the families of Captain Gunter, the wireless operator, and the seaman whose deaths resulted from the attack. There are no more of our ships in that vicinity now, but we are not going out of business because we have suffered this loss."

Mr. Davidson received a cablegram today saying that the Gulflight was in a harbor of the Scilly Islands in charge of the British naval authorities, who would have her towed to a safer harbor. Two of the Gulflight's officers remain on board the ship, and the others of the crew are still at Penzance, where they were landed.

AWAIT GULFLIGHT REPORT.

Owners to Get Complete Statement from the Chief Officer.

James Kennedy, superintendent of the marine department of the Gulf Refining Company, 21 State Street, said yesterday that the legal advisers of the company had brought the attack on the steamship Gulflight to the attention of the State Department, but were waiting for full details from England before taking any decisive action in the matter.

"According to the cablegram received today," he said, "after the Gulflight had anchored in Crow Sound it was found that the damage to her hull was not so extensive as at was first believed. The vessel is afloat and her cargo of oil is intact. I have sent a dispatch to Ralph E. Smith, the first officer, who is now in command of the Gulflight, to send me full particulars of what happened before the torpedo was fired from the submarine. It will make a great difference in the aspect of the case whether the German officer gave warning to Captain Gunter of his intentions, or just steamed up and fired at the ship without giving the crew any time to lower their boats."

"Would the Gulflight have been liable to destruction as carrying contraband?" he was asked.

"Her cargo was only conditionally contraband," Mr. Kennedy replied. "We were simply taking the cargo of oil to Rouen, where it had been purchased by a French firm with whom we had done business before the war. We have no knowledge that the oil was intended for the use of the Allies."

At the office of the International Mercantile Marine it was said that the attack on the Gulflight was no doubt a mistake on the part of the officer in charge of the submarine. They felt that the Germans would not attack the American Line steamships which were making weekly trips between New York and Liverpool with passengers and mails.

The following list of the crew of the Gulflight was given out yesterday by Superintendent Kennedy. It contains the names of Captain Alfred Gunter, who died from shock, and Charles C. Short, the wireless operator, and Eugene Chapanta, a seaman, who were drowned after the ship had been hit:

GUNTER FORESAW DEATH.

Predicted His End Two Years Ago, When His Daughter Died.

Miss Emma Lau, sister-in-law of Captain Alfred Gunter, who died when his ship, the Gulflight was torpedoed, said yesterday that the Captain had frequently predicted that he would die at sea.

"The only child of Captain and Mrs. Gunter, a beautiful girl, died on May 7, 1913," said Miss Lau, "after she was burned Captain Gunter told us he would not survive her two years. His death occurred just six days before the two years would have expired. On numerous other occasions he told us that he did not have long to live and would meet death at sea."

Miss Lau said Miss Gunter would deman a thorough investigation by the United States authorities into the death of her husband.

Ther ewere two other Bayonne men in the crew of the Gulflight, Amuel Anstron, whose wife and two sons live ot 179 Orient Street, and Charles Martin of 10 East Thirty-second Street. Anstron was first assistant engineer and Martin was cook. It was reported that Anstron had been lost, but his wife yesterday received word that he was safe. Martin is in a naval hospital on the Scilly Islands, suffering from burns caused by escaping steam. His wife and four children live in Chicago.

Mrs. Gunter was informed yesterday by officials of the Gulf Refining Company that her husband's body would arrive in Bayonne in about ten days.

SHORT WAS AN EX-SOLDIER.

Wireless Operator of the Gulflight a Resident of Chicago.

CHICAGO, May 3.—Charles C. Short, the wireless operator who is reported to have lost his life when the American steamer Gulflight was torpedoed off the Scilly Islands, was making his first trip as a wireless telegrapher.

He was 22 years of age and made his home with his mother here, a widow whose husband died six years ago in Fostoria, Ohio, and two younger brothers and sisters. He was unmarried. He learned telegraphy while a soldier in the Philippines, and obtained his first job at the key here last Spring when he applied to the Chicago office of the Gulf Oil Refining for work.

On April 10 his mother received a telegram from Port Arthur, Texas, saying that he was sailing.

THE PRESS ON THE GULFLIGHT.

From The New York Evening Post.

Saturday's torpedoing of an American ship by a German submarine, off the Scilly Islands, resulting in the death of the Captain and two or three of the crew, obviously threatens the most serious complication that has yet arisen between the United States and Germany. That our Government will make prompt and emphatic representations to Berlin admits of no doubt. The position already taken by the Administration is one from which it cannot retreat. It plainly notified the German Government that we could not recognize the pretended and patently ineffective blockade of the British Isles. * * *

In essence, the German submarine has committed an act of war upon the United States. If it was a mistake, it cannot be too soon disowned, with whatever excuses or roundabout logic German ingenuity may resort to. If it was in pursuance of a policy deliberately adopted and to be persisted in, the even is sinister and ominous beyond anything that has before happened to disturb the relations of the two countries.

Must Have a Prompt Apology.

[From The New York Evening Sun.]

We do not think the State Department should tolerate in this new and flagrant case any more delay than may be necessary to make sure of the actual facts. Prompt apology and payment of damages should be insisted on. It would seem that the disgrace and punishment of the commander of the submarine should be demanded and pressed.

But, above all things, it is imperative that engagements should be exacted that no more occurrences of this sort shall disgrace Germany's conduct of the war. The recent "warning" to American tourists so insolently printed broadcast through this country gains new meaning and importance from the international crime of which our peaceful ship has been the victim. It is simply intolerable that our citizens and our flag should remain subject to such an insult and menace. The sternest representations must be made to bring Germany to her senses.

Now for "Strict Accountability."

From The New York Evening Telegram.

A other peaceful American trading ship torpedoes by a German submarine and more American lives sacrificed by a nation with which we suppose we are at peace.

Only Saturday night, speaking in Philadelphia, Dr. Dernburg, an unofficial mouthpiece for the Kaiser, said:

"The German Government has at no time disputed the right of the people of the United States to ship or sell arms. * * * It has never protested against the shipment of arms and munitions of war by the people of the United States."

It is hard to make this expresoin justify with the acts of German submarines running amuck and firing on the flag of the United States.

Whether a deliberate attempt to provoke and embroil us or the result of taking a chance that the unfortunate tanker might be sailing under false colors, Germany must be held by Washington to "strict accountability."

REPORTS FRICTION OVER BELGIAN FOOD

Americans and Germans Disagree, It Is Said—200 Barges Halted.

LONDON, Monday, May 3.—A Rotterdam dispatch to The Daily Mail says that as a result of friction between the American Relief Commission and the German authorities in Belgium, 200 barges loaded with food for the Belgians are laid up at Rotterdam.

STILL ASSAILING NORTHCLIFFE

London Chronicle Suggests a Censorship for Editorials.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, May 4.—Pressing the attack upon the Northcliffe newspapers for their criticisms of the Government's conduct of the war, The Daily Chronicle says editorially:

"We gave a long list yesterday of jubilant references in the German press to attacks made by Lord Northcliffe's sensational newspapers, especially The Times, upon the Government and upon the heads of the War Office and the Admiralty. Nothing is more evident, both to students of the German press and to neutrals traveling in Germany, than that these attacks are at the moment one of the chief factors in sustaining the confidence of the enemy, as they also are in spreading doubt and distrust among our allies.

"As to whether attacks of this kind, which are aimed, not at assisting those intrusted with the nation's leadership, but at overthrowing them, can be justified during the crisis of a war for the nation's existence, one may learn something from two examples. One is that of the leaders of the Unionist Party in Parliament, whose party interests Lord Northcliffe's papers profess to promote. The attitude of those leaders has been and is about as unlike that of The Times and its fellows as anything could be. They have aimed at helping the Government, not at discrediting it, and if deeds speak louder than words their deep disapproval of Lord Northcliffe's gramophone campaign cannot be in doubt. The other example is that of the French nation. We look in vain there for any attacks on the French Government or departments like The Times's on our own.

"It is true that the French papers could not behave like The Times if they would, because the French censorship deals with expressions of opinions as well as with news. If Lord Northcliffe's newspapers were issued in French; and in France, a good part of their leading columns would every day, unless they mended their manners, appear in white, the printers' type having been bodily removed by the censor. It is possible that we may yet come to the same system here. From the mere standpoint of national safety there must be a limit to the amount of injury which any unpatriotic newspaper proprietor is permitted to do to the national interest."

Replying to The Daily Mail editorial on the Government's conduct of the war, which was cabled yesterday morning, The Evening Star yesterday published an article in which, after making certain comparative extracts from The Times and The Daily Mail editorials, it said:

"Lord Northcliffe had better realize that he is not going to be allowed to run this war as he ran the South African war, and that he had better choose some other occasion for grinding his own axe."

BRITISH PRISONERS MISSING.

Officer and Two Seamen Believed Lost with German Vessel.

LONDON, May 3.—The British Admiralty, in a statement issued this evening, says that after the naval action in the North Sea on Saturday afternoon, when the British destroyer Recruit and two German torpedo boats were sunk, gallant efforts were made to rescue the German sailors, Lieutenant Henry J. Hartnoll going into the water himself to save a German. In consequence two officers and 44 men out of a total of 50 were picked up.

German prisoners, the Admiralty statement added, said they had sunk a British trawler before being sighted by the British destroyer Laforey, and that they had picked up a two-striped officer—that is, a Lieutenant—and two men.

When asked wha had become of their captives the Germans said the prisoners were below and, as the time was short, it must therefore be concluded that the officer and the two men perished.

SAILINGS FOR WAR ZONE.

Large Cotton Cargo Is Shipped from Galveston.

Special to The New York Times.

GALVESTON, Texas, May 3.—Only one ship sailed from this port today for the war zone. It was the British steamer British Monarch, for Liverpool, with a cargo of 12,262 bales of cotton valued at $613,100 and $1,063 worth of press cloth.

BOSTON, May 3.—The British steamer Verdun left here for Glasgow today, carrying among other cargo 80,000 bushels of wheat, 26,000 bushels of corn and 31,000 bushels of barley.

GERMAN ASSAULTS RESUMED AT YPRES

British Lines Are Being Pounded North and South of the Flanders Town.

SUCCESSFUL, SAYS BERLIN

Paris and London, However, Say Attacks Failed Despite the Use of Deadly Gases.

LONDON, May 3.—The Germans have resumed the offensive on the western front, especially near Ypres. Berlin says the attacks by the Kaiser's forces in Flanders were successful, but the French and English official reports flatly deny it, while charging at the same time that asphyxiating gases were again used by the foe.

Apparently there has been a succession f assaults. The British report tells of ne made on Hill 60 Saturday evening. All the official statements tell of attacks made in the Ypres district on Sunday, and the French report records a repulse of Germans by the British last evening north of Ypres.

The German headquarters bulletin gives this account of the encounters from Flanders to the Vosges:

Yesterday we successfully attacked in Flanders, to the northeast of the Poilcappelle-Ypres road, and took the farms of Fortuin, southeast of St. Julien.

In the Champagne district we inflicted considerable damage on the enemy's positions at Ourchen, Sopain, and Perthes by successful mine explosions.

Between the Meuse and the Moselle there were only artillery duels.

Last night the French made unsuccessful attempts to attack our position on the summit of Hartmannsweilerkopf.

A French flying machine landed yesterday at Hundlingen, to the west of Saargemund, (Lorraine.) Both occupants were taken prisoner.

Says Germans Lost Heavily.

Concerning the attacks by the Germans north and south of Ypres the British War Office statement read:

At 7 P. M. on May 1 the Germans attacked Hill No. 60, southeast of Ypres, and yesterday evening they attacked in the neighborhood of St. Julien. These attacks were both repulsed.

We lost no ground, and we inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy, in spite of the fact that he again used poisonous gases emitted both from tubes in the trenches and from especially manufactured shells.

A German aëroplane yesterday afternoon was chased by one of our machines to within rifle range of our trenches and then brought down by our fire.

The day report of the French said:

The Germans yesterday made two attacks with asphyxiating gases. One was to the north of Ypres, near St. Julien, and the other was to the south of Ypres, near Hill No. 60. Neither one accomplished anything.

The night report said:

There is nothing to report except the repulse of two German attacks last night—one against the British troops to the north of Ypres and the other against the French troops in the Forest of Le Prêtre.

ALLIES LOST 6 MILES BY BIG GERMAN DRIVE

Gas Attack North of Ypres Followed Up by Ten Divisions—Canadians' Loss 6,000.

OTTAWA, May 3.—A statement, supplementary to Saturday's eyewitness story from Sir Max Aitken, the official Canadian recorder, was issued by the Militia Department today. It gives the Canadian casualties in the battle of Langemarck as 5,403 non-commissioned officers and men killed, wounded and missing. Including officers, the casualties number about 6,000.

The statement summarizes the main points of the engagement and mentions the corps and commanding officers who figured in the battle.

The statement covers much the same ground as that given in reports heretofore made public, but adds as one detail that the allies lost six miles of ground when the first attack was made with gas.

"The situation on April 22," the statement says, "appears to have been that the Canadians held the extreme left of the British lines, covering a front of 5,000 yards, or about three miles. To their left were the French, and again to the left of the French were the Belgians. It is understood that there was a main line of trenches, with a supporting line a short distance in the rear. The first brigade was some miles to the rear in reserve. The guns were posted far to the rear. Four heavy Canadian guns, it seems, were some two or three miles in rear of the French lines."

On the afternoon of the 22d, after a terrific artillery bombardment, the Germans projected dense volumes of gas toward the allied lines which, in many cases, proved deadly, and in others disabled soldiers.

This was followed by a German advance of upward of ten devisions and the French and Belgians, over a front of more than five miles, gave way and fell back almost six miles. By the sudden retirement of the French, the heavy Canadian guns which were in the French rear fell into the hands of the Germans. The statement tells how the Canadian left was exposed, of the measures taken to repair this condition as far as possible, and the desperate fighting of the Highlanders, in which the four big guns were retaken from the Germans.

"This was the position up to the forenoon of April 23," the statement continues. "With the Canadian Highlanders extended to double their normal trench front, one-half of it in the open, and assisted by the Tenth Battalion from Southern Alberta, Manitoba, and Saskatchewan, they not only held ten times their own number in check, but they actually retook the guns from the enemy and maintained their position, but the loss, as must have been expected, was appalling.

"However, the Germans had advanced six miles to the rear of the French position and there seemed nothing to prevent their getting in behind the Canadian line. Accordingly another brilliant charge was carried out at some German trenches to the rear of the former French position, under General Mercer, with the first and fourth battalions of the first brigade, supported by the second and third, and the German trenches, temporarily erected, were recaptured, in this movement two British brigades also took part, as well as the remainder of the Canadians.

"Meantime the enemy concentrated several divisions on the rectangle in the Highland brigade, that is the extreme left of their original position. The troops in the trenches were able to hold firm against great odds, but their shattered fragments holding the line, in the open, at right angles to the trnches, were obliged gradually to fall back before vastly superior numbers. Thus, large masses, amounting, it is estimated, to about 60,000 Germans, got in the rear of the Highlanders, thus cutting them off, but they refused to surrender, and the firing was heard far into the night, the Germans being in front, on the left flank, and on the rear. Whether these gallant Highlanders were annihilated or taken prisoners, is not known, but so long as a cartridge remained they fought."

The statement tells of the reinforcements which came up Saturday and Sunday, and how the line of defense was reformed. It concludes:

"The Canadians have suffered severely, but their heroism is unquestioned. Many of them were without food or water for upward of twenty-four hours and some for much longer, but they unflinchingly held their positions."

SAY OFFICERS SHOT AT MEN.

Germans on Lost Torpedo Boats Rescued by British.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

A BRITISH NAVAL PORT, May 3, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—I have received some further details regarding the engagement that ended in the sinking of two German torpedo boats.

The German oficers, I am told, fired on their own men as they jumped overboard. As showing the anxiety of the British sailors it is stated that many of them leaped into the sea to rescue them.

This came as a great surpirse to the Germans and they not slow in expressing their thanks at the treatment they had received. One man who was rescued in a serious condition was taken to the stockhold of the rescuing vessel. Considerable difficulty, however, was experienced in making him understand that it was for his comfort. He feared that it was for an altogether different purpose that he was being taken below. Hhe soon recovered.

INVADERS GUARD ART.

Germany's Conduct in Belgium Defended by von Bode.

The German Information Service in a bulletin recently issued discusses the treatment of works of art by the German military and civil administrations and quotes a statement of Dr. Wilhelm von Bode, Director General of the Royal Museum in Prussia, in "Wueland," the magazine published in the interest of the Red Cross by Bruno Paul.

The statement of Dr. von Bode in part follows:

"The chief consideration of our military and civil administrations is that works of art should be preserved and remain in the country in which they have been produced and for which they have been collected. For this reason not a single work of art has been taken out of Belgium unless it has been done—which seems to have occurred only in isolated cases—by the Belgian Government or the owners.

"The former Directors have been intrusted again by the German Administration with the supervision of public collections. Wherever the political conditions permit, works of art are exhibited and made accessible to the public. This has already been done with the two largest collections, that of the picture gallery and that of the Musee du Cinquantenaire in Brussels. The public can therefore convince itself that every piece is there and is standing in its accustomed place.

"Whenever the churches have in exceptional cases suffered fairly heavy damage the building administration has been given orders to restore them temporarily. This has already been done in most of the large cities.

"In Northern France, where the fight is still raging, similar care of the works of art cannot yet be carried out. Here the military administration is providing for the preservation of the monuments and collections of art, especially in Lille and Valenciennes. A large tapestry in Valenciennes was confiscated on the ground that it was originally Saxon property, because it bore the Saxon coat of arms, but was soon returned to the museum.

"The Church of the Teutonic Order in Frankfort-am-Main demanded that a large altar picture by Piazetta, which was expressly painted for it, should be returned from the museum at Lille, the most valuable provincial museum in France, since it was taken by the French in 1794 and was not returned in 1814 because it could not be found. Since the picture was damaged by a stray shell it was recently sent to Berlin to be repaired. A decision will be made later on about the demands of the Frankfort church.

"In Poland a civil administration has also been established, which will follow the same principles as those which govern in Belgium and northern France. The removal of the treasures of the library and the archives in Lemberg by the Russians might have suggested retaliation—as, for example, the transfer to Germany of the bishop's monument by Veit Stoss in the cathedral of Wloclawek. But the Germans refrained from doing so because Poland and not Russia would have suffered. The same principles will be undoubtedly followed if Warsaw should be occupied."

Niemen, where, according to information received here, consistent successes are being won by the troops of Emperor Nicholas.

The German movement in the Baltic provinces, which is designed to sever communications with Libau, and thus cripple the Russian right wing, is not regarded seriously by the Russians, inasmuch as the flooding of the Niemen entirely separates the Germans from their base and from the other German armies. The two fields of operations, one on each side of the river, are therefore as isolated from each other as though they were a thousand miles apart, although actually they are adjacent.

Russian observers characterize the German advance north of the Niemen as a "comic opera affair," designed to induce the Russians to transfer hurriedly troops to that region.

At points to the southward, particularly Ostrolenka, Serafin, Ednovoritz, and the whole region between the Rivers Skwa and Pissa, the German offensive has assumed a more formidable character. It is marked by intense and prolonged artillery fire. On Friday the Germans fired 30,000 shells in this district. This was followed by infantry battles in which the Germans, after suffering heavy losses, reached the Russian trenches, only to be finally repulsed.

CZAR TALKS TO HIS TROOPS.

His Few Simple Words Stir Army at Review in Odessa.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ODESSA, April 28, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—The Czar has come and gone, and in this, the greatest city of Southern Russia, the ruler of All the Russias met with a magnificent reception. Nicholas II. drove through streets that were lined with troops and cheering multitudes. "Long live the Czar!" "Long live Russia!" were cries which everywhere greeted the imperial ears.

The Czar was in an automobile and attended by a singe officer. He wore a simple service dress, with the khaki-colored blouse of the Russian officer. During his triumphal progress through the streets the Czar, flinging etiquette to the winds, stood up in the auto, with uncovere head, and bowed to the cheering multitude.

I had an excellent place for witnessing the reception and also at the review. While looking at the Ruler of All the Russians one could not help being struck once more by his astonishing likeness to our own King, but the Czar has a little mannerism which our King has not—that of twirling his moustache while engaged in animated conversation.

I had never been so close to the Czar before and was able to observe him narrowly. His slightly bronzed face is full of expression. It betokens energy and virility of a kind one not always associates with the Russian temperment. I had a preconceived idea of a lethargic personality and face lacking in animation and showing no strength of character. I speedily discovered that my cut-and-dried impressions were entirely wrong.

In a quadrangle by the railway station the Czar inspected thetroops. It was no perfunctory ceremony. The Emperor at a brisk pace walked along the entire front of the massed farce, stopping to speak to a General or a private when he had something to say. Meanwhile rolled out the glorious anthem of Russia. But even more expressive was the roar of the soldiers, shouting in unison, "Long live the Czar! Long live our little father!"

Then the Czar made a speech to the officers and men. It was effective to a degree, yet without oratorical embroidery such as the Kaiser would dearly love on a similar occasion. He said:

"Do as your brothers already have done on the battlefields of East Prussia, Galicia, and Bukowina. God will watch over you and Russia will remember you."

A hush fell upon that assembly of fighting men. Here and there a hand stole up to wipe away a furtive tear. Then the silence was broken dramatically. The soldiers gave vent to their enthusiasm and patriotism, and, waving their caps in the air, cried: "Long live the Czar! Long live our little father!"

SHIPS SHELL TURKS WITHOUT RESPITE

LAND FORCES ADVANCING

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOUDROS, Tenedos, May 3, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—Day and night fierce fighting continues in the Dardanelles. The ships of the fleet are working in shifts, and the bombardment is ceaseless. In the words of a naval officer, "We are battering our way through the narrows, and it is bound to be a tough job."

In spite of the Turks' desperate resistance the Allies have made steady progress both on land and sea. Most of the vital points of the enemy's defenses are now strongly invested. Torpedo craft with the utmost daring, often amounting to heroism, have been engaged in the protection of landing parties, and have consequently been subjected to a heavy shrapnel fire.

The Australian and New Zealand troops fought magnificently against a determined and well equipped army of the enemy.

Among the prisoners are Greeks, who were forced to serve and who deserted at the first opportunity.

From Tenedos today I saw a pall of smoke which was estimated to be twenty miles long hanging over the straits.

LONDON, May 3.—Various special dispatches from Mitylene reaching London by way of Athens say that the Allies have occupied Maidos, in the neighborhood of which the Turks have been reported to be concentrating their force. The town is on the Dardanelles, twenty-two miles south of the town of Gallipoli.

The British Admiralty has as yet made no comment on these reports.

PARIS, Tuesday, May 4.—"The Allies' operations against the Dardanelles are developing favorably, according to information reaching here from different sources," says the Athens correspondent of the Havas Agency. "Heavy fighting continues in which the Turks are constantly being worsted. The guns of the fleet lend efficacious aid to the troops. The Allies have occupied several villages, which were in ruins. The Turks, it seems, burn all villages as they retire."

CONSTANTINOPLE, (via Amsterdam and London,) May 3.—The Turkish War Department today gave out the following official statement:

In consequence of the attacks proceeding successfully for us, the enemy has not succeeded in improving his position on the coast of the Gallipoli Peninsula. The fire of our batteries directed against the enemy at Bedd-el-Bahr shows good results.

The statement also says that the French battleship Henri IV. and the British btatleship Vengeance have been damaged by shells from the guns of the Turkish forts, and that the Russian Black Sea fleet made a demonstration for an hour off the Bosporus and then retired rapidly in a northerly direction.

RESUME HOLLAND SERVICE.

Boats Will Begin to Run Today After Ten Days' Stop.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 3.—With the resumption tomorrow of the boat service from England to Holland, which was suspended ten days ago by the Admiralty many travelers, who have been held up here and on the Continent, will be able to get away.

The interruption of the service has interfered with activities of the American Belgian Relief Commission, which wanted to send a dozen more men into Belgium. Among those to sail tomorrow for the relief work is Caspar Whitney, who arrived in London today from New York on the Lusitania. Mr. Whitney expects to stay in Belgium most of the Summer.

The Englishwomen and American women who went to The Hague Peace Congress, are expected to reach here tomorrow.

ITALIAN CHAMBERS TO MEET NEXT WEEK

Cabinet May Seek Their Aid in Deciding Question of Peace or War.

AUSTRIA SPARRING FOR TIME

Sending New Envoy on Special Mission to Rome—Belief in Washington Conflict Is Imminent.

PARIS, May 3.—Advices from Rome say that the Council of Ministers today considered the international political situation and decided that, in view of present conditions affecting Italy, no member of the Cabinet should leave Rome.

ROME, May 2, via Paris, May 3.—The Government has decided, unless there are unforeseen happenings, not to change the plans for reopening Parliament on May 12, the date originally fixed. It is believed the Chamber may offer valuable assistance to the Cabinet in arriving at a decision which now appears to be almost inevitable.

Reliable information from Vienna, the Tribuna says, is to the effect that Count Agenor Goluchowski, former Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, is about to leave for Rome upon a special mission for his Government. It is believed here this announcement presages a renewal of the Central Empires' efforts to prolong the negotiations with Italy.

The Giornale d'Italia, in a special edition tonight, announces that neither King Victor Emmanuel nor the members of the Ministry will be present at the unveiling of the monument to the memory of Garibaldi's Volunteers at Quatro Sant Elena next Wednesday.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, May 3.—The seesaw of "peace" and "war" is so rapid that the man in the street has become thoroughly confused. No one any more pretends to understand what the negotiating States are after.

Some observers now say that Italy, while preparing for war, is engaged in trying to bring about peace, which it is believed will be within an appreciable distance when the Dardanelles are forced. The crushing of Turkey, they say, means the crushing of Austria and the reduction of Germany to powerlessness. Thus Italy, before going to war, is trying to bring about a general understanding—indeed, taking the initiative from the United States. Such a movement, the rumor-mongers say, would be natural in view of the friendly relations which up to the present have existed between Italy and the Allies and between her and the Central Empires.

Such negotiations, however, have little chance of success, which would involve on the one hand the abandonment of her ally by Germany to save herself, which so far she has shown no disposition to do, and on the other hand the making of peace to the advantage of Germany, to which England, France, and Russia are very unlikely to consent.

WASHINGTON EXPECTS WAR.

Arrangements Being Made to Look After Italian Interests.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Such advices as have come to the United States Government through official and unofficial channels within the last few days indicate that Italy's preparations clearly tend to her participation in the war at an early date.

American diplomatists in Europe, some of whom are in touch with the Italian situation, believe the decision is now only a matter of days, and arrangements already are being made to accommodate Italian interests should the emergency arise. It is understood that Italy would ask the American Embassies in Vienna, Berlin, and Constantinople to look after her diplomatic affairs. Italy is now the custodian in the Turkish capital of Russian interests, and Ambassador Morgenthau would have another country's subjects and business to care for besides those of Great Britain and France.

ITALIANS LEAVE AUSTRIA.

Say They Were Insulted and Persecuted—Fortifying the Frontier.

UDINE, Italy, May 3.—Italian Consuls in Austria-Hungary are recommending that all Italians leave the country as soon as possible.

As a result of this warning Italian merchants, manufacturers, and professional men are arriving today at Udine from points in Austria and Hungary. They relate experiences, including insults and persecutions, which are arousing the local feeling.

The refugees describe the great military activity along the frontier. All roadways have been barred with the trunks of heavy trees, and at the same time they have been trenched. The railroads are occupied at night moving trains loaded with troops and heavy guns.

It is impossible to traverse the frontier unless one is provided with a complete set of papers and establishes one's identity. All Italians still in Austria and Hungary are being closely watched by the local police.

WANTS ITALY'S FRIENDSHIP.

Hungarian Premier Hopes for a Permanent Agreement.

Under the caption, "Count Tisza Desires Italy as Austria's Close Friend," the German Information Service issued last night a statement which in part read:

"Lasting unbroken friendship between Austria and Italy was the policy outlined by Count Tisza, President of the Austrian Cabinet, in the course of a long conversation with Count A. Ponzone, correspondent of the Rome Stampa. The substance of Count Tisza's statement is reported in the Pester Lloyd as follows:

"A close and thorough inquiry into the present state and the future of both countries makes it credible that a pacific and amicable settlement may solve the present difficulties, which have been brought about by various conditions. Such a solution is my sincere wish and my confident hope. I also trust and believe that the agreement between the two powers will be honest and lasting."

ITALIANS LOST 600 MEN.

Over 200 Killed and Missing as Result of Fight in Tripoli.

TRIPOLI, (via Paris,) May 3.—The losses of the Italians, commanded by Colonel Miami, who were attacked by a rebel band south of Syrta, Friday, and were forced to retreat, owing to the desertion of irregulars to the rebels, were 18 officers and 200 men killed or missing.

Four hundred men wounded in the engagement have been placed on board a steamer and sent to Syracuse, Sicily.

PARIS, May 3.—A Rome dispatch to the Havas Agency says that the Italian Cabinet today issued a decree placing Tripoli under martial law owing to the attack on Italian troops by rebels near Syrta last week.

Italian Officers Arrive Here.

Among those who arrived yesterday on the Italian liner Europa of the Veloce Line from Genoa and Naples were Captain Salvatore Pace, Royal Italian Cavalry; Lieutenant Mano Procaccini, Royal Italian Cavalry; four carabinieri, two non-commissioned officers, and thirty cavalrymen. The Europa lost a blade of her port propeller on April 11 and stayed in Gibraltar nine days before a new blade was put on.

GERMANIC ARMIES UNITED.

Official Austrian Denial of Friction Because of German Leadership.

The Austro-Hungarian Consulate General issued yesterday an official statement, based, it was stated, on a communication from the Austro-Hungarian Great Headquarters, in which, among other things, the statement, often printed, that dissension exists in the Austro-Hungarian forces as a result of German leadership was branded as false.

"In consideration of the peculiar conditions of this war," the statement reads, "which bring about a hitherto unknown intermixing of allied forces, especially in the case of the central European powers, it often happens that certain troops are under the command of foreign officers or even that entire large contingents of one country's army are placed under the Commander in Chief of the ally's forces."

This is the case, it is added, in Galicia and Poland, where the conditions are such as to "automatically bring about changes which may at any time place any part of the German troops under Austro-Hungarian command, or vice versa.

"This fact," the statement continues, "has often led to misconceptions on the part of foreign countries and has given rise to unfavorable yet entirely unjustified comments upon the Austro-Hungarian Army leaders, although Austria-Hungary herself and Germany have always given due credit to the excellence of the Ausstrian and Hungarian officers of all ranks.

"The following report issued by the Austro-Hungarian Army Headquarters will help to substantiate the above and to throw a true light upon the real conditions by giving a number of facts that will explain the question of leadership, so often misunderstood or misrepresented:

"In no war in which two allies were engaged against a common foe has there been so much harmony of action and so thorough an amalgamation of the allied forces as may be witnessed in the campaign of 1914-15 in the case of the Austro-Hungarian and German Armies.

"Without any consideration of their nationality, German and Austro-Hungarian troops are constantly being mixed according to the requirements of the moment, and there is but one idea at the bottom of this practice—namely, the great aim of the common enemy's defeat.

"This absolute unity in military measures is not confined to the joint operations of the two armies, but manifests itself in the question of the leadership in the eastern theatre of war, where it frequently happens that German troops are fighting under the command of Austrian and Hungarian officers or that Austro-Hungarian troops are placed under the leadership of German officers.

"The way in which each individual, as well as the troops as a whole, both of the German and the Austro-Hungarian Armies, has taken to this situation and is doing his duty courageously and self-sacrificingly, no matter whether the leaders be Germans or Austro-Hungarians, is one of the most remarkable features of the campaign and bears witness to the great spirit which permeates the two allied armies.

"The German and Austro-Hungarian Armies constitute one great war machine and its Generals, officers, and men, supported by the people of both empires, are and feel one in their common determination to win."

WHAT SERBIANS SUFFERED.

Relief Committee Describes Austrian Atrocities in Detail.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—In an account of "Austrian atrocities given out here today by the Serbian Agricultural Relief Committee of America these statements are made:

"'Four cities and forty-one towns and villages have been completely or in part destroyed. They have not been pillaged in the ordinary sense of the word; they have been totally devastated. The Austrians have destroyed everything they could not carry away. They have poisoned the wells, have carried off all money and paper of value in the banks and destroyed the books and registers, and have destroyed all material for teaching in the schools. Churches and monasteries have been the particular object of hatred. The church at Varebitza was turned into a stable. Young girls were dragged into this church and violated upon the holy table.

"'Innumerable assassinations among the civil population were committed. In Zoulkovitch were found masses of men, women, and children with their throats cut or burned alive. In a ravine lay twenty-seven bodies of men. In one house six sisters were executed.

"'At Chabats, in a hotel where a number of inhabitants had been held, all girls over 10 years were violated in the presence of their mothers, who were killed with axes if they attempted to defend their children.

"'Young men and boys were made captives and taken to Austria, in order, the Austrians said, that King Peter should remain without soldiers during a number of years. All the young men of Grouchitch, Pethovitsa, Ribari, and Bela Roka, and twenty boys and young girls from Tsoulkovitch, were carried away.'

Many other allegations of atrocities are made, and the names and homes of the victims are given.

PLANS TO TEACH CRIPPLES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 3.—The war has brought France a new profession, that of teaching cripled soldiers how to make up for the loss of limbs. Its leading exponent, says the Petit Journal, is Leon Cobience of Abbeville, who, fourteen years ago, lost his left arm in a railway accident.

Having trained himself to do with one arm what usually needs two—play the piano, drive a car, &c.—M. Cobience offered his services to the Abbeville hospital for the benefit of the cripples. The results were so satisfactory that special schools for instruction according to the Cobience system will be opened throughout France.

WARNED TO AVOID GERMANY.

Italian Delegates to The Hague Congress Told of Danger There.

THE HAGUE, (via London,) May 3.—Signora Genoni, one of the Italian delegates to the Women's International Congress, which has just come to an end here, today received a letter from Italy advising her not to attempt to return through Germany, owing to the tenseness of the situation.

The writer of this letter referred also to serious pro-war rioting in the last few days in Milan and other cities in Northern Italy.

ATTACK MONTENEGRO AGAIN

Austrians Renew Activity Along the Entire Front.

CETTINJE, (via London,) May 3.—A Montenegrin official statement says:

"The Austrians are showing renewed activity along the entire Montenegrin front, but we have repulsed all their assaults."

Store Relief at Rotterdam.

LONDON, May 3.—The American Commission for Belgian Relief denies the report that barges loaded with the commission's supplies are being held at Rotterdam because of friction with the German authorities. These barges have been diverted, the commission explains, because the warehouses in Belgium hold food for one month ahead. The cargoes now being discharged are to be stored in Rotterdam.

Report on Belgian Atrocities Coming

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 3.—The Bryce commission's report on Belgian atrocities, a forecast of which was given in THE NEW YORK TIMES of Sunday, Feb. 21, has been completed and is now on its way to New York. It will be made public simultaneously in London and Washington within ten days.

BRITAIN POINTS WAY TO OUR SHIPPERS

SHOULD FILE MANIFESTS

And Give Full Information to British Consuls—Advance Information May Prevent Detention.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—The British Embassy issued a statement tonight for the information of American shipping interests, designed to facilitate the trade of the United States with neutral countries. The statement points out a way to guard against interference by allied warships with cargoes not under the ban of Great Britain's blockade Order in Council. The statement has been sent to all British Consuls in the United States, to whom shippers are advised to give notice of the character of cargoes so that the British Government may be advised before ships reach European waters.

The United States does not recognize the right of the Allies to interfere with legitimate commerce between neutrals, or with non-contraband goods, even when ultimately destined to Germany or Austria, and has set forth its views in the lengthy diplomatic exchanges on the subject. In order, however, to prevent as far as possible unnecessary delays and detentions, the foreign trade advisers of the State Department have been holding informal conferences with British Embassy officials in the interest of shippers, and to aid those who desire to conform to the requirements of the Order in Council, they have had printed the re-export embargo lists of the various countries contiguous to the European belligerents.

The Embassy's Statement.

The text of the British Embassy statement follows:

"The British Embassy have received, since the issue of the Order in Council of March 11, numerous applications from shippers of American produce for information and advice on general lines as to the steps which ought to be taken by them to facilitate the quicker expedition and passage of consignments of goods to neutral designations for neutral consumption.

"The British Embassy can give no assurance as to the immunity from visit and search or detention of any particular shipments, but with regard to consignments of non-contraband articles as well as of articles of conditional contraband they are authorized to state that in cases where adequate information is furnished by consignors to show that the goods shipped are neutral property and are to be used exclusively for consumption in neutral countries or by the Allies, this will be taken into consideration by the authorities charged with the execution of the Order in Council.

"This will also apply to shipments of certain descriptions of goods listed as absolute contraband. Such goods are, however, usually subjected to closer scrutiny and control, and in some cases to special arrangements.

Advice for Shippers.

"It would greatly facilitate and expedite the work of clearing vessels bound to neutral ports, whichc call at or are brought into British ports for examination of their papers, if shipping houses or their agents would give British consular officers a duplicate of the final manifest of the vessel immediately on its departure for Europe in order that, if possible, it may be transmitted to the British authorities in London in time for it to be received and considered before the vessel arrives.

"To further accelerate proceedings, manifests and bills of lading should disclose the exact nature of the goods and wherever it is possible the name and full business address of the ultimate consignee as well as the name and address of the consignor.

"Shippers would avoid the use of generic descriptions such as hardware, dry salteries, machinery, &c., which are capable of being employed to conceal the real identity of goods classed as contraband. An exact definition of the specific character of consignments will save delay in their examination. It will also facilitate their identification with the articles comprised in the export embargo—lists of the country to which the goods are consigned. For example, in the case of lubricating oils, it should always be stated whether the oil is vegetable or mineral. The precise nature of animal and vegetable fats and oils should also be indicated. The term 'lard' alone, for instance, is not adequate without some closer definition, because the lists of prohibited exports of certain neutral countries differentiate between various preparations and compounds of this article.

Complete Information Desired.

"It should be clearly understood that the forwarding of goods to a neutral port is not proof that they are destined for neutral consumption. Consignors should always endeavor to procure and exhibit complete information as to the final destination of the goods. Shipments manifested 'to order' or 'in transit,' or with bills of lading addressed to a branch or agency of the consignors, or to commission agents, banks or forwarding houses for account of an unnamed consignee, afford no evidence as to their ultimate destination. Wherever it is practicable, the full name and address of the ultimate consignee should figure in the documents relative to the goods concerned, and marks should so far as possible be addressed to the actual consumers and not to dealers.

"In connection with the establishment of proof of ultimate destination, it may be observed that if goods definitely addressed to a neutral consignee can be clearly identified as being comprised in the export embargo list of the country to which they are consigned, this will be taken into consideration as corroborative evidence of their destinations for neutral consumption. Precision in describing goods will accordingly accelerate comparison with the lists of prohibited exports of neutral countries, and in the case of shipments to Sweden it would further hasten proceedings if the corresponding number of articles in the British tariff were always given in addition to the description of the goods.

"Certificates of final destination issued by the official representatives of the country concerned will be accepted as collateral evidence that the goods are for neutral use.

"In all arrangements which may be made for shipments of goods under the supervision of British Consular authorities, it should be clearly understood that the right of visit and search or detention is not waived, but that the operations of verification which may be called for by the proximity of the countries of destination to Germany is simplified and expedited if Consular supervision has taken place and if full details are furnished.

"With regard to shipments to the Netherlands, wheat and wheat flour and meal destined for consumption in that country should be consigned to the Netherlands Government, and all other articles on the British contraband lists, as well as cocoa, coffee, and tobacco destined for consumption in that country, should be consigned to the Netherlands Overseas Trust.

"Information as to the description of goods included in the British lists of absolute and conditional contraband will be furnished on application to any British Consul.

"The foregoing recommendations are offered for the assistance of shippers, and compliance with them will materially hasten the expedition and passage of cargoes in cases where there is no further information at the disposal of the authorities of a nature to throw doubt on the neutral character of the goods or their neutral destination."

ENGLAND ANGERS PACKERS.

Shipments Worth Millions Still Await Prize Court's Decision.

LONDON, April 20, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—With millions of dollars' worth of provisions tied up by the British Admiralty and virtually no opportunity to ship foodstuffs to Norway, Denmark, and Sweden, European representatives of American packers have lost all patience with what they call the dilatory tactics of English officials, and no longer are disposed to accept in good faith the promises of the British Foreign Office and Admiralty that immediate steps will be taken to facilitate neutral trade with neutral countries.

The refusal of Sir Samuel Evans, Judge of the Prize Court, to grant immediate trial in the cases of the Norwegian ships Alfred Nobel, Björnstjerne Björnson, Kim, and Fridland, which were seized at Kirkwall in November, was the worst blow which neutral ships and shipping have had so far. The hearing was fixed for June 7, on the request of the counsel for the Crown, who pleaded for more time for investigation.

All four of these Norwegian ships carry large quantities of American goods, chiefly packers' products. The wheat which was on these ships has been taken over by the English Government and paid for. The same is true of the copper, but the packing-house products have been detained indefinitely in spite of efforts to have them released.

In addition to these four ships twelve others which carried packers' products have been thrown into the Prize Court. These are the Arkansas, Antilla, Frogner, Elsa, Grekland, Maracas, New Sweden, Kjorsford, Balta, Seguranca, Taurus, and Stavn. The goods on these ships have been held pending investigation.

Alfred R. Urion of Chicago, the legal representative of the Chicago packers, who has been in London since January in an effort to effect the delivery of packing products to neutral countries, has been in constant communication with Ambassador Page, Consul General Skinner, and the commission the English Government has created to deal with contraband. In discussing the situation Mr. Urion said:

"Prize Court authorities have definitely refused to release our goods except upon the consignors' undertaking to sell the goods in Great Britain and to give English bail in the full value of the seized cargoes. The first of these conditions is impossible, because most of the goods have been packed for Continental markets and are unsalable here. The suggestion that American packers give English bail for their own goods is unreasonable."

It is known generally in London that a compromise has been agreed upon with American copper interests by which a limited amount of copper may be sent regularly to European neutrals. Mr. Urion wonders why American meat should be treated with less consideration than American copper or wheat, or than English coal. He believes wheat, copper, and provisions should receive similar treatment.

BRITAIN'S DUTY TO BELGIUM.

Asking for Funds, Galsworthy Says It Has Been Neglected.

LONDON, May 3.—In the matter of financial relief for Belgium, Great Britain has not done her duty, according to John Galsworthy, the novelist, who is issuing an appeal for contributions on behalf of the newly organized British National Committee for Belgian Relief.

After citing how Belgium stood to her guns, Mr. Galsworthy says:

"This will also apply to shipments of certain descriptions of goods listed as absolute contraband. Such goods are, however, usually subjected to closer scrutiny and control, and in some cases to special arrangements.

"In return what is Great Britain doing? Spending money and blood like water to drive the Germans out of Belgium? Yes, but let us be honest. We should have had to do that in any case for our own interest. We are not thereby discharging debts of gratitude, justice and humanity."

Mr. Galsworthy adds that it is true that England is harboring 200,000 Belgians, but that this is not enough for her to do. Money, he says, has poured in from the United States, Canada and Australia for the Belgians, "but from ourselves there has been practically nothing given." As the funds of the American Commission for Relief in Belgium are now failing fast, Mr. Galsworthy argues that it is the duty of Great Britain to make the deficit good.

BEER INTERESTS WILL FIGHT

Adopt Resolutions Condemning Lloyd George's Policy.

LONDON, May 3.—The Allied Brewery Trades Association, composed of those trades which supply machinery and other materials and supplies to brewers, adopted resolutions at a meeting here today bitterly condemning the plan of David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, for restricting the liquor trade.

The resolutions ay that Mr. Lloyd George's plan is assigned to satisfy only the extreme prohibition faction, and "has none but political objects, against which we will protest with every means in our power."

All the retail liquor dealers in London, through their trade organization, have united in a protest against the proposed increased taxation on spirits, wines and beers. They assert that since the war began drunkenness had decreased in London, and that "it would be an act of the grossest injustice to penalize its millions of inhabitants because in some distant parts of the country the conduct of a few workers is complained of."

FAVORS CONSCRIPTION.

Lord Derby Wants Services of Men Under 55 at State's Disposal.

LIVERPOOL, May 3.—Lord Derby, whose opinion carries a degree of weight in England on account of his long connection with Governmental and military affairs, gave an indication, while addressing a recruiting meeting here today, that he was in favor of conscription.

"I want to see the services of every man in this country under 55 years at the disposal of the State, to be used as the State may think best," he said. "I believe that if the men were told they had to go, nine-tenths of them would go smilingly."

PLEAD FOR "WAR BABIES."

Newark Women Urge English to Legitimatize Them.

With little discussion, a resolution was adopted yesterday at the annual meeting of the Newark section of the Council of Jewish Women, asking the women of England to sanction the effort to legitimatise the offspring of unmarried women. The resolution was offered by Mrs. Nathan Kussy, and read in part as follows:

Resolved, That we transmit to the women of England the recommendation that they endeavor to secure for illegitimate children born during the present war to within a reasonable time after its termination, the same legal rights as are granted to children born in wedlock, and that efforts be made to safeguard their health and safety, the needs of the mothers who have been made victims of the war, and that they be pensioned during the infancy of the child or children, who cannot inherit property of the father as legitimate children can.

Before the resolution was adopted Mrs. Nathan Weinberg, President of the Newark Council, urged the women not to take any action unless they were sure that the conditions of the women in Europe were as represented. Mrs. Kussey declared that she had been reliably informed that conditions were actually worse than represented in this country.

GERMANY'S AGENTS SIZE UP THE VOTE

Editors of German Papers Canvassed on Sentiment to the Administration

AND BALLOTS THEY CONTROL

All to be Published in "Fatherland" Anonymously if the Respondents Prefer It That Way.

A new move on the part of the German propaganda in this country was disclosed yesterday. From the offices of The Fatherland a circular letter has been sent out to editors of German publications throughout the country, asking them to reply to a series of question, framed to bring out their opinion of the policy of the Wilson Administration toward Germany and the effect this will have upon the German-American vote in the next election. What these opinions are has been already pretty clearly indicated in the publications in question.

George Sylvester Viereck, editor of Fatherland, said last night that the letters were mailed about ten days ago, upon his own initiative. The purpose of the questions, Mr. Viereck said, was to obtain exact information as to the opinion of Germans in various parts of the country. It was designed to publish the answers in the next number of his paper.

Mr. Viereck asked in the letters, in substance, the following questions: Did you support Wilson in 1912? Are you now ready to support Wilson in 1916? Has the support of the German-American citizens of your section of the country been affected by the policy of the Wilson Administration in allowing the shipment of arms to the Allies? Has the sentiment in your locality toward Mr. Wilson suffered a change? What is the proportion of votes which the Germans of your section control?

Mr. Viereck also invited comments on the situation in general. The answers, he promised should appear anonymously save in those cases where the writers wished their names to appear. The information was to be confidential in the main, but was to represent "a canvass of German-American opinion in the United States."

Mr. Viereck said that, up to the present, he had received about 200 answers, but that he expected many more within the coming week.

GIFT OF AMBULANCE CARS.

Three Trains for Wounded from Germany's Friends in This Country.

A gift of three ambulance trains, each consisting of a motor car with two cars attached, has been received by the military authorities at Frankfurt-on-Main, Germany, from "Friends of Germany in the United States of America." The announcement of the gift is made in The Franfurter Zeitung of April 15, just received here, which adds that the gift is the result of subscriptions started by a Mrs. Taylor, an American woman then stopping in Frankfurt, who was present on the occasion of the presentation.

The cars were received by General von Gall and Major Gen. de Graaf of the Frankfurt General Commando, who expressed the thanks of the German Government to the donors. One train is to be used by General von Hindenburg's armies, one by the army of the German Crown Prince, and the third for the Eighteenth Army Corps, which hails from the Frankfurt district.

The trains, decked with German and American flags, were paraded through the streets of the city and then sent to the fronts. Each train is equipped with a splendid ambulance equipment and can accommodate seventeen lightly wounded or ten severely wounded soldiers.

KAISER VISITED ANTWERP

But Local Newspapers Were Forbidden to Tell of His Presence.

LONDON, May 3.—Telegraphing from Amsterdam, the correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company says that Emperor William and Prince Henry of Prussia, his brother, were at Antwerp at the end of last week and inspected the harbor fortifications and the submarine yards, subsequently returning to Luxemburg.

The local newspapers were forbidden to mention this visit until such time as the Emperor was back in Luxemburg. The few persons who recognized his Majesty say he looked well, but aged.

REPROACHES ENGLISH LABOR

Not Doing Share of War's Work, Belgian Minister Vandervelde Says.

The German Social Democratic organ, Vorwärts, in its issue of April 7, publishes an open letter addressed by the Belgian Minister of State, Emile Vandervelde, to the English Labor Party, expressing regret and disappointment because, as he says, a great part of the British laboring class seems to underestimate the importance of the present war and is not doing all that Belgium had a right to expect of them. The letter follows in part:

"Like all the world, I have read two letters addressed by our comrade Hyndmann to M. Georges Clemenceau. (The letters attacked the Independent Labor Party in England.) I cannot deny that the attitude of certain elements of the English working class since the London Conference partly explains, if it does not justify, the bad mood of Hyndmann. Belgians and Frenchmen, who, at this moment, are suffering the hardest blow of the German attack, must recognize with pain and amazement that the present war in the eyes of a very large part of the organized workers of Great Britain seems to have little more importance than a colonial war. At many places the workingmen are behaving precisely as if England were not involved, even as are we ourselves, in a struggle for existence.

"Some of them declare a strike. Others refuse to work overtime. I myself receive reports that in certain arms and ammunition factories where Belgians and Englishmen work together the Englishmen advise the Belgians not to work at the utmost of their capacity in order to prevent a too intensive exploitation of their working forces.

"Such an attitude may be justified in times of peace. If it continues at the present time it will be plainly because all English workingmen do not alike realize the seriousness of the situation.

"But we may ask whether there is not something else at the bottom of this, and if there is not present in some a malevolent intention; whether a propaganda for a peace in spite of everything is not in part responsible for a crisis which Lord Kitchener laments, and which Mr. Lloyd George reveals in a powerful accusation."

Commenting on this letter, the Vorwärts wonders that Vandervelde, who, shortly after the war started, praised the attitude of opposition taken by the German Social Democracy, should now presume to deny English workingmen and Socialists the right to arrange their tactics as they think best. It warns him that the English Labor Party does not like to be "schoolmastered."

OUR DIPLOMATS REPORT ON GERMAN REPRISALS

LONDON, May 3.—Ambassador Page informed the Foreign Office today that the treatment of the crews of captured German submarines in England and of the British officers upon whom retaliatory measures were visited by Germany was virtually the same, with the exception that some of the British prisoners were being held in solitary confinement. These facts were brought out in an investigation through the agency of the American Government, under an agreement between Great Britain and Germany.

E. G. Lowry, an attaché of the American Embassy at London, inspected the barracks at Chatham, where the German submarine crews are confined without the customary honors of war, owing to the British contention that their activities in attacking unarmed ships caused them to forfeit such honors. Mr. Lowry found that these prisoners were permitted to take their meals together, to receive tobacco and delicacies, and to have recreation. They are separated only at night. Their status is the same as that of other war prisoners, Mr. Lowry said, except in name.

The German detention camp at Magdeburg, where the British prisoners are confined, was inspected by Ambassador Gerard. It is understood that the Ambassador learned that these prisoners were permitted to be together only at meals, being kept in solitary confinement at other times. This is said to be due to a misunderstanding of the treatment by the British of the German submarine crews.

FRANCE TO STAY MILITARY.

Echo de Paris So Concludes, Whatever the Result of War.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 3.—That France must remain a military nation, whatever happens, is the conclusion reached by the Echo de Paris in an editorial on "The France of Tomorrow."

The writer examines the alternatives of Germany being completely beaten or the result being drawn. He refused to consider the possibility of a German victory.

If Germany is beaten, she is certain, he says, to try to get revenge. If the result is a deadlock, a new conflict is probable before long.

The Echo's view represents general opinion here.

The sight of hundreds of youths exercising in the Tuileries Gardens is a sign of France's new spirit, which includes sport and all other means to strengthen the nation's young men for future military service.

APOLOGY TO R. W. GOELET.

French Senate Journal's Amends for Charges That He Was a Bavarian.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 3.—Robert W. Goelet of the American colony here has just been formally exonerated by the Senate's official journal from the charges, published in the April 2 issue of the journal, based on accusations made by Senator Gaudin de Villaine, that Mr. Goelet was really a Bavarian officed and joined his regiment at the outbreak of the war.

He further alleged that Mr. Goelet had received the Kaiser at Sandricourt, a chateau in the Department of Seine et Oise, which he bought five years ago at a cost of $1,000,000. Senator Villaine demanded the sequestration of the Sandricourt property. The apology is complete and recognizes that Mr. Goelet is an American, and element of French origin, the family having emigrated after the Edict of Nantes.

DERNBURG DENIES ROOSEVELT STORY

ANSWERS HOME CRITICISMS

Berlin Papers That Objected to His Portland Peace Terms Not Representative, Doctor Says.

Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, former German Minister of the Colonies, issued two signed statements yesterday. One referred to that little story told by Lucien L. Bonheur, ex-Chairman of the Progressive Campaign Committee of Nassau County, in which Mr. Bonheur, giving the Colonel as his authority, said that Dr. Dernburg had told Colonel Roosevelt that among the reasons why he should be for Germany in the present struggle was because the Kaiser had invited him to dinner, to which the Colonel replied, "So did King George." Here is Dr. Dernburg's statement:

Mr. L. L. Bonheur quotes in his yesterday's speech a conversation between Colonel Roosevelt and myself on the Colonel's authority. In this conversation I am reported to have asked for the sympathy of Colonel Roosevelt for Germany because of his having been invited to dinner by the German Emperor while in Germany, and the Colonel is said to have retorted that he also had been invited by the King.

Does any American think that Colonel Roosevelt would have thought of entering into a discussion showing that his political opinions were at all influenced by having been invited to dine with Kings?—but if the report was correct, it would show that he actually entered into the argument.

But I can set the mind of my readers at rest by most emphatically declaring that the only conversation I ever had with the Colonel since my arrival in America, and at which a third person was present, did not contain anything of the kind. So, if the Colonel told Mr. Bonheur anything of the sort, which I do not believe at all, he must have told him a nice little fib. DR. DERNBURG.

Dr. Dernburg's other statement was issued under the caption "Dr. Dernburg and the German Press," and was in reply to the comments of certain German newspapers on Dr. Dernburg's letter on possible peace terms read in Portland, Me., two weeks ago last Saturday night. The Berlin Post characterized the letter as "full and final proof of Dr. Dernburg's incapacity as a statesman," adding that the letter amounted to "a fine piece of political foolery." Count Ernst Reventlow, in the Deutsche Tageszeitung, said Dr. Dernburg should at once furnish a correction of his statements. Dr. Dernburg's statement follows:

A Reuter dispatch has been reproduced in this morning's papers giving extracts from Count Reventlow's article in the Deutsche Tageszeitung and in Die Post. Although it is known to the American press, it may not be known to the general public that the two papers cited represent a somewhat extreme conservative faction of no very large following. Whoever wants to find out about the German opinion at large must consult such papers as the Frankfurter Zeitung, Kölnische Zeitung, Berliner Tageblatt, Lokal Anzeiger and the Vossische Zeitung. Unhappily the cutting off of the cables prevents the American public from getting any other news than those dished up by the British censors.

I think it well to draw the attention of the public in this respect to the article by Professor Eliot in THE NEW YORK TIMES as regards the proper peace terms and to the echo which our English friends try to make the American public believe it brings. DR. DERNBURG.

Dr. Dernburg did not issue any statement with reference to the sinking of the American tank steamship Gulflight, off the Scilly Islands, by a German submarine. It was said, however, that Dr. Dernburg was not convinced that the torpedoing was the act of a German submarine.

OFFERS PLAN TODAY FOR REAL HOME RULE

UP-STATE MAY OPPOSE

Short Ballot Fight Is Near—Chairman Tanner Urges Consolidation of Departments.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 3.—Complete home rule for New York City will be provided in a proposed amendment to the Constitution which will be offered by Senator Robert F. Wagner when the Constitutional Convention resumes its work at noon tomorrow. The proposed amendment will give municipalities the right to organize along their own lines, subject only to the general laws of the State and the State Constitution. It will provide that existing laws affecting a city may be repealed through a referendum by a majority of the voters of any city.

The amendment prohibits the Legislature from passing special or local bills affecting any one municipality and limits the powers of the Legislature with regard to municipal measures to the enactment of laws which will affect all cities alike. It forbids the Legislature from providing for the filling of any municipal office now existing or to be created hereafter, except by election or through appointment by some municipal officer in whom such authority is vested through the Charter.

The amendment will guarantee complete home rule to New York City," said Senator Wagner in discussing his proposal. "All now agree that the greatest possible opportunity for self-government should be given to the cities of the State and that the power of the Legislature to enact general laws in relation to cities should be restricted.

"In New York City complaint is made that efficiency and economy in administering the city's affairs are minimized because the city has not complete control of its own affairs, but is subject in a large degree to legislative dictation, and further because expenditures are forced upon it by mandatory legislation, so that the tax rate in New York City has assumed enormous proportions. My amendment is offered to remedy the conditions complained of. It will insure the greatest possible measure of home rule.

"As all parties have practically agreed to support such an amendment I do not expect that its adoption by the convention will meet with serious objection. No well-founded objection exists. The platforms of the various parties have for years advocated the reform, and the sentiment of the entire City of New York, comprising over one-half of the population of the State, is almost unanimous in its favor. The wishes of the people of the City of New York, I am sure, will not be disregarded by the delegates to the present Constitutional Convention."

Despite the views of Senator Wagner it is predicted that the amendment will encounter the opposition of up-State Republicans.

It is likely that the short-ballot fight will begin this week in the convention. Frederick C. Tanner, who is Chairman of the Short Ballot Committee, said tonight that his experience as State Chairman had convinced him that there was a great need of simplifying the machinery of government. In his opinion, departments with overlapping functions should be consolidated. Instead of 169 boards and bureaus, Mr. Tanner believes there should be a grouping of all the activities of the State under about a dozen responsible heads, with the result that many of the present departments would be converted into bureaus.

"As State Chairman I have been asked to indorse men for places I never knew existed in departments I never had heard of," said Mr. Tanner. "There can be no real economy and real efficiency in the Stateadministration until there has been a general consolidation and co-ordination of administrative functions."

The Governor and the Board of Regents will give a reception to the Constitutional Convention delegates in the rotunda of the new Educational Building tomorrow night. The Judges of the Court of Appeals, the members of the Legislature, the elective State officials and department heads have been invited to attend.

Invitations have also been sent to all the survivors, numbering a score, of the last Constitutional Convention, which was held in 1894. It was announced tonight that the two sole surviving delegates to the Constitutional Convention held in 1867 would be present. They are Smith M. Weed of Plattsburg, the veteran Democratic leader of Northern New York, and Charles Andrews of Syracuse, formerly Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals.

MINISTERS HEAR WOMEN.

Baptists Open Conference Doors to Suffrage Advocates.

Two hundred Baptist ministers of this city, Yonkers, Mount Vernon, and other nearby places opened their conference in the Madison Avenue Baptist church to the women yesterday morning, and after the first half hour of business gave all their time to listening to suffrage arguments. Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw and Mrs. Katherine Devereux Blake were the women speakers, but the ministers themselves had much to say in favor of suffrage.

Mrs. Rossiter Johnson, an ardent anti-suffragist, got up from the audience to say that if suffrage was granted to the woman it would destroy the home. Mrs. Laidlaw rose to answer, but the Secretary of the convention was the first on his feet.

"My mother was a voter," he said with great feeling, and described her in her later years as a beautiful, white-capped old woman. "From the baking of bread to the rocking of the cradle, she was always in her place, and the companion of her husband and the guide of her son." He and his mother had always taken the same side in political affairs, he told the ministers, and he believed that the woman took the best side and that the father had made many more mistakes in politics.

To a minister who began in complimentary phrase: "The ladies who have entertained us so well this morning," Mrs. Laidlaw said sharply:

"We did not come here to entertain you. We came to talk on a serious matter of universal democracy."

An anti-suffragist is to be heard next Monday morning when Miss Alice Hill Chittenden, State Anti-suffrage President, will speak to the ministers.

GIRL IN TROUSERS SEEKS OPERA FAME

SHE HAS MUSICAL TALENT

Disappointed by Singer Who Promised Aid, She Changes Clothes to Earn Money Better.

The dream of success on the operatic stage that brought 17-year-old Myra Whiting from Baltimore to New York in a boy's clothes ended before it had really got started early yesterday morning, when the girl, dressed in a blue serge suit with a light cap sitting jauntily on her close-cropped yellow hair, approached Patrolman Skelly of the Greenwich Street Station and asked him to direct her to a hotel. A boy apparently little older than the girl was waiting in the background.

Skelly took a look at the girl's attire and asked her why she was wearing it. As her answers didn't satisfy him in all points, he arrested her and took her to Police Headquarters. Her companion, who said he was Wilbur McKenny, 19 years old, of 2,600 West Fairmont Street, Baltimore, was taken along on the charge of disorderly conduct.

The police asked the girl how she had come to sacrifice her hair and her skirts, and she told them that for some time past she had been ambitious to become an opera singer, and was to have commenced her studies in a New York conservatory last Fall, but her father, who is a machinist living at 1,818 Mosher Street, Baltimore, was taken ill shortly before she was to have come to New York, and when her mother also became an invalid the money that was to have paid for the girl's education had to go for medicine and medical care.

Myra still had hopes, however, for she had a friend in Washington, Miss Louise Rochon of 3,303 Thirteenth Street, who was four years older and had a good edal of money. Miss Rochon, who is a singer herself, took an interest in her friend's troubles and promised that she would furnish the money for her education. So on Saturday afternoon the girl left home for Washington, where she was to meet Miss Roohon and come with her to New York to get started.

McKenny was also on the train. The two had frequently sung together at entertainments, and they found it quite a coincidence that they were both on their way to the big city to get started at the same time. McKenny was coming up to work as an automobile demonstrator, but he was in sympathy with the girl's artistic ambitions and went with her to see Miss Rochon.

They found that for some reason Miss Rochon had changed her mind. She couldn't come on to New York with them at this time, and she didn't have the money ready to pay for Myra's education. So Myra and young McKenny left the house in despair, but the girl's spirits rose after a little. If she couldn't get the money for an operatic education, she thought she could surely get a job as a moving-picture actress or on the stage.

Then it occurred to her that if she would put on a boy's clothes she might be able to get a better start, and as she is an expert at the handling of automobiles she thought she might even get employment as a chauffeur if she posed as a boy. So she went to a Washington hotel, where McKenny brought her the clothes and cut her hair. Then the pair started on the journey that ended when Patrolman Skelly saw through the disguise.

When the girl was dressed in her own proper habiliments and arraigned before Magistrate Marsh in the Tombs Court she wept bitterly, and upon being questioned as to whether she would like to go home she replied: "You bet I would."

She was held in $1,000 bail and sent to the Waverly Home for Girls, pending the arrival of a Baltimore detective, who has been sent, at the request of her parents, to bring her home. McKenny was arrigned on a short affidavit charging suspicion of abduction and was held in $2,500 bail until Wednesday.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 3.—Mrs. Susan Whiting almost collapsed tonight when she learned of her daughter's escapade in New York. She and her husband both declared that she had left home with their full knowledge and consent to start her education under Miss Rochon's care, and both denied that she had any callers or that she ever knew any boy named McKenny. Later Mr. Whiting said that he thought she might have a schoolmate of that name, but that he had never heard that they were particular friends.

McKenny's brother said he had heard his brother speak of the girl and her ambitions, but that he did not believe Wilbur had anything to do with enticing her away.

LAUNCH PEOPLE'S WARSHIP.

Popular Subscription Paid for Sweden's New Fighter.

LONDON, May 3.—A Reuter dispatch from Stockholm says that the Swedish battleship Sverige was launched today at Gothenburg, in the presence of King Gustave, the members of the royal family, and the Ministry.

The Sverige has a displacement of 7,000 tons, and will carry a crew of 408 men. She is 393 feet long, and has a draught of 20 feet. The vessel is designed for a speed of 22.5 knots an hour. She will carry four 11-inch and eight 6-inch guns, six 12-pounders, and two torpedo tubes.

The construction of the Sverige was sanctioned by the Swedish Parliament in 1911, but later, when the Liberals came into power, this sanction was canceled. The people of the nation thereupon started a subscription for the building of the ship, and about $4,900,000 was raised. As the estimated cost of the Sverige was only $3,500,000 it was decided to use the surplus in the building of a second ship.

ADVERTISES FOR BROTHER.

Washington, Penn., Lawyer Has Disappeared from House.

This advertisement was sent to THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday for insertion in today's issue:

O. C. U.—Please communicate with your brother. H. K. U.

The advertisement was inserted by Homer K. Underwood of 874 Van Houten Avenue, Passaic, N. J. His brother is O. C. Underwood, a prominent lawyer of Washington, Penn., who disappeared from home last Friday. No trace of him has been found.

His wife said last night over the long distance 'phone that she had communicated with Homer K. Underwood in Passaic, as she thought her husband might have gone to his brother.

It is said the missing man has been drinking heavily lately. He was formerly District Attorney of Washington County, Penn.

MISS QUINLAN OUT $100.

Actress Lose Bill in Street and Wonders if Honesty Still Exists.

Gertrude Quinlan, the actress, mourns the loss of a $100 bill which she lost when taking change from her pocketbook while walking between her apartment at 1,730 Broadway, near Fifty-fifth Street, to Forty-ninth Street and Seventh Avenue on Sunday evening. So she advertised for it in THE TIMES Lost and Found column yesterday.

"I'm afraid I'll never get it back," said Miss Quinlan last night, "because Diogenes with his lantern would have a hard time in New York nowadays on his well-known quest in the first place; and if my bill has got into the hands of some one who would have been promising enough to get an honorable mention pending further inquiries from the old Greek, that person will probably argue, 'What's the use? If the loser of this bill had $100 to lose, he or she is so rich that it will never be missed.' So I fear the money has permanently departed."

SAYS HUSBAND SHOT HER.

Police Find Brewster Dressing Dying Woman's Wounds.

Policemen broke into a flat in a tenement house at 161 Railroad Avenue, Jersey City, at 11 o'clock last night, after neighbors had reported that five shots had been fired in the apartment. They found Mrs. Katherine Brewster lying the floor with a bullet wound in the abdomen, another in the left cheek, and a third in the right hand, while her husband, William Brewster, a sheet-metal worker, who was in his night clothes, was trying to dress her wounds.

Brewster was arrested, and his wife taken to the City Hospital. She said her husband had shot her. Brewster denied this, saying that he was in bed when the shooting occurred, and that he had narrowly escaped being shot himself. Mrs Brewster will probable die.

SYDNEY OFF FIRE ISLAND?

Destroyer of the Emden Said to Have Joined the Patrol.

The British cruiser Essex and the auxiliary cruiser Empress of Ireland, which have been doing duty off Fire Island for the last week, were joined yesterday by a light cruiser, believed to be the Natal, and a big four-funnel battleship, said to be the Sydney, which sank the Emden in the Indian Ocean.

The warships met about twenty miles southeast of the Scotland Lightship and remained there all the forenoon. About 3 P. M. the Natal left the others and steamed away to the southward.

by the Senator's former secretary, E. R. Perry, the only purpose was to weed out the correspondence and lessen the bulk.

The subject of State printing contracts and Mr. Barnes's allegel connection therewith was gone into extensively during the day. One important point brought out was that the original minute book of the J. B. Lyon Company, in which Mr. Barnes held 750 shares, was missing, and it was impossible to show the minutes of Directors' meetings in the years 1903, 1904, and 1905. The loss of the book was admitted by Charles Winchester, Vice President and General Manager of the J. B. Lyon Company, who said he had not discovered it was missing until three days ago. The Roosevelt people would like to get hold of the boow, as they think it would show Mr. Barnes's full connection with the Lyon concern.

Printing Witnesses Reluctant.

More than a dozen witnesses were examined on the printing matters, and several of them included former Albany city officials through whose hands the printing contracts passed. Their apparent reluctance to answer questions irritated Mr. Bowers and led to frequent arguments between him and Mr. Ivins. It was brought out that while Mr. Barnes had held 750 shares of stock in the J. B. Lyon Company, he had disposed of it in 1914. It was also shown that the company was awarded on one occasion a contract for printing which amounted to more than $155,000 despite the fact that there were three bids lower than the Lyon bid; also that it was customary for the Republican city officials to give the smaller city printing bids to the Journal Company, which sublet the contracts to the Argus and other printing companies, and that in some cases a double price was charged the city.

The first witness when the trial was resumed was Michael V. Dolan, General Manager of the Albany Argus Company, who had not finished his testimony when court adjourned last Friday. There were few persons in the courtroom, compared with previous days.

Mr. Bowers delved into the records of the Albany Board of Contract and Supply for 1909, 1910, and 1911, and brought out from the witness that, although the cost per page for printing city documents at bidding was about $1.25, he had put in a bid of $1.75. He said he had bid $1.50 a page for printing the Albany Common Council proceedings, and that he had figured on 25 cents a page profit on that work. Ordinance notices cost only 10 cents a page to print, the witness admitted, and the bid was $1.25 a page, thus yielding a profit of $1.15 a page. He explained that the type had been set up for the Common Council work and did not need to be reset.

Printing the Board of Education report was the next point touched upon. Mr. Dolan had the contract for this weekly report, printing the proceedings of all the meetings. The type was held because the board always wanted extra copies. There was a 25 per cent. profit to this after a 25 per cent. discount was made to The Albany Evening Journal, Mr. Barnes's paper, which held the original contract for the printing of the annual report.

So many documents and books were needed to get at the bottom of printing matter that an impromptu law library which established back of the witness chair within easy reach of the Roosevelt counsel. Neither Mr. Barnes nor the Colonel displayed much interest in what was going on. The Colonel opened and read his mail, while Mr. Barnes yawned and talked to his counsel.

Commission Paid to Journal.

Reports printed by The Argus Company which have the name of The Journal stamped upon them, were submitted to the witness, and he was asked to explain the system by which the work was done by the Barnes paper. He admitted that he paid The Journal Company 15 per cent. commission on all city work received from that source.

The witness seemed very unwilling, and Mr. Bowers had to keep constantly at him. When called upon to examine certain of the items he merely said that "it must be so if it was in the books." Mr. Dolan testified before the Bayne committee, and frequently he had to refresh his memory by reading what he had testified to there.

The Argus has published the Common Council proceedings for twenty years, Mr. Dolan said, and during the last five years The Argus Company has printed for The Journal Company duplicates of various printed proceedings. Type for the original copies was kept standing for the duplicates, and The Argus could print them cheaper than the other companies.

Mr. Dolan was not cross-examined. When he left the stand Edward T. Platt, son of the late Senator Thomas C. Platt, was called. Mr. Platt is a tall man, with a sprinkling of iron gray hair and a short gray mustache. His resemblance to his father is not striking. He said he was the only executor of his father's estate. He produced a stack of letters a foot high. He said they were the letters that had passed between his father and Colonel Roosevelt and between his father and Mr. Barnes from 1899 to 1909.

Mr. Bowers asked for letters also from Platt-Barnes correspondence of 1899. The witness handed him a large package, and when Mr. Bowers let it be known that he wanted only the letters between Senator Platt and Mr. Barnes, the witness said that his subpoena had called for the Roosevelt-Platt letters also, and Platt thought that all should be put in evidence. Mr. Bowers insisted that he be allowed to make his own selection. Mr. Ivins got very peppery about it.

Will Pick Out Letters Wanted.

"The subpoena served on the witness," he said, "called for the production of all the letters that passed between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Platt, as well as those between Platt and Barnes. He has brought a huge mass of correspondence here, and I object to Mr. Roosevelt's counsel sitting down and going through a dead man's records to find out what he wants. I don't know what is in them and I don't know whether some of the men mentioned are alive or dead."

"But you have already seen them," angrily cried Mr. Bowers.

"How do you know that?" thundered Mr. Ivins.

"You told me yourself," was the reply.

"I asked for the production of all the letters," said Mr. Ivins, "and I did not know until today that my subpoena had been unwittingly obeyed."

Justice Andrews brought his gavel down and sternly ordered counsel to cease wrangling. He suggested that each side appoint some one to go through the letters and pick out those that had any bearing on the case. Mr. Ivins said he was satisfied, and Mr. Bowers turned again to the witness.

"Were any of Mr. Platt's letters destroyed?" he asked.

"Some, covering all the years in question, were destroyed in 1912 and 1913," the witness replied. "Mr. Platt's secretary, Mr. E. R. Perry, weeded them out, so that the correspondence wouldn't be too cumbersome. They were destroyed for no other reason."

Mr. Platt gave way for Major Jacob J. Dickinson, who was a newspaper correspondent at Albany in 1908, but is now in the Government service at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. He was asked about an interview he had with Mr. Barnes in 1908, and this is what he said:

What Barnes Told Hughes.

"Primarily, Mr. Barnes said that party success was paramount, in his mind, to all other political considerations. He quoted to me a conversation he had had with Governor Hughes at the annual banquet of the Albany County Committee. He said he had reminded Governor Hughes that the convention which nominated him had not brought up the issue of race-track gambling—that all such matters had been carefully avoided—and that no mention of it was made in the platform. He said, therefore, he had asked the Governor why he had precipitated the issue upon the public. Mr. Hughes, in reply, had said it was purely a matter of conscience. Mr. Barnes then said he had replied to the Governor: 'If it is a case of conscience, and not votes, there is no common ground on which we can stand.'

"Mr. Barnes went on to say that he had not mentioned the subject again to the Governor. Mr. Barnes told me that Mr. Hughes would not get his legislation through, and that he was opposed to the renomination of Mr. Hughes. He related to me how Senator Grattan, from his own Senate district, had at first favored the program of Governor Hughes regarding race-track legislation and how Mr. Barnes had called him to his house on the day the vote was to be taken, and had induced Senator Grattan to cast his vote with Mr. Hughes's opponents, and that this had caused the revolt and defeated the legislation."

On cross-examination Mr. Ivins asked the witness if he had ever repeated the conversation to Colonel Roosevelt. Major Dickinson said he had not, but had written it for his paper, The Herald, and it was published in that journal on April 13, 1908. Mr. Ivins then moved that the entire testimony be stricken out, as it was not in justification and not in mitigation because, if the defendant knew about it, it could not have affected his mind when he wrote the alleged libelous article. The Justice said he would allow the evidence to remain in, temporarily at least.

Abandoned Murphy's Chestnuts.

Wiater T. Arndt was then called. He was the Albany correspondent of The New York Evening Post in 1910 and 1911. At present he is Secretary of the Municipal Government Association. He was asked to tell of an interview he had with Mr. Barnes at the Republican State Headquarters in New York City in the Fall of 1911. Mr. Ivins objected, but was overruled, and the witness said:

"I recollect that Mr. Barnes said that sometime during the session of 1911 he had received a message from Charles F. Murphy—that Mr. Murphy sent word to him that the Direct Primary bill was likely to pass unless sufficient Republican legislators cast their votes with the Tammany men in opposition to it. He said that Mr. Murphy had added that the up-State men who had opposed the candidacy of William F. Sheehan for the United States SCenate earlier in the year would be likely to favor the Direct Primary bill.

"Mr. Barnes said that in substance Mr. Murphy wanted Mr. Barnes to help him in defeating the direct primary legislation, and that Mr. Barnes had replied that Mr. Murphy could attend to his own business, as Mr. Barnes would not take any part with the Democrats, who were in the majority in both houses of the Legislature; that they could attend to their own business, and that Mr. Barnes was not going to pull Mr. Murphy's chestnuts out of the fire for him, but was going to let Mr. Murphy pull out his own chestnuts."

This testimony, so favorable to Barnes, was totally unexpected, and Mr. Ivins felt so good about it that he allowed Mr. Arndt to go without cross-examination. Mr. Barnes chuckled at the testimony, and later told Arndt it was the best testimony that had yet come out.

William M. Richards, Deputy City Controller of Albany, was called next. He had a gripful of official records, and an arrangement was made whereby during the noon recess he could go over them in the presence of counsel for both sides and select the ones that Mr. Bowers needed.

Printing Inquiry Resumed.

The Albany printing business was again taken up at the afternoon session, Wallace Greenlach, Commissioner of Public Works of Albany, being called to tell what he knew about giving out contracts for the printing of the Common Council minutes. Mr. Bowers wanted to know if the witness ever had given orders for the duplicate printing of records which cost more than the original printing; the witness couldn't remember. He said that most of the printing had gone to The Journal Company, and he admitted that he had never tried to get it done more cheaply elsewhere. Mr. Bowers took up item after item; the witness in each case could not remember about it or his clerks had issued the printing orders.

On cross-examination, Mr. Ivins asked the witness if Mr. Barnes ever had solicited any work from him, and he replied in the negative.

Frederick Tiesler, ex-Clerk to the Common Council of Albany, who said he had no present occupation, then was called. He remembered that he had given orders to have certain city printing done by The Journal Company. When asked why, he said it was because he "was a friend of theirs."

"Was that include Barnes?" asked Mr. Bowers.

"Oh, yes," was the reply.

Mr. Bowers brought out that the Mayor's message for 1910 has been printed in both the 1909 and 1910 bound volumes of minutes, and the same thing happened the following year. By printing the message twice each year the printers were able to collect twice for the same job. The witness said he was surprised to find this had been done, and he didn't know how it had happened.

Mr. Ivins asked only this question on cross-examination: "Do you hold any political office now?"

The witness said he didn't. He gave place to Charles Winchester, Vice President and General Manager of the J. B. Lyon Company. Mr. Ivins brought out that James B. Lyon, head of the concern, was still to appear in court or to give a deposition.

Mr. Winchester was on the stanad most of the afternoon. His testimony was much the same as that he gave in the first week of the trial. The witness said Mr. Barnes was a stockholder in the concern, but not a Director.

Mystery of Barnes's Stock.

Mr. Bowers went painstakingly through a mass of books and documents in his effort to show how much stock Mr. aBrnes really owned and to whom he had transferred it. The witness gave him no help, and the lawyer had to admit that it was a hopeless muddle to him. Justice Andrews said it was not very material what became of the stock after Mr. Barnes had parted with it. Finally, after about an hour's work, Mr. Bowers established the fact that Mr. Barnes had held 750 shares of company stock, and that Mr. Winchester finally came into possession of it. He said he had paid part cash for the stock and the rest in notes, and that after full payment had been made the stock was turned back to the company in September, 1914, and became part of the assets of the concern.

A stock certificate of the J. B. Lyon Company, purporting to show that J. B. Lyon, founder of the company, had transferred 100 shares of stock to Mr. Barnes in consideration of a "certain agreement" was placed in evidence. Mr. Winchester said he had no idea what the "agreement" which was mentioned in writing on the face of the certificate was.

The witness said that he had seen Mr. Barnes in the Lyon Company's office only once, and that Mr. Barnes had nothing whatever to do with the management of the company. It was at this point that the witness admitted that the original minute book of the company for the years 1903, 1904, and 1905 was missing. Mr. Bowers did not pursue the subject. Mr. Winchester was not cross-examined.

Franklin S. Craley, Treasurer, Secretary, and cashier of the Journal Company, followed him on the stand. He was asked if he had produced all the books he had been subpoenaed to get, and he replied that he had done so, and that they were at his hotel here.

"Why haven't you brought them to court?" Mr. Bowers asked.

"Because we haven't got a truck or a moving van with us," Mr. Ivins answered for him. Mr. Bowers insisted that the books be produced, and the witness said that only Mr. Barnes, as President of the company, had the right to produce them.

"Well, it looks as if I would have to put Mr. Barnes on the stand," said Mr. Bowers.

"I am willing," retorted Mr. Ivins. "The only way he can be made to produce the books is to be served with a summons duces tecum."

Justice Andrews said he thought it would not be necessary to swear Mr. Barnes as a witness—that he thought Mr. Barnes would produce the books if asked to do so.

Calls Upon Barnes for Records.

"Then," said Mr. Bowers, addressing the plaintiff, who stood before the Justice's bench with hi shands behind his back: "I call upon Mr. Barnes to produce in this courtroom the stock book ledger, journal, and other books of the Albany Journal Printing Company, showing dealings with the city of Albany from 1909 to 1912. Mr. Barnes said nothing but sat down.

If Mr. Barnes had been required to take the setand he would have been Mr. Bowers's own witness, and it might have been possible for Mr. Ivins to examine him at all times, but that he expected Mr. Barnes to testify to on rebuttal. The Barnes lawyers were willing that this should be done, for they took the ground that in making the plaintiff his own witness, the appellant would admit his credibility.

The next witness was Isadore Wachsmann, Secretary to the Board of Contract and Supply of Albany. He, too, was questioned about duplicate printing contracts, but proved as unsatisfactory a witness as the others. He gave place to William B. Coates of the City Controller's office of Albany, who testified to giving out printnig contracts, and admitted that in giving them to the Journal Company he had never tried to find out if the work could be done elsewhere at a lower price.

It was at this point that Colonel Rosevelt came near going back on the stand. Justice Andrews said he wanted to make it plain that he had decided to admit into evidence matters that the defendent had not touched upon in his pleadings if it would tend to show that the Colonel had formed his judgment on them when he wrote the alleged libel. This new evidence, the Justice said, should be admitted only as showing mitigation, however. It is understood that the Roosevelts attorneys will produce a number of newspaper articles regarding political affairs at Albany and that the Colonel will testify that when he read them he believed that what they contained was true.

Judgment for Overcharges.

Stewart Hancock, a member of the Roosevelt legal staff, tried to get into the record a copy of a judgment the State secured against the Journal Company for alleged overcharges, with a stipulation made at the time of the suit between the State Attorney General and counsel for Mr. Barnes and an opinion written in the case bya Justice of the Court of Appeals. Mr. Hancock wanted to read only a part of the opinion. Mr. Ivins urged that all of it be read. When Mr. Hancock insisted that only a part be read, Mr. Ivins objected to any of the matter going into the record, and he was upheld.

Later, the court, endeavoring to expedite matters, urged Mr. Ivins to return to his original agreement. Mr. Hancock having announced that he would allow the entire opinion to get into the record. Mr. Ivins was obdurate, however. He turned to Mr. Hancock and said:

"You handed me the mitten at first. Now you will have to prove this testimony. I won't make any stipulation."

Mr. Bowers interrupted and said he wanted to show, among other things, that printing for Albany County was billed twice and paid for twice.

The last witness of the day was Frederick C. Foster, of Cohoes, Chief Clerk of the State Printing Board. He told of awarding contracts for about $155,000 worth of legislative printing to the J. B. Lyon Company, although there were three other concerns whose bids were lower. His testimony had not been concluded when court adjourned till tomorrow morning.

WILL TESTIFY FOR COLONEL.

Franklin D. Roosevelt Goes to Syracuse on Summons by Wire.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, left Washington this afternoon in response to a telegram asking him to come to Syracuse without delay to give testimony at the trial of the Barnes-Roosevelt libel suit. It is supposed that he will be asked as to information said to have been received by him when he was a New York State Senator from Dutchess County in 1911 that a combination had been formed among Democratic and Republic members of the Legislature to elect a United States Senator.

Colonel Roosevelt mentioned this reported deal in giving testimony at the trial at Syracuse, and said that he received his information on the subject from Franklin D. Roosevelt, ex-State Senator Josiah Newcomb and others.

DYNAMITES HALL OF BRONX BOROUGH

hung at the edge of the hole in the floor. Inspector Egan ordered no one to enter the cellar lest this slide into the hole and drop to the floor below. In front of this room is the office of J. Stewart Wilson, Superintendent of the Highway Department. This was wrecked, as was the officeof August W. Schlemmer, Mr. Mathewson's clerk, which is just above the permit clerk's room. Mr. Mathewson's office in front of this was damaged by falling ceiling and plaster, but it was not wrecked.

Offices on the north side of the building escaped damage, though desks and chairs were tossed about and windows broken. But the offices of the Building Department, facing the permit clerk's room across the automobile pathway, were almost demolished. Record cabinets were broken and the contents scattered over the room, and desks and chairs were smashed. Had the explosion occurred in the daytime when the offices are occupied certainly a dozen persons would have been killed.

Building Ordered Closed.

County officials estimated that the damage would reach at least $10,000, and perhaps more. R. G. Moorehead, Building Superintendent, ordered the building closed to every one except the police and a great deal of reconstruction work will be necessary before much of the building can be used again.

After several hours of investigation the police confessed themselves still at a loss to account for the attack. A careful search was made for lead or iron slugs, but none was found, and Inspector Egan declared that the explosion had been caused by no fewe than six sticks of dynamite, each weighing three-quarters of a pound. He said these probably had been wrapped tightly together with a fuse and cap stuck between them. He said a man accustomed to the handling of dynamite might easily have timed this fuse so as to allow himself as much as five minutes in which to escape, and in this time he could have walked across Crotona Park to Authur Avenue, emerging where no one would think of connecting him with the bomb.

For want of a better clue, detectives started a search immediately for a man whom Harry Carson, Mr. Mathewson's chauffeur, saw loitering about the cellar entrance one Monday night a few months ago. Carson went to see what this man wanted, but the fellow ran away. Carson gave a good description of him to Captain Wines and his men. The latter arrested Antoino Celguidio of 630 East 188th Street and Alphonso Morretti of 189th Street and Belmont Avenue in the crowd in front of the Borough Hall. Celguidio because he had a revolver in his pocket and Morretti because he was with Celguidio. The police do not believe they know anything about the explosion, however.

On Egan's advice, Supt. Moorhead gave orders to keep the Hall closed today, when a examination will be made by engineers to determine what parts, if any, of the building may be used before repairs shall have been made.

ULTIMATUM TALK IN TOKIO JOURNALS

WASHINGTON IS OPTIMISTIC

TOKIO, May 3.—The Jiji Shimpo, a Japanese newspaper of good standing, issued an extra edition this afternoon in which it made the statement that Japan would send an ultimatum to China, the Chinese reply to the latest Japanese communication regarding the demands of the Tokio Government being considered unsatisfactory.

The Japanese Cabinet was in session for six hours today. A telegram was dispatched to Eki Hioki, the Japanese Minister at Peking.

The Ihara News Agency this afternoon said that the Emperor might issue an important decree in a few days.

Intense Interest in Tokio.

The situation has aroused intense interest here. Some of the newspapers reiterate the assertion of the Jiji Shimpo that the Government is dissatisfied with China's reply, and add that it is therefore obliged to prepare for the final step. These newspapers say that in pursuance with a previously settled policy they expect the Government to announce its decision in a few days unless China changes her attitude. There was a long conference today of the chiefs of the War Department.

The Japanese version of ArticleI., Group V., of the Japanese demands, which China rejected, is that Japan requested, in case of the necessity arising for China to employ advisers, that China would appoint "some" Japanese advisers.

This clause, as amended, according to Peking, provided for the appointment of "many Japanese advisers."

Details of China's Refusal.

TIEN-TSIN, May 2, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—China replied yesterday afternoon to the Japanese demands. She accepts the majority of those relating to Shantung, but points out that she desires to participate in the conference deciding the future of the province, and expects an indemnity for the losses resulting from hostilities with Germany and a reversion to the status quo antebellum.

The Mancuhrian demands are granted, though China still insists that land disputes can be tried only in the Chinese courts.

The majority of the Eastern Mongolian demands are granted, with the exception of those for rights of residence and ownership of land.

China is willing to accept the revised form of the Hanyeh-ping demand, namely, that the company shall remain purely a commercial undertaking, inalienable to any other power, and that it shall not borrow funds elsewhere than in Japan.

The debt to Japan is also to be repaid.

China, however, rejects all the demands in the fifth group, saying that she is unable to agree to the concession of the Yang-tse railways, this having been already promisedto Great Britain, so that China's national honor is involved.

Other demands in this group, which deal with the promise to purchase war munitions from Japan, the granting of the facilities for the propagation of Buddhism, and the appointment of Japanese political, military and financial advisers, are all rejected.

The Japanese Minister said that the offer to give back Tsing-tau was dependent upon China's acceptance of the Japanese demands as a whole, and therefor the offer had been withdrawn.

At yesterday's conference the Chinese Minister of Foreign Affairs denied that China had unduly prolonged the negotiations or started an anti-Japanese press campaign. He reiterated his statement that China's reply contained the maximum that she was prepared to concede.

Further developments are now anxiously awaited, especially in view of the bellicose attitude of the Japanese press. It seems certain that the Chinese Government can make no further concessions without risking international disturbances, and in the event of further Japanese pressure it will probably resort to passive resistence. It is generally considered here that China has yielded all that she can consistently with her dignity and independence.

Washington Sees No Crisis.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Neither the dispatches received by the State Department no the advices to the Japanese Embassy today indicated that any ultimatum had been decided upon by the Tokio Government to compel an acceptance by China of Japan's demands for commercial and political rights in the latter country.

The belief in official quarters here is that, while there will be a firm insistence by Japan on the acceptance of the demands, the negotiations will not reach the point of a break in diplomatic relations or a formal threat, but that the parleys will continue along lines that may bring forth further compromises and concessions on both sides.

Officials do not view the negotiations as having reached a crisis, though they are reluctant to discuss the delicate questions involved. They are relying, it is known, on previous assurances given by Japan of her intentions in China, and therefore look upon the reports issuing from time to time during the course of the negotiations as part of efforts made in the countries themselves to assist the course of their respective plenipotentiaries.

The view is also held in some quarters where Far Eastern affairs are closely followed that such acceptances as China already has agreed upon give Japan valuable concessions, which the latter country would not wish to sacrifice by forcing a crisis that might involve complications with other countries.

WARNS JAPA NTO GO SLOWLY.

London Daily News Says Political Crimes Do Avenge Themselves.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, May 4. — The Daily News, in an editorial discussing China's reply to Japan, says:

"The situation is very critical and must cause intense anxiety to all who have the peace of the Far East at heart. The temptation which faces the Japanese Government is a very powerful one, and the moment is not well chosen for Europe to lecture Asia on political morality. Yet the Japanese Government would be wise to weigh very carefully any action she may contemplate and to remember that prodence and moderation are very often the way of statesmanship. Japan's military resources are great, but all China has been roused by her demands to intense bitterness and the process of enforcing them may prove extremely costly, so costly as to make the speculation a mistaken one. Again, if there is any lesson which the war in Europe teaches it is that political crimes, even in so ill-contrived a world as ours, do often avenge themselves. Count Okama, one would like to think, is too much of a statesman not to read the moral of the events before all our eyes."

URGE RESERVE FOR NAVY.

National Security League Approves General Board Proposals.

The Navy Committee of the National Security League, at 31 Pine Street, reported yesterday the resultsof their investigations of naval affairs. The committee approves the chief proposals advocated by the General Board of the Navy, with a recommendation that a reorganization be made of the military branch of the navy.

Reviewing in detail the recommendations of the General Board, in which the committee makes special reference to the inadequate number of cruisers, and the fact that none has been authorized since 1904, the committee says:

"In our existing organization the civil and industrial branches of the navy have been scientifically developed, if not overdeveloped. But the essentially military branch, charged with administering and handling the product of the efficient industrial branch—that is, the completed battleship, cruiser, destroyer, or submarine—has been merely embryonic in our Navy Department.

"Our organization has been essentially a peace organization, that in time of war, as shown by our wars of 1861 and 1898, has had to be entirely remodeled."

Naval experts, through a budget system, should have control and regulation of expenditures of money, says the committee. The report adds:

"The jersonnel of the navy is a matter of even more serious import than that of construction. Our navy not only has not men enough allowed it by Congress to man the ships at present borne on the Navy Register, but it has not reserves to call upon in time of war. The formation of a national reserve is most important in order that the work may be pushed until this reserve, in connection with the Naval Militia, has reached the point where, combined with the active list, it will be possible to man fully the entire fleet with war complements and furnish 10 per cent. addition for casualties."

The committee makes no recommendation concerning the commisioned personnel of the navy, because that subject was considered by the General Board, but the committee entirely approves the board's advocacy for appropriate legislation to remedy the defect.

The report is signed by J. Bernard Walker, Chairman; R. W. Neeser, W. Butler Duncan, R. P. Forshew, William S. Lloyd, William McAdoo, and General Tracy, both of whom were former Secretaries of the Navy; Robert R. Riggs, Herbert L. Satterlee, Beekman Winthrop, Henry A. Wise Wood, and Cushing Stetson.

A letter embodying the chief recommendations of the committee is to be submitted to President Wilson and to members of the Senate and House.

THUG ATTACKS NURSE.

Both Her Ankles Sprained When He Throws Her Down Embankment.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., May 3.—Residents near the transfer point on First Street for the Hudson River and Newark trolley lines heard screams shortly before 10 o'clock tonight and found a woman lying a few feet from the trolley station at the bottom of the embankment of the Susquehanna & Western Railroad. Both of her ankles were badly sprained.

The woman, Miss Florence Dater, a nurse at the Hackensack Hospital, said that, while she was waiting for a trolley car of the Newark line to take her to the Hackensack, a man had attacked her and tried to drag her up the railroad embankment. In spite of her resistance and her cries for help, she said that he had forced her half-way up the steep embankment, and then, evidently afraid that her cries had been heard, he threw her to the bottom of the embankment, a distance of about ten feet. She was taken to Hackensack Hospital, where it was said that, in addition to the sprained ankles, it was feared that her right leg was broken.

TO PRODUCE ENVELOPES

The cablegram to the editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES from José Yves Limantour, branding as a forgery the letter given out by the Mexican Bureau of Information, yesterday brought forth new assertions that the letter was genuine.

"Every statement ever issued for publication from this office," said Francisco Elias, the Carranzista Consul General, referring to Señor Limantours' cablegram, "has proved to be true. We have yet to give out the first unsubstantiated statement."

An official of the Mexican Bureau of Information, which is connected with the Carranza Consulate General and shares its offices in the new Equitable Building, said that not only the originals of the letters, but the original envelopes in which they were mailed from Paris by ex-President Diaz and Señor Limantour, were in the possession of the Carranza Government at Vera Cruz, and that photographic copies of both the text and of the letters and the envelopes would be sent to New York as proof of their genuineness. A reproduction of a photograph of the letter General Diaz is said to have written to General Angeles was shown. It formed the centrepiece of a big poster recently circulated by the Carranzistas in the State of Sonora. The letter General Diaz is alleged to have written was written on private stationery in the right hand upper corner, of which appeared in engraved letters "Correspondencia Particular del General Porfirio Diaz."

Both the Limantour and the Diaz letters, it was added, were procured by Alberto Sisniega, a prominent Carranzista of Lower California, who for several months, has lived in Calexico, in that State. In transmitting the letters to the Carranza officials in his country, Sisniega, wrling from Calexico under date of March 15, said:

I arrived in Calexico a few months ago. At the inn at which I stopped I struck up an acquaintance with the landlady, who showed me the letter that I now have the pleasure of inclosing. The simple woman probably did not realize the true historical value which the document has. I offered her $10 gold, and she sold it to me immediately without hesitation. This was in the month of November. On my inquiring how she had come to get possession of that famous letter, she told me that she had found it on the floor of her inn. My sole object in sending it to you is that you make it known to the public, returning the letter to me. I intend to g oto Vera Cruz and wish to take it with me.

My idea is not to draw a profit for myself out of this document, since my sympathies are with Constitutionalism; I simply wish to deliver it personally into the hands of Mr. Carranza, in order to apprise him of what is happening. I am not gifted with much intelligence and lack the means of properly expressing myself; but I believe that you understand me, it being sufficient reason that you are an educated person. I, therefore, urge you to return the letter to me after it has been published. Tomorrow I leave for San Diego, Cal., and you can reach me at the following address: 744 Indian Street, or else at the Coronado View Hotel,

Very truly yours,

ALBERTO SISNIEGA.

Sisniega's letter, it will be noted, mentions the purchase of only one letter. It is understood, however, that he sent both of the letters that now figure in the controversy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Dear Sir: There cannot be the slightest doubt that the report of the discovery of correspondence purporting to be directed to General Angeles by Porfirio Diaz and to Mr. de la Barra by Mr. Limantour is a falsehood.

The alleged letters were published two months ago in El Eco de Mexico of Los Angeles, Cal., whose editor, Adolfo Carrillo, is a violent Carranza partisan. It is assumed by those who know of his activities that the letters were the work of his fertile imagination.

In the first place, General Felipe Angeles has not been in Calexico, as the Carranza press agency announced, and so could not have left the letters there. His whereabouts during the last two years are certainly a matter of record. Also, if th letters have ben known to a section of the public for two months, why should the originals only now be on their way to Carranza, as was announced by the local Carranza bureau? Respectfully yours,

FRANCISCO URQUIDI,
Consul General.

VILLISTAS TAKE VICTORIA.

Report Three Other Victories Between Monterey and Tampico.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Victoria, the capital of the State of Tamaulipas, and the most important city on the road from Monterey to Tampico, has been captured by the Villistas, according to advices received here today by Enrique C. Llorente, confidential agent of the Villa Government. The Carranzistas have also been defeated in battles at Forlon, Osorio, and Gonzales, on the road from Monterey to Tampico, according to information received from the same source, on the basis of which Señor Llorente issued this announcement tonight:

"General Maximo Garcia, after occupying Victoria, detached a flying column to pursue the enemy. The Carranzistas were brought to bay at Guemes, northeast of Victoria, and then completely routed with a loss of fifty dead, eighty prisoners, six machine guns, and much ammunition and rifles. Forty-five Carranzistas voluntarily laid down their arms in this fight and joined the Convention troops. The pursuit of the Carranzistas continues.

"Generals Madgelino Cedillo and Santurneno Cedillo, brothers, with their forces and some of the troops of General Pedro R. Molina and General Lucio Blanco—these last forces under command of General S. Rodrigues and Colonel Medrano—completely defeated the enemy along the Monterey and Tampico Railroad at Forlon, Osorio, and Gonzales. Their trains, with great quantities of fuel, were captured, along with 1,200 horses and much war material. About 300 prisoners were made. These were re-elinsted in the ranks of the Convention army, with the exception of three executed after being tried and found guilty of having aided Huerta, in his usurpation. The enemy fled in the direction of Matamoras. The railroad tracks to Victoria are in perfect condition for 150 kilometers, (about 93 miles.)

"Advices from Victoria also state that General Lucio Blanco, Gutierrez leader, who recently surrendered his command to the Convention forces, has issued a manifesto declaring that he is in entire accord with the Convention Government.

"A hundred thousand men are needed to harvest the cotton crops about Torreon. Large numbers are ging there from California, Texas, Arizona, and New Mexico."

The Villa agency was advised today that the Zapatista force advancing north from Mexico City had captured Queretaro, and that General Miguel Rodriguez was now in possesslop of the right bank of the Turbio River, between Penjamo and Irapuato, and that this position enabled him to cut off Obregon's line of retreat to the west coast.

"These movements," said Señor Llorente, mark important progress in the gradual tightening of the circle which now completely incloses Obregon."

The Carranza agency has been silent on the status of General Obregon's campaign in Central Mexico for the past two days, and had no announcement to make today concerning its beyond giving out this telegram from Vera Cruz:

"The train carrying the artillery recovered from Villistas when when defeated by General Obregon in Salamanca on April 15 arrived in Vera Cruz today, coming under Colonel Enrique's orders. He bought twenty-three cannon, several of them 75-millimeters, and a good amount of ammunition, leaving some artillery pieces in Pachuca. The artillery mentioned was brought here because General Obregon said he was not in need of it, as he had enough with the 75-millimeters.

"The report of the defeat inflicted upon the Villistas belonging to the Maytorena faction, near Navojea, by the Constitutionalist General Flores is entirely confirmed. The victory obtained by General Flores was complete. The losses of the Villistas were about 2,000 dead, wounded, and prisoners."

VILLA AVIATOR KILLED.

Mayes, an American, Crushed by Striking a Building.

EL PASO, Texas, May 3.—Jack Mayes, a San Francisco aviator, was killed yesterday at Aguascalientes in making a test flight in one of the aeroplanes purchased for the Villa army, according to a telegram reaching here today from the commander of the Villa Aviation Corps.

The message said Mayes was flying at the rate of sixty miles an hour when his biplane struck a building, crushing the aviator's head and shoulders. The body is being shipped to the border here.

We Are Glad So Many People Yesterday Secured the Great Advantages of This

BAWO & DOTTER SALE

It might have been the dispersal of the priceless art treasures of some great collector—yesterday's selling of the magnificent Bawo & Dotter stocks of China, Glass and Allied Wares.

People realized, as soon as the opening announcement of the Sale was made, that the passing of this splendid old firm, a business tragedy of the European war, brought with it the most spectacular opportunities for the possession of finest wares that the China market might ever know again.

And yesterday we were glad that we had such fine—such regal things—and so many of them—to offer to the lovers of the potter's and glassmaker's arts.

But, in spite of our preparations for the most enthusiastic response of which we could even conceive, the best, most efficient service we have ever organized to take care of a sale of China and Glass was not enough.

As one astonished woman said: "I never knew that there were so many people who loved beautiful China and Glass!"

For any shortcomings, our sincere apologies.

And, for today:—

The Superb Bawo & Dotter stock, newly set in order—

Enough of it—there was $120,000, at wholesale, at the beginning—to safeguard wonderful choosing for many days. And every piece, up to the very last, a memorable bargain at its price.

Finally, read this fragment of a just-received

Cablegram from GIMBELS, Paris:

It is not reasonable to expect that another such stock of superb China and Glass can ever be sold at such prices!

FIVE JURORS IN BOX FOR CARMAN TRIAL

NO BACHELORS ACCEPTED

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., May 3.—Mrs. Florence C. Carman, wife of Dr. Edwin Carman of Freeport, L. I., was placed on trial for her life in the Supreme Court here today for the second time. She is charged with the shooting of Mrs. Lulu D. Bailey in Dr. Carman's office on the night of June 30, 1914.

That the second trial would be different from the first in character was evident from the incidents of the first half hour of today's session. At the first trial, which began on Monday, Oct. 19 last, and ended on the following Sunday in a disagreement, the jury standing ten for acquittal and two for conviction, the twelve jurors were chosen within a few hours of the opening of court.

The panel of thirty-six talesmen was exhausted when the afternoon session closed today, and only five jurors had been accepted. A new panel of 100 more talesmen will be summoned tomorrow morning. The five men who were selected were sent to their seats in the jury box only after a rigorous examination by District Attorney Smith and George Morton Levy, Mrs. Carman's counsel, and after the prosecution had used eleven peremptory challenges and the defense five.

Five Jurors Accepted.

All the jurors in the first trial were married. The five men selected today also are married. In the order of their acceptance, they were:

Mrs. Carman expressed satisfaction with all of the five jurors. Dr. Carman, when asked what he thought of them, said:

"They look all right—it doesn't look as though there are any of these religious fanatics among them."

Few but those who had business in the courtroom were admitted, and women who arrived in the morning in automobiles were turned away, as a result of which many of the seats were vacant. Tomorrow, when the trial is expected to get under way, more spectators probably will be admitted.

Changes In Counsel.

While the stage setting of the new chapter in the Carman case was the same as that of the last, many of the principals have been changed. Mr. Levy examined the talesmen for the defense today, and Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted practically the entire case for Mrs. Carman last October, was absent from her counsel table. This time Mr. Levy is being assisted by H. G. Clark and former Judge James M. Seaman of Nassau County. There is also an added Assistant District Attorney to help Mr. Smith, and sitting beside William D. Bailey, husband of the murdered woman, in the courtroom was an interested though unofficial onlooker in the person of James E. Wilkinson, Mr. Bailey's personal counsel. Justice Blackmar is hearing the case, which was heard before Justice Kelby the last time.

The greatest change, however, is to be found in Mrs. Carman herself. She has regained much of her color since her first trial, when, although composed most of the time, she was pale, and showed the strain she had borne during her six weeks' detention in Mineola Jail. She entered the room at 10:05 in the morning, dressed in a blue tailored suit with a white linen collar, and wearing long white gloves, a small blue hat and low shoes. She smiled as she walked to the same seat she had occupied before. Dr. Carman took his old seat at her side.

During the examination of talesmen the change in Mrs. Carman became more and more noticeable. She was no longer a woman depending largely on the ability of the lawyers representing her, but was a calm, shrewd, calculating person in direct charge of her legal battle with the District Attorney. Her three lawyers at first sat at the side of the counsel table, at the end of which she was stationed, but before long they had been summoned to her for direction so often that they took seats in a semicircle about her and turned to her as each talesman was called to the stand.

Defendant Passes on Jurors.

In several instances her attorneys seemed inclined to accept talesmen, and once asked the court for time to consult with Mrs. Carman before deciding. She shook her head with an air of finality after brief argument. The talesman was dismissed abruptly with a peremptory challenge.

As the persons who had been in the room were filing out at the close of the afternoon session, Mrs. Carman was intently studying the typewritten list of the 100 talesmen to be called to court tomorrow while her lawyers, grouped about her, listened to comments. She spoke briefly to Dr. Carman, and he later said that "it was a good looking list."

Eight prospective jurymen had been called to the stand and dismissed before Rohrback, the first, was accepted and sent to the seat of the foreman. Sea Cliff, where he lives, is also the home of the Second Assistant District Attorney, Mr. Wood. Rohrback said that he had a wife and children, and that he had formed an opinion as to the defendant's guilt, but that it would not influence his judgment of the evidence. During the examination of the eight who were dismissed, the District Attorney had laid stress on whether the talesmen had conscientious scruples against capital punishment; whether they considered the word of a negro as valuable as that of a white person; (at the first trial the prosecution's principal witness was Celia Coleman, the negro servant who worked in the Carman home at the time of the shooting,) and whether they would be more lenient with a woman than a male defendant.

The defense, in examining the talesmen, had asked repeatedly whether they were married and had children; whether they would give Mrs. Carman the same consideration they would want their wives or children to receive in similar circumstances; whether they would be influenced by the reputation of Detective William J. Burns, whom District Attorney Smith employed to investigate the case and seek evidence, and whether the fact that Mrs. Carman had listened secretly to Dr. Carman's conversations with patients by means of a dictograph would prejudice them against her.

As to Circumstantial Evidence.

A large percentage of the talesmen acknowledged that they had discussed the case at great length and had formed decided opinions regarding Mrs. Carman's guilt. These were dismissed on the Justice's order when challenged "for cause" by the District Attorney. The District Attorney also questioned most of the talesmen regarding their opinion of the weight of circumstantial evidence, and Justice Blackmar defined this as "evidence which excludes every reasonable theory except that of guilt" as the guide for the talesmen.

It required an hour for the selection of the first juryman, and it was not until 12:17 that the second was chosen, after ten more had been dismissed. The second man, Dayton, is a slender, gray-haired man, who said that he once had formed an opinion on the case but that it would not influence him. Karn, the third juror, who was selected at 12:34, is a retired hotel manager now in the real estate business. He is short and heavy set, and wears a small mustache.

Throughout the selection Mrs. Carman, in her conferences with her lawyers, seemed to oppose the admission of the younger talesmen to the jury box. When recess for luncheon was taken she went to the jail behind the courtroom for her meal. It was her first visit since her former trial. She made no effort to oppose the Justice's ruling that she should be taken into custody again during the trial, and is spending tonight in the Mineola Jail.

One of the questions Mr. Levy asked Hendrickson, the fifth juror, was whether he was acquainted with James Hovey of Woodmere, one of the two jurors who held out for conviction at Mrs. Carman's last trial. Hendrickson said he was not. Previously District Attorney Smith had used one of the thirty peremptory challenges allowed each side to get rid of Henry E. Griffin of Oyster Bay, who acknowledged that he had discussed the case with Robert Ludlam, the foreman of the first jury, who had favored acquitting Mrs. Carman.

The selection of jurymen will proceed again when court opens at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, and it is expected that the box will be full by luncheon recess. Mr. Smith said today that he would present his witnesses approximately in the order they appeared in the last time, but refused to discuss the "surprises" which it was said the prosecution had arranged.

Justice Blackmar decided to send the five jurors chosen to the Garden City Hotel under care of the Sheriff. He explained: "It is not because I distrust the jurors, but because I distrust outsiders."

BETRAYED BY HIS LAUGH.

Voice of Man Sought as Thief Recognized After Two Years.

Because of his characteristic laugh, which was recognized by a former fellow-employe, Benjamin Littman, 23 years old, of 142 East Nineteenth Street, was arrested yesterday on a charge of grand larceny committed in February, 1913.

Early in February, 1913, Littman obtained a position as clerk in the boot and shoe store of Morris Wildfeuer, at 87 Avenue B. It had long been the custom of Wildfeur to place the day's receipts each night in a tin box which in turn he hid in a shoe box in his show window. A few weeks after Littman arrived the box containing over $1,300 disappeared. Littman did not report for work that day and nothing more was seen of him.

When Morris Block, another employe, was passing the corner of Clinton and Rivington Streets yesterday, he recognized Littman's voice coming from a group of young men talking on the corner. Block seized Littman and took him to the Clinton Street Station, where he was placed under arrest.

Littman insisted he knew nothing of the missing money. The reason he left the store so suddenly, he said, was that he got a better job.

AGENT FINDS SAFE ROBBED.

When Melville E. Woolley, agent in charge of the 155th Street Station of the Putnam Division of the New York Central Railroad, entered his office at 155th Street and Eighth Avenue yesterday morning he found the safe door open and the cash contents, between $800 and $900, gone.

Two holes had been bored in the front of the safe about six inches above the combination. Spencer Roberts of 21 Macomb's Place, the assistant agent, was in charge on Sunday night when Woolley left. At his home the police learned Roberts had left a note for his young bride, while she was asleep, saying:

"I am in trouble. Good-bye."

The police are looking for him. Mrs. Roberts, who was married last December, was prostrated and had to be placed under the care of a physician.

Woolley said that Roberts was a young man of exemplary habits, who neither smoked nor drank. He has worked for the New York Central for five years.

DRILL SAFE OF THEATRE.

While making his rounds of the Mount Morris Theatre, 116th Street and Fifth Avenue, yesterday morning, George Ettington of 111 East 120th Street, the night watchman, was confronted by four masked men with revolvers, who bound and gagged him, drilled holes in the safe in the manager's office, and got away with $300, the receipts of Saturday night and Sunday's performances, less the pay of the employes.

Ettington was found bound and gagged in the morning when Edward Brower, a porter, of 66 East 117th Street, opened the door of the theatre. Brower notified Police Headquarters, and Captain Savage of the East 126th Street Station and a squad of detectives from the Third Branch were sent to investigate. The men were described by the watchman as being short and stockily built. All wore dark clothes.

TAXICAB HITS PATROLMAN.

While crossing Amsterdam Avenue at Seventy-fourth Street yesterday afternoon, Patrolman Thomas Rooney of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station, who was in citizens' clothes, was knocked down by a taxicab owned and driven by Charles Summer of 35 West Sixtieth Street, the right wheel going over his head and chest.

Summer, who had two passengers, with the aid of Patrolman Keaney of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, lifted Rooney into the cab and took him to the Polyclinic Hospital, where Dr. Lott discovered that he had a fractured skull, both jaws fractured and a broken nose. Rooney, who never lost consciousness, refused an anaesthetic and was taken to the operating table with little chance for his recovery.

VANDERBILT AUTO BURNS.

$7,000 Motor Destroyed in Cole's Repair Shop.

An automobile valued at $7,000, the property of Reginald Vanderbilt, was destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon in the repair shop and garage of George W. Cole at 1,896 Broadway. The Vanderbilt car had been sent to the garage for repairs, and when a mechanic was testing the engine a backfire occurred, and the flames spread rapidly.

Fireman James Buckley of Engine Company 40 was knocked down and run over when the firemen were taking the other cars from the garage. He was but slightly injured. The fire was confined to the Vanderbilt car.

Hospital Night at Jewish Fair.

The fair which the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities is holding in the Twenty-third Regiment Armory to raise $100,000 is proving a big success. Tonight is to be "hospital night" at the fair, and it was announced yesterday that Nathan Straus had promised to be present to make a brief address. About 3,000 special invitations to attend have been sent to people interested in hospital work.

Brooklyn Pastor Goes to Trenton.

The Rev. Don Clyde Kite, junior pastor of the Marcy Avenue Baptist Church, Brooklyn, has resigned to accept the pastorate of the Central Baptist Church, Trenton, N. J. He is a graduate of the Rochester Theological Seminary and has been at the Marcy Avenue Church for five years.

SAFFORD ACCUSES J. W. OSBORNE ANEW

Convinced by Lawyer's Mannerisms, He Says, That He Was Man with Rae Tanzer.

WITNESS'S FINANCIAL ACTS

He Admits Losing Three Different Places Because of Shortages in His Accounts.

Franklin D. Safford, on trial in the Federal District Court before Judge Hough on a charge of committing perjury when he identified James W. Osborne as the man who accompanied Rae Tanzer to Plainfield, N. J., yesterday reaffirmed this identification.

"Now that I have watched Mr. Osborne in the witness chair," Safford said, "I am more than ever convinced that he is the man who came to the Hotel Kensington. I have seen his mannerisms, the movement of his mouth, and I believe from my heart and soul, without any malice, without any pay or hope of reward, that he is the man I saw in Plainfield."

Safford told in detail everything he would admit remembering from the time he first heard of the Osborne-Tanzer tangle until his indictment for perjury. He seemed to take pleasure in telling how he got rid of a bothersome detective who was following him by getting the man drunk, and several times he made statements to the jury in explanation of his acts. He admitted, for example, that, after his appearance in the Tanzer case, he stayed at hotels under assumed names, but he insisted that he did this because he was "hysterical" lest his deserted wife make trouble for him, and because of "certain matters" he had not "adjusted."

What these "matters" were came out in cross-examination by Assistant United States District Attorney Wood, who drew from the witness the admission that he had worked as a cashier in the Broadway Central Hotel in this city and had left his position after failing to make up a shortage in his accounts. He said he had given the hotel management a due bill for the deficit, but he admitted that the bill had never been paid.

Mr. Wood next questioned the witness about his employment with the Winchell & Davis Importing Company of Albany, and Safford admitted that he had been discharged because of a shortage of $1,200 in his accounts. He said he had not been prosecuted, because he made an arrangement to repay the sum in installments, but again he admitted that the obligation had not been met. Safford said further, when questioned by Mr. Wood, that he had worked for the Keystone Liquor Company of Little Falls, N. Y., and that he had left this position because of a shortage in his accounts. Friends, he said, had furnished a bond for him which had reimbursed his employers, but he admitted that he had never paid his friends.

On re-direct examination Safford attempted to explain these incidents by saying that in each case he either advanced credit to customers for the benefit of his employer or took money due him on commissions. When working for the Keystone Company, he said, he indorsed and cashed checks belonging to the firm, but in doing this he asserted that he was only appropriating his own commissions. It was also brought out in Safford's behalf that he had never been prosecuted by any of his creditors.

Mr. Wood read many of the statements made by Safford at the examination of Rae Tanzer and before the Grand Jury, and he brought out discrepancies between some of these statements and some of those the defendant made yesterday. The prosecution considers these differences important, and the defense contends that they are immaterial. Mr. Wood also brought out that Safford had spent five days in Rockville Center "living at a hotel, going to the theatre, drinking highballs, and having a good time," while, by his admission, he had but $5 with him. Safford insisted that his pleasures had been given him by friends not connected with the present case.

The first witness of the afternoon session was Albert J. McCullough, the private detective of the Hannan agency. He testified that on March 10 W. J. Kitchen, the proprietor of the Hotel Kensington, identified in his presence a picture of James W. Osborne as the likeness of the man who went to the hotel with Miss Tanzer, and that Kitchen repudiated the identification after consultation with his lawyer. He also said that Kitchen promised him an affidavit which he never gave.

McCullough also told of going to the courtroom in which Rae Tanzer was examined and in which Safford made his identification of James W. Osborne. He swore that he had not pointed out Mr. Osborne to Safford, but on cross-examination differences between Safford's and McCullough's accounts of their entrance into the room and their actions therein were brought out by Mr. Wood. The Assistant District Attorney also showed differences between the account given by McCullough at Miss Tanzer's examination and that given by the witness yesterday. McCullough testified yesterday that Darling, Safford's friend, led him and David Slade to Safford for the first time, and Mr. Wood read to him the part of his testimony at the examination in which he said that he had found Safford through tracing express packages.

A. L. Berman, a lawyer, told of accompanying David Slade, Darling, and McCullough to Greenwood Lake to see Safford. He observed nothing, he said, that showed lack of good faith on the part of anyone.

The defense then announced that its only remaining witness, Miss Rose Tanzer, was ill and could not be present until this morning, so the Government began its rebuttal by calling W. J. Kitchen to the stand. He emphatically denied McCullough's testimony regarding his alleged identification of the photograph of James W. Osborne.

After this testimony court adjourned until 10:30 this morning. It is expected that the case will go to the jury today.

$6,000 TO FIGHT DRUG HABIT.

Six thousand dollars has been subscribed by prominent women in this city to build a hospital for victims of the drug habit, according to an announcement yesterday by Burdette G. Lewis, Deputy Commissioner of Correction.

No information could be obtained as to the identity of the donors, as in each case the contributor had requested that her name be withheld.

While nothing definite has been done in the matter of plans or specifications of the proposed new hospital, it is the tentative idea of those in charge to erect the institution on Riker's Island, and it is thought that by employing convict labor on land that will not require to be purchased, a building that would cost $12,000 in any other part of the city can be erected for the amount subscribed.

Interne Cleared of Drug Charge.

Dr. Frederick Miller, an interne in the Charity Hospital on Blackwell's Island and a practicing physician in Jersey City, was discharged by Magistrate Corrigan in the West Side Court yesterday on a charge of having a large quantity of drugs in his possession. It was shown to the satisfaction of the court that there was no proof that the drugs were the property of the physician.

TO TRY 38 HOMICIDE CASES.

Justice Shearn Lends Assistance to Clear New Calendar.

Justice Shearn sat yesterday in Part VIII. of the Supreme Court to help Justice Davis and Judge Nott, sitting in the Criminal Court Building, clean up the homicide calendar. Thirty-eight of these cases are awaiting trial, and the new criminal calendar was made for the purpose of relieving the congestion. Six prisoners came from the Tombs handcuffed together and sat along the wall in the courtroom vigilantly guarded by officers. The courtroom is not adapted to prevent escape. The only case of note was that of Charles de Martini, up for a new trial after conviction for the killing of Policeman Patrick Carter in the Bronx two years ago. He will be tried next Monday.

None of the cases was ready because lawyers for the defense were engaged in other cases or were not properly prepared. Justice Shearn said the trials of the men before him must begin tomorrow, the selection being left to Assistant District Attorney Arthur C. Train, who was present with two deputies.

Then another prisoner, Edward Slevin, driver of a United States mail truck, under indictment for manslaughter for having caused the death of Frederick Vostof in April of last year, was placed on trial. It was shown that he acted in self-defense, and that his character was good. Justice Shearn directed a verdict of not guilty and Slevin went free.

The entire month will be devoted to the trial of the homicide cases, which will relieve the calendars of the regular criminal courts.

Before Judge Nott in General Sessions Michael Aselte, an Eighth Avenue saloon keeper, was placed on trial for the murder of Ernest Jones, a negro. Aselte's first trial on the same charge resulted in a disagreement.

John Hays, a cabaret singer, was put on trial before Justice Davis in the Criminal Term of the Supreme Court on a charge of murdering his roommate, John Reid.

LAUDS COMMERCIAL AIDS.

Already Increasing U. S. Exports, Says Head of Trade Bureau.

Dr. E. E. Pratt, Chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, addressed the class in foreign trade at the New York Stock Exchange yesterday on "Government Aid in Foreign Trade and How to Use It." The speaker discussed the collection and distribution of trade information, the distribution of information relating to foreign tariffs, patents, and the methods followed in preparing statistics dealing with imports and exports.

Dr. Pratt said that the commercial attachés are settling down to routine work with every indication that shortly they will begin to obtain results of the highest importance to the American export trade. Dr. Pratt characterized the attachés as the "business diplomats" of the United States, or the representatives at large of American commercial interests, and said that it is not so much their business to report on specific openings for American products as to describe general aspects of trade, which may be the basis for a large business development by American manufacturers and exporters.

Dr. Pratt said that already Spain has, after representations by the American commercial attaché, abolished the so-called transport tax on coal, which worked unfavorably to American interests. The attaché at Lima, Peru, is now engaged in the attempt to bring Bolivian tin ore to this country for smelting. Up to the outbreak of the war all of the tin ore produced in Bolivia was sent to England, Belgium, and Germany for smelting. After the war began, it was brought to the United States. Dr. Pratt said he hoped an arrangement would be effected whereby the ore may be brought to this country, smelted here, and the finished products exported.

The head of the bureau said that it was handicapped in getting out statistics, as the statistical division has only thirty employes, whereas Germany, Great Britain, and Canada each employ more than 100.

STAYS HOWARD GOULD SALE

Court Postpones Foreclosure in House on Wife's Petition.

The sale of Howard Gould's house at the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Seventy-third Street, which was set down for yesterday on foreclosure proceedings started by Howard's brother George J. Gould, was postponed by Justice Weeks of the Supreme Court pending an appeal that is before the Appellate Division. On June 18 last George J. Gould began suit for $17.82 interest on a tax lien for $54,600.90.

Howard's wife, Kathrine Clemmons Gould, who procured a legal separation from him with alimony of $3,000 a month, fought the suit, alleging that it was an attempt to deprive her of her dower rights in the property. This was denied, and the statement was made that Mrs. Gould's interest in the property was entirely safe, whether the foreclosure suit was successful or not. Alfonso F. Spiegel, Mrs. Gould's attorney in applying to the court for the stay, said:

"The purpose of this sale is to deprive Mrs. Gould of her dower rights. One of the wealthiest men in the world permits the taxes to accumulate since 1908 on a most valuable piece of property. His brother George buys the tax lien by agreeing to carry the amount of indebtedness at the absurd rate of one-quarter of one per cent. a year. Then there is a default and the foreclosure suit is instituted. If the sale is had the property will go back to the Gould family for a song."

The property is worth more than $800,000.

SHE WANTS OLYMPIA HERE.

Girl Enlists McAneny's Aid to Get Sailor—Up to Daniels Now.

As Acting Mayor McAneny took office yesterday he received a strange request. Miss Rosie Hicks, who lives in Brooklyn, sent him a letter asking him to help bring her sweetheart here. He is on the U. S. S. Olympia, and so she wants to make sure that that warship will be in the naval review. Here is her request:

"Just a few lines to ask you a favor. Will you kindly have Mr. Daniels of the navy bring the Olympia, Dewey's flagship, here for the review. I have a sweetheart on her, and it is six months since he went on her. I think he is going soon to the Fair, and Heaven knows when he will be here again. I know you will try and have her here, and the people would like to see her here for a few days.

"Hoping you will try your best to have her here. Please excuse me for asking this favor. Good luck and best wishes to you."

The Acting Mayor, remembering the Secretary's kindness to young officers in their love affairs, has forwarded the leter to him.

MILK WRECK IN BROADWAY.

When an automobile truck carrying 165 cans of milk turned out to avoid a barricade erected for the new subway at Broadway and Thirty-seventh Street yesterday morning the rear wheels ripped up thirty feet of the street planking and sank down into the hole formed in the middle of the street.

The chauffeur, Charles McCarri of 353 East Twenty-third Street, and his helper, Daniel Melinus of 536 East Thirteenth Street, were thrown off the automobile and suffered slight bruises and contusions.

Traffic on the north and south bound tracks on Broadway was blocked for an hour, until the milk cans could be removed and the truck pushed to the street level. More than fifty cans of the milk were spilled. Laborers on the subway assisted in clearing the tracks.

KIDNAPS HER FATHER MOTHER SUES IN VAIN

HABEAS CORPUS WRIT FAILS

In an effort to get back her husband, who is 72 years old, Mrs. Henry Heik of 272 Fifty-fifth Street, Brooklyn, appeared before Justice Crane in the Supreme Court, that borough, yesterday in habeas corpus proceedings directed against her daughter, Mrs. Minnie Meyer of 518 Forty-eighth Street. Mrs. Heik said that her husband was kidnapped from the second-story window of his home and taken to the home of Mrs. Meyer, where "he is now imprisoned and restraint of his liberty."

Mr. and Mrs. Heik have been married forty-two years. She returned home last Friday night at 10 o'clock and missed her husband. She and her son Harry searched the house in vain. A neighbor told her that an hour earlier her aged husband had gone away with Mrs. Meyer in an automobile.

"I do not understand that a wife can bring a proceeding to get the custody of her husband, no matter how old he is, so long as he has not been declared incompetent," said Justice Crane. "If the courts put husbands in the custody of their wives a man might be brought up in a proceeding like this if he stepped out to the club for a game of cards.

"If a man is of sound mind he may go where he likes and live where he likes, even if he is 90 years old, and his family have no right in him or of him, such as is claimed here. But if it be shown that Mr. Heik is kept by his daughter against his will and wants to go to his wife's home, then I shall direct that the daughter let him go."

Mrs. Meyer admitted that she took her father from his home.

"I called to see him that evening," she said, "and he begged me not to leave him. He said I was the only human one of his family. With the aid of a friend I took him out of his room on the second floor of his home, through the window and across a shed to the ground. Then I sent a messenger for an automobile and, when it came I took him to my house."

According to Mrs. Heik, her husband is wealthy. She charged that her daughter tried to obtain a loan of $2,000 from her father on a forged deed. The mother also declared that her daughter had not visited her father in two years. Mrs. Meyer denied these charges.

To the surprise of Mrs. Heik, the witness admitted that she frequently visited her father at night in the last year when he was alone, and that she entered the house by a key which she had unknown to her mother.

Justice Crane ordered that Heik be brought before him at 2 o'clock this afternoon. After questioning him, the Justice will let him decide for himself whether he wants to remain with his daughter or return to his wife.

SURE HENRY C. COE HAS BEEN FOUND

Father Gets New Message from Fairbanks, Alaska, with Description That Fits Son.

THINKS MIND IS CLOUDED

Standard Oil Employe Missing Since January Is Reported to be in the Hardware Business.

After he had read a 150-word telegram from Fairbanks, Alaska, describing the man who detectives reported last week to be Henry Clarke Coe, Jr., missing since Jan. 30, Dr. Henry Clarke Coe, 8 West Seventy-sixth Street, said last night there was no longer any doubt in his mind that his son had been found, and he added that the young man would soon be back with his family. The message, which was relayed by wireless from the interior town of Fairbanks to the Alaskan coast, and thence cabled to Seattle, said Coe was in good health and engaged in th ehardware business. It also contained an adequate description of young Coe's appearance.

Dr. Coe said last night he believed the man who wrote the telegram had seen his son, but he thought that, although the son might be well physically, he was not well mentally.

"I am confident the man in Fairbanks is my son," he said, "and words cannot tell how glad I am that he has been found. However, I think his mind is clouded, or we would have heard from him.

"There is nothing wonderful about the way he was found. The Harry Burns Detective Agency flooded Alaska and the Northwest with posters describing him and showing his portrait. It was through one of these posters he was found.

"It is impossible for me to go to Alaska now, but the Burns people will send a man at once to bring back my son. I am convinced he is not able to return alone or he would have done so. No one in the family has heard from him, except what the detectives have told us and what the telegram tonight said."

Dr. Coe branded as a canard the story that there had been an estragement between him and his daughter-in-law, the wife of the missing man.

"I am deeply incensed over the story," he said, "for it is cruelly absurd. There is no excuse or foundation for it. Our relations are, and have been, most cordial. To show the falsity of the report, I spent the last week-end in Boston with my son's wife and their child."

Coe was a trusted employe of the Standard Oil Company's Boston office. His friends supposed he was most happy. On the morning of Jan. 30 last he kissed his wife goodby in their home at Allston, Mass, and that was the last his family has seen of him. Several weeks after his disappearance Dr. Coe and other members of the family engaged the services of the Harry Burns Detective Agency of Boston, and the search for the missing man was made world-wide. He was traced across continent, the trails becoming hot, and then cold. He was once almost found in North Dakota. From there his trail led to the Pacific Coast, where it was lost, until last week a correspondent of the detective agency, who had seen a photograph of the missing man, reported he was in Fairbanks.

At the time of Coe's disappearance the theory was advanced that he had become mentally unbalanced because of worry over the condition of his wife, who bore him a child shortly after he left home. The theory was also advanced that he was concerned over business matters.

$235,000 HOLBEIN BOUGHT BY FRICK

Box Which Aroused Comment on the Philadelphia Contained Famous Painting.

PORTRAIT OF CROMWELL

Henry C. Frick confirmed yesterday the statement that he was the purchaser of the painting which arrived from England on Sunday on the American liner Philadelphia, and was marked in the manifest at a value of $235,000. The exact price that Mr. Frick paid for the picture has not been made public. The painting was a portrait by Holbein of Thomas Cromwell, Chancellor of Henry VIII., painted in 1534. At the time Cromwell had succeeded Cardinal Wolsey in power with the King, it was said that the portrait attracted the attention of King Henry, who appointed Holbein the court painter.

When the Philadelphia arrived on Sunday, there was nothing either on the manifest or on the wooden case, in which the picture was packed, to indicate the identity of the consignee, or the consignor. Purser Irvine said that the painting had been shipped on board at Liverpool to be kept in the specie room until New York was reached. At one corner of the case there was a printed label bearing the name of Chenou, 10 St. Andrew's Street, London.

At 10 o'clock yesterday morning the painting was taken from the specie room of the Philadelphia, under the direction of the purser and transferred to the delivery room on the pier, where it will remain until sent for by the purchaser. At the Custom House yesterday it was said the picture could be brought in free of duty under two counts, according to the United States revenu elaws; first, as a work of art, more than 100 years old, or as original painting, which is entitled to b ebrought in free of duty.

It is understood that Mr. Frick purchased the picture for the collection that he is forming at his new home, Fifth Avenue and Seventieth Street, for which he recently bought the Fragonard paintings from the Morgan collection.

The portrait was purchased from the collection of Sir Hugh Lane, who had it hung in the place of honor in the gallery at his home, Lindsey House, Cheyne Walk, London. The painting was packed in a wooden case four fet by six feet. It is understood that the purchase was made through Sir Charles Allom, a well-known decorator of London, who recently established offices in this city at 19 East Fifty-second Street.

FIND LAWSON GUILTY OF STRIKE MURDER

JURY OUT SINCE SATURDAY

Labor Unions Defended Prisoner, Who Is a Member of Executive Board of United Mine Workers.

TRINIDAD, Col., May 3.—John R. Lawson, member of the International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers of America, today was found guilty of murder in the first degree in connection with the death at Ludlow, Col., Oct. 25, 1913, of John Nimmo, a Deputy Sheriff. Lawson was sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor in the Colorado penitentiary. Under the Colorado statutes, the jury, which had been deliberating since Saturday night, was empowered to return a sentence of death or life imprisonment. Attorneys for the defense received thirty days to file a motion for a new trial, and Lawson was released temporarily in custody of his counsel.

Tonight Judge Granby Hillyer said he had not decided whether Lawson will be allowed to remain at liberty pending the outcome of the filing of a motion for a new trial. Lawson himself remained at a local hotel, and talked quite philosophically of the verdict. He said:

"They may get me, but they can't defeat the cause of labor. I'm not worrying about myself—it's the fight I have been making for the workingmen that I am interested in, and that will go ahead. Even for me it's a long way to the penitentiary. My attorneys will not give up until everything possible has been done to save me."

Horace N. Hawkins, chief counsel for the defense, said:

"I do not believe the verdict ever will be sustained. It is contrary to the evidence. I shall fight this case as long as there are courts in which to fight."

John Nimmo was killed in a battle between deputies and striking coal miners near Ludlow on Oct. 25, 1913. Lawson was one of the leaders in the strike.

Violence began early in the strike, which was called for Sept. 23. There was a series of clashes in the Ludlow and Forbes neighborhood, and on Oct. 29 the National Guard of Colorado, on orders from Governor E. M. Ammons, took possession of the coal-mining districts.

It was in one of the Ludlow fights before the arrival of the State Militia that John Nimmo was killed. Nimmo was one of a force of deputies stationed at the Ludlow section house under command of K. E. Linderfelt. Linderfelt, a witness for the prosecution, said the deputies were ordered by the then Sheriff, James S. Grisham, to preserve order and prevent trouble between strikers and mine guards. Early in the afternoon of Oct. 25, 1913, a fight started between these deputies and a large body of strikers. Firing raged in the arroyos and railroad cuts until evening. Sometime during the battle Nimmo was shot through the leg, bleeding to death.

Lawson was charged with the homicide on the theory of the prosecution that he was in charge of the tent colony and in command of the strikers during the battle. The prosecution was under direction of Attorney General Fred Farrar of the State of Colorado. Frank West and Norton Montgomery, assistants to the Attorney General, represented the State in court. Counsel for the defense consisted of Horace N. Hawkins, chief attorney for the United Mine Workers; Edward P. Costigan, Fred W. Clark, and O. H. Dasher. The case was tried before Judge Cranby Hillyer in the District Court of Las Animas County.

DENVER, May 3.—Fred Farrar, Attorney General of Colorado, commenting upon the conviction of John R. Lawson, said:

"I think this is the first case on record where one of the leaders of a union has been convicted of crimes of violence arising from the conduct of a strike. The McNamara case was based upon a confession. The Lawson case was not."

TREATS ZOO LION'S MOUTH.

Keeper, Removing Bone Splinter, Cures Akaba of Central Park.

Akaba, one of the young lions in the Central Park Zoo, and one of the special pets of the headkeeper, Bill Snyder, was not feeling well on Sunday. His good humor deserted him, and instead of furnishing an example of dignity to the thousands who visited the lionhouse, he fretted, paced back and forth behind the bars, and gave every evidence of being in distress.

Snyder could not understand what was the matter with his friend. The lions are not few on Sunday, so he knew it could not be indigestion that was troubling Akaba. The keepers watched the animal with some anxiety, but were unable to diagnose his ailment. Snyder decided to wait until yesterday morning for a closer inspection of his charge.

When the keepers went on duty they found Akaba frantic with pain, and lashing himself into a state of nervous exhaustion. Then they decided to treat the lion. Chloroform was tabooed, because Akaba is too fine a specimen of his kind to take chances with. Snyder said he would have tried the twilight sleep, but he did not know how to administer the treatment.

It was decided to tie the lion up, a task which was easier said than done, as the keepers soon found out. Akaba was sick, but he did not intend to submit to such humiliating treatment. For nearly three hours the entire force of animal men worked before they got the lion lassoed and tied up so that Snyder could approach closely enough to examine him. With the assistance of several stout sticks, he managed to get Akaba's mouth open. A sharp splinter of bone was found wedged between the lion's teeth. It had been causing intense pain.

The splinter was removed and Akaba soon shook himself free of the ropes. Ten minutes later he had regained his air of dignified composure.

SENDING AGENT TO HAITI.

Fuller Will Try to Arrange Treaty to Settle Haitien Debt.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Paul Fuller, Jr., of New York, son of the New York lawyer who was one of the unofficial investigators for the Wilson Administration in Mexico, called at the White House tonight with Secretary Bryan, to receive final instructions prior to departing for Haiti, where he will endeavor to effect a treaty arrangement that will give to the United States Government control over the collection of the Haitien customs revenues, with a view to the application of part of them to the liquidation of Haiti's foreign indebtedness. The arrangement sought is similar to that which was put into effect in the Dominican Republic in the Roosevelt Administration.

Mr. Fuller's mission is regarded as of great importance. He will make the effort in the face of much discouragement, for the United States has been trying without success to bring about an arrangement for American collection and supervision of Haitien customs revenues. Not long ago ex-Governor Fort of New Jersey was sent to Haiti by the Wilson Administration to seek to effect the arrangement desired, but he met with obstacles and returned without a treaty or assurances that one would be negotiated.

In connection with Mr. Fuller's mission, it was learned that very recently the United States Government renewed its efforts to adjust the foreign debt of Haiti on the basis of the establishment of an American customs receivership, but that the attempt was futile, because of the attitude of the French Government.

In seeknig to provide for a customs receivership, this Government has insisted that it shall be under sole American control. To a proposal of that character the French Government, which was concerned by reason of the fact that much of Haiti's foreign debt is owed to French citizens, demurred, insisting that France be represented in the receivership. On a previous occasion the German Government had declined to consent to an arrangement.

The persistent course of this Government is attributed to an anxious desire to adjust the Haitien debt before the end of the European war so that the possibility of foreign complications may have been removed when the warring nations have closed their present struggle and, with large armies of veterans available, may be disposed to settle smaller affairs that have been causes of irritation.

RESUME LABOR INQUIRIES.

Industrial Commission Summons Noted Witnesses to Hearings.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—In hearings to be conducted before the United States Industrial Commission in the next three weeks the commission will conclude some unfinished investigations. The inquiry into the Colorado strike will be reopened, and on May 18 John D. Rockefeller, Jr., will be called to explain the charges made against him by Frank P. Walsh, the Chairman of the commission.

Among the other subjects to be taken up will be the conditions prevailing in the Pullman car service, with reference especially to the treatment of conductors and porters. The chief witness to be heard in this case will be ex-Secretary of War Robert T. Lincoln.

The operations of the Pennsylvania constabulary will be taken up, to ascertain the methods pursued in strike situations and to determine the truth or falsity of charges made by labor organizations that the force is brutal and barbarous in its performance of its police duties.

Labor conditions in Porto Rico will also be a subject of inquiry. The officers of the American Federation of Labor have charged that the United States Government and the local police have pursued a course which has discriminated in favor of employers and against workingmen.

The general subject of labor and the law will come up for discussion next week. Among those who will be called to give their views are Judge Alton B. Parker, Eugene V. Debs, Police Commissioner Arthur Woods of New York, Mother Jones, William Haywood of the Western Federation of Miners, ex-Judge E. M. Cullen, Clarence S. Darrow of Chicago, and President Frank J. Goodnow of Johns Hopkins University.

The hearings tomorrow will deal with the Order of Railway Telegraphers on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

MANUFACTURER A SUICIDE.

John F. Garlanad, President of Garland, Fisher & Co., manufacturing jewelers, of 520 Mulberry Street, Newark, ended his life yesterday in Branch Brook Park in Newark by shooting himself in the head. He had been despondent over financial difficulties.

Mrs. Garland said yesterday that her husband started drinking about two months ago, when he became worried over business troubles. As a result of his excessive drinking, Mrs. Garland said, she was forced to take her two children and go to live with a friend at 174 North Seventh Street. Garland came to the house late Sunday night and stayed all night, leaving early yesterday morning. Mrs. Garland said that she and her husband had not spoken to each other for more than a week. For several weeks Garland had been carrying a revolver, and had threatened to commit suicide.

Garland was 50 years old and had been married about eleven years. He was born in Jefferson, S. C.

Husband's Loss Put at $100,000.

Mrs. Belle G. Brouner, widow of William H. Brouner, brought suit yesterday in the Federal District Court through her counsel, Hitchings & Burdick, of 100 William Street, against the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company for $100,000 damages on account of the loss of her husband. He was earning $15,000 a year, but he was injured so seriously when the White Mountain Express on Sept. 1, 1913, ran into the Bar Harbor Express that he died some months later. Mrs. Brouner was left with two daughters, Coralie H. and Dorothy H. Brouner.

HOMICIDE BUREAU GETS ITS FIRST TEST

FACTS QUICKLY OBTAINED

When Oresto Bruno was found dead yesterday in his apartment at 576 East Sixteenth Street with several knife wounds in his body, the police thought they had a murder case to solve, and for the first time the new system of cooperation between the District Attorney's Homicide Bureau and the Police Department was practically demonstrated. It turned out to be a case of suicide. Bruno had eloped eight years ago from Morsala, Sicily, with Angeleno Grosso, the wife of the town's Mayor, and after continued quarrels and fights he had ended his life.

With the customary delays obviated by the new system it did not take the police long to discover that it was only a case of suicide. From their various stations of duty the officials arrived at the scene, and without waiting for the findings of the Coroner and the County Medical Examiner, they worked gathering evidence and rounding up witnesses. Not a moment was lost.

The janitor of the house had notified Policeman Walters of the East Twenty-second Street Station that Mrs. Grosso had reported her rooms locked, and that she suspected harm had come to Bruno. The policeman went to the apartment, and, finding the doors locked, he climbed a fire escape. He found the windows nailed up, and he had to break the window to get in. The body of Bruno was in a corner of the kitchen. The man was in a half-crouching, half-kneeling position as though he had gradually dropped to the floor while trying to support himself by clutching at the kitchen wall.

Policeman Walters obeyed the latest order of the Police Commissioner by not leaving the body or allowing other to enter the rom. Another policeman telephoned to the station house, and a few seconds later the Lieutenant on duty was calling up the Second Branch Detective Bureau, at Forty-second Street and Lexington Avenue; the Homicide Bureau, at Police Headquarters; the Coroners' office, the District Attorney's Homicide Bureau, and to Bellevue Hospital, with the request that an ambulance be sent. Dr. Bohrer of Bellevue arrived first, and he said the Sicilian had been dead several hours. Then came Captain Gildea of the Second Branch and some of his detectives. Following him were Inspector Faurot, the finger-print expert; Coroner Feinberg, Dr. Otto Schultze, the new County Medical Examiner; Coroners' Physician McAllister, Assistant District Attorney Follette, and Captain Carey of the Homicide Squad.

Inspector Faurot at once began the search for possible fingerprint clues, while Captains Carey and Gildea began to round up possible witnesses and to find out what they could about the pair who had occupied the few rooms. Assistant District Attorney Follette interrogated those who were brought in by the police. All this time Dr. Schultze and Dr. McAllister were examining the body and dictating to a stenographer facts regarding surroundings as they found them. Quietly, effectively, and apparently without friction the various officials worked until it was established that Bruno had not been murdered.

On the floor they found a bread-knife without a handle, another knife and beside the body were two black side combs.

Mrs. Grosso is about 50 years old, fifteen years older than the dead man. She said that on Sunday she and Bruno had quarreled and the woman left. She returned home about 11:30 o'clock Sunday night and found the door of the flat locked. Unable to get in she went to the janitor and he refused to open the door. She then obtained a chair and spent the night in a vacant flat on the same floor.

Shortly before noon yesterday she again called upon the janitor to open the door. Instead of doing so, he called in a policeman and Bruno's body was found. She said that she dropped the combs upon the floor where they were found during a struggle with Bruno before she fled on Saturday night.

The man had two superficial stab wounds and a deep wound where the knife had reached his heart. There was a long cut across his right hand, but the police believe this was inflicted when he grasped the knife, which was without a handle.

The couple had been in this country two years. Bruno sometimes worked as a machinist and sometimes as a tailor.

TESTIFIES WOOER DREW GUN

But Servant Says Even Offer to Dry Dishes Failed to Win Her.

Miss Mary Karel of South Orange, N. J., swore yesterday that she did not make love to J. Fred Bailer of 163 New Jersey Avenue, Brooklyn, as the latter testified last week. On the contrary, the witness testified yesterday, he had mugged and kissed her, and once had produced a revolver whileasking her to marry him. Miss Karel's testimony was given at a further hearing before Judge Martin in the Orphans' Court in Newark, N. J., of the contest over the will of Mrs. Margaretha Traitteur of 70 Court Street, Newark.

Miss Karel was for twenty-seven years in Mrs. Traitteur's employ, and under the terms of the will she is to receive nearly one-fourth of the testatrix's $175,000 estate. Others who will get similar legacies are Adolph W. Burchard of 162 Smith Street, Newark, an old-time friend of the decendent, and two nieces, Miss Elizabeth Fortsch and Mrs. Margaretha Reilly of New York. Bailer, a grandson, is bequeathed $12,000, and he has attacked the will.

Miss Karel testified that about five years ago Bailer visited his grandmother's home and, upon finding her away, drew a gun and told Miss Karel that he wanted her to get married "on the sly." The witness testified that she replied that if she was ever to be married, she would do it openly. She said that frequently when Bailer visited there, he would attempt to embrace and kiss her, and that he sometimes succeeded, although she resisted his advances. On one occasion he followed her into the kitchen, where he declared his love and wanted to help her dry the dinner dishes.

Miss Karel denied that she ever made any advances to Bailer or that she ever suggested their marriage.

TWO SCHOOLGIRLS MISSING.

Left Their Passaic Homes Saturday and Parents Fear They Ran Away.

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., May 3.—The police and school authorities are searching for Dorothy Wallace, 13 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Wallace of 372 River Drive, and Philippine Schoch, about the same ago, of 335 River Drive, who have not been seen here since they left their homes on Saturday morning with lunch baskets, telling their families that they were going to a picnic of girls of School 3, which they attended.

When the children did not return on Saturday evening their families called up mothers of other children at the school, and learned that the picnic was not to be held until the following Saturday. A search of the city and of the roads and picnic grounds near the city was made without result. One child at the school said that Philippine had told her that she was going to Canada. Others said that Dorothy, too, had talked of running away.

On Saturday the Wallace girl wore a black and white check skirt and a white middy blouse, with red and blue stars on the collar, and carried a sweater. She is tall and slender with blue eyes. Philippine, who is short and stocky, wore a tan suit, a black and white blazar, and black shoes.

WOUNDED DOCTOR IS DYING.

Friends of New Jersey Physicians Say He Didn't Shoot Himself.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., May 3.—Dr. John Cameron Anderson of 43 Union Street, Montclair, who was found on Saturday at Eagle Rock suffering from a bullet wound just above his heart, was reported tonight to be near death in the Orange Memorial Hospital. Dr. Anderson is a retired physician, who was for years consulting surgeon at St. Francis Hospital, Brooklyn. His relatives and friends believe that the doctor accidentally shot himself and did not attempt suicide. Two men found Dr. Anderson unconscious in the underbrush with an automatic pistol and a box of cartridges beside him.

Mrs. Anderson said today her husband had been ailing. Saturday after dinner he left the house to take a walk. She said he was fond of shooting, and he always carried a pistol.

"Our home life has always been happy," said the wife. "The doctor is devoted to his family. Two years ago he gave up his practice, and a year ago, because of ill-health, he took a trip around the world."

To Quit as Manchester Trustee.

Harry B. Hollins of the bankrupt banking house of H. B. Hollins & Co. yesterday petitioned the Surrogates' Court for permission to resign as Trustee of the estate of Consuelo, the Dowager Duchess of Manchester. The pending bankruptcy proceeding is given by Mr. Hollins as the reason for his request. The other Trustees are the United States Trust Company and Frederick Ogden Beach of Aiken, S. C.

Burglary Next Detective Bureau.

A burglar forced open the door of a grocery store kept by Emil Raichenberg at 340 West 123d Street on Sunday and stole $100. The theft has furnished a problem for the detectives of the Fourth Branch without taking them far afield, for the store is next door to the Detective Bureau.

ELECTION DEFECT CURED BY JERSEY

Legislature Corrects Flaw in the Act for Vote on Suffrage Amendments.

HOLDS A SPECIAL SESSION

Balloting Fixed for Oct. 19, Too Late to Make Woman Suffrage Effective This Year.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., May 3.—The Legislature, meeting in special session here today, repealed the Constitutional election bill enacted in the closing hours of the regular session two weeks ago, and passed a substitute that had been approved by Attorney General Wescott. Everybody is now satisfied, but it took the Senators and Assemblymen about twelve hours to do the job.

Taking advantage of the opportunity, Governor Fielder sent to the Senate his appointments to the new board of shell fisheries, as created under the economy any efficiency programme. The nominations follow: Joseph Fowler, Cumberland County, two years; Alfred B. Smith, Atlantic County, one year; Charles R. Covert, Cumberland County, one year; Thomas J. Gaskill, Burlington County, two years; Augustus J. Meerwald, ape May County, three years; John W. Mason, Monmouth County, three years; Peter C. Cozier, Cumberland County, four years; Frank R. Austin, Ocean County, four years.

The Governor also announced the reappointment of William H. Chew of Salem County as a member of the State Board of Health, Frank Frasier of Tuckerton, and George W. Hollingsworth of Barnegat as members of the Ocean County Oyster Commission, and George A. Mott of Tuckerton as Ocean County Oyster Superintendent.

The new Constitutional Election bill does not change the date originally set, and the balloting will take place on Oct. 19, the last registry day for the general election in November. This precludes the possibility of women voting this Fall, even if the proposed suffrage amendment is adopted.

When both houses convened shortly after noon the Governor sent them a message, pointing out the errors in the Election bill that had been passed and urging the passage of the Repealing bill and the substitute Election bill, both of which had been prepared by the Attorney General.

Senator Read of Camden, Republican floor leader, who introduced the original bill which the Attorney General held to be unworkable, opposed the bills, offering instead, a bill designed to amend the one he had put in at the regular session and which became law.

Senator McGinnis of Passaic, offered the Attorney General's measures as a substitute, but they were voted down, and the Read amending bill was passed. It was sent to the Assembly and during it's consideration there it was discovered that the new Read bill was unconstitutional in that it did not amend the original bill as required by the Constitution.

Anxious that there should be no further trouble, Speaker Godfrey named Assemblymen Runyon, Pilgrim, Barradale, Kates, and Peacock as a committee to put the matter before the Attorney General. The result of this conference was that the Attorney General's repealer and substitute bill were passed in the Assembly as substitutes for the Read Amending bill.

By that time it was almost 7 o'clock in the evening and the Senate had taken a recess for dinner. Both houses got together again at 8 o'clock, and the Senate passed the two Westcott bills after much bickering. They were then returned to the Assembly and forwarded by that body to the Governor.

Three other bills were introduced in the Senate, but were smothered in committee. At the regular session a law was enacted authorizing the appointment of an additional Circuit Court Judge, and two bills amending the appropriation bills so as to provide a salary for the proposed official were put in today. The other bill introduced was offered by Senator Ackerson and provided $30,000 for the building of bulkheads at Seabright to prevent damage by stormy seas. The Legislature decided not to transact any business other than that necessary to remedy the Constitutional election situation, and adjourned.

Senator Godfrey invited the members of the Assembly and the newspapermen to be his guests in Atlantic City on May 22.

Senate President Edge will become acting Governor on Saturday morning, when the oath will be administered by Chancellor Walker. Governor Fielder will leave the State that day for California, where he will attend the exposition. He will be gone until June 6.

With representatives in attendance from twenty-seven branch organizations having an aggregate membership of 13,787, the New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage formally opened here today the campaign that will be waged until Oct. 19, when the proposed woman suffrage amendment to the Constitution will be put before the voters. There was a business session in the morning, followed by a luncheon and speechmaking.

Miss Anna L. Dayton of this city was elected Honorary President, and Mrs. Yarde Breese of Trenton was retained as President. Other officers were chosen as follows:

Vice-Presidents—Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, Jr., Princeton; Mrs. Garret A. Hobart, Paterson; Mrs. John Emery, Morristown; Miss Anna McIlvaine, Trenton; Mrs. H. O. Magie, Elizabeth; Mrs. Thomas J. Oravan, Salem; Mrs. William Libbey, Princeton; Miss Clara A. Vesin, Elizabeth; Mrs. Karl C. Roebling, Trenton; Mrs. Sherman B. Joost, Plainfield; Mrs. William S. Stryker, Trenton; Mrs. Henry M. Darcey, Newark; Mrs. Theodore C. Woodbury, Orange.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. R. C. Maxwell, Trenton.

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Ellsworth Corbett.

General Secretary—Mrs. O. D. Oliphant, Trenton.

Treasurer—Mrs. George B. Yard, Trenton.

Miss Vesin was named as Chairman of the Legislative Committee, Mrs. Darcey as Chairman of the Press Committee, and Mrs. Constance Moore of Plainfield Chairman of the Finance Committee.

Among the speakers were Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge of New York, President of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, and Mrs. Horace Brock of Philadelphia, President of the Pennsylvania Association.

TO DIVORCE RUNAWAY WIFE.

Ridgefield Banker Names Former Friend as Co-respondent.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., May 3.—Making affidavit to the effect that he did not believe Mrs. Lillian Lozier was in the State of New Jersey, Sheriff Robert N. Heath today returned the divorce papers of Cyrus J. Lozier, banker and builder of Ridgefield Park, to his lawyers, Campbell & De Turck. This was the first information of any divorce prpceedings following the disappearance of Mrs. Lozier on the evening of April 12. Lozier names as co-respondent Harry Vanderbeck, a former friend of the banker, also a contracting builder, who left his wife and home on the same day Mrs. Lozier disappeared.

The petition states that Mrs. Lozier and Vanderbeck were together at the Hotel Holland, Beacon, Dutchess County, N. Y., on April 13 and 14. The petition also mentions dates prior to the elopement in Ridgefield Park.

From the train Vanderbeck mailed to his wife deeds covering all his real estate in Ridgefield Park, valued at $80,000, but already all of this has been attached by Sheriff Heath to cover several claims. It is understood that Pinkerton detectives have been following the missing couple since they were seen at Beacon.

The Loziers had been married fifteen years. The Vanderbecks and Loziers were always together on auto rides and on threatre parties. Vanderbeck owes Lozier $3,000.

Autoist Kills Girl; Fined $500.

HACKENSACK, N. J., May 3.—J. Theodore De Mund, whose auto killed little Frieda Almquist of Ridgewood, was fined $500 today by Judge Seufert of Hackensack. De Mund, who was driving the auto, was convicted of assault and battery. William B. Mackay, Jr., counsel for De Mund, served notice of appeal, and the case will go to the Supreme Court. This is the first conviction of its kind in Bergen County.

If—

there were but one photograph of the great steel column that charged up the plateau of Mt. St. Jean at Waterloo it would be the prize of the art world.

But there are no records of this defeated charge from a camera. It is upon the imagination of artists we depend. Now, however, the greatest of all wars is recorded imperishably by modern photography!

Are you keeping such a vivid record of this cataclysm?

For ten cents a week you can obtain the Mid-Week Pictorial of The New York Times at any news stand. It is a selection of the finest war pictures—printed in the browns and greens of rotogravure.

WHITMAN SEEKS WAY TO LOWER STATE TAX

Decides to Hold Public Hearings Next Week on Big Budget He Wants to Cut.

TAKES HINT FROM GLYNN

Will Let Taxpayers Question Heads of State Department, and May Call Special Session.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 3.—Aroused by the criticism of his financial policy, entailing a direct tax levy of more than $19,000,000, Governor Whitman announced today that throughout next week he would give a series of public hearings on the financial bills passed by the Legislature in the closing moments of the session and now before him for approval.

The article on State finances from the pen of Mr. Whitman's predecessor, Martin H. Glynn, which appeared in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday, is regarded generally at the capital as being in part responsible for the Governor's novel plan. In this article, Mr. Glynn assailed the claim that the huge direct tax was necessary; and flatly asserted that Governor Whitman's ignorance of State finances had been taken advantage of by the Republican legislative leaders.

It was elearned tonight from a source close to Governor Whitman that a recent examination of the financial bills by an expert who went over them at the Governor's request had much to do with his decision.

It was asserted that the Governor had made up his mind to use the pruning knife unsparingly, and that if the result should justify such a course he would call an extraordinary session of the Legislature to enact a revised Direct Tax bill with a lower rate than 1.7 mills, which the bill now before him provides.

Nearly all of the bills carrying large appropriations were in process of construction until shortly before the Legislature was ready to adjourn finally. As a matter of fact, they were passed in the eleventh hour of the dying session. Few of the legislators who voted on the bills after the Governor's emergency message had been read knew just what items were embodied in them. The men in the Legislature who had had the most to do with shaping the measures were not able to give with any degree of accuracy the grand total of the chief financial bills—the General Appropriation bill and the Supply bill.

In a general way the claim was made that $500,000 had been cut from salaries in the various State departments. This statement was accepted at the time as setting forth a net saving. It was said tonight that close scrutiny on the part of Governor Whitman's experts had revealed increases in other departments which more than offset the saving in others. Governor Whitman, it is said, is anxious to learn how the original claim can be justified.

An official close to the Governor said tonight that he felt convinced that from $400,000 to $500,000 could be cut from the appropriations made for various State departments. The Excise Department has received $116,00 more than it received from last year's Legislature. This department will be under Republican auspices from the beginning of the fiscal year. The reorganized Tax Department has obtained $100,000 more than was provided for the department last year. The Secretary of State receives $35,000, the Attorney General $19,000, and the Banking Department $47,000 in excess of the appropriations of last year.

In the budegt for this year there are special Appropriations bills with items aggregating $8,208,000, including one item for repair and maintenance of highways of $5,951,000, which, it is believed, will come in for close scrutiny by Governor Whitman.

According to the announcement made today the Governor intends to summon the head of every State Department before him, and question him closely with regard to the necessity for the increased appropriations in a year when economy was the watchword.

The hearings on the financial bills are scheduled to begin on Monday, and to continue throughout the week. William A. Orr, secretary to the Governor, is preparing a schedule of the hearings.

It was announced today that every taxpayer who cared to come to the Capitol would have an opportunity to be heard, and a chance also to heckle the department heads, who will be before the Governor to explain the needs of their departments.

There is no precedent in the history of the State for the policy adopted by Governor Whitman in dealing with the appropriation bills, and it is predicted that the "standing-room-only" sign will be hung out in front of the Executive Chamber on the days of the hearings.

Acting Mayor McAneny expressed much gratification yesterday when he heard that the Governor had acceded to Mayor Mitchel's request and was going to grant hearings on the financial bills. He was unable to say, however, whether he would himself go up to Albany to protest against some of the items in the hope of cutting down the direct tax.

Discussing yesterday the financial bills as they stand, Mr. McAneny said that they amounted to more than $93,000,000, to which must be added the $27,000,000 for canal construction, which might be granted by the referendum in November. Together these reach the total of $120,000,000—more than twice the appropriations of 1910.

The total of the $93,000,000 now before Governor Whitman includes $18,112,938.87 for expenditures from bond issues on canal and highway construction $10,000,000 for reappropriations of money already appropriated but not expended, and $65,000,000 for the general appropriation and supply and special bills. These totals had been reached, Mr. McAneny pointed out, without the State undertaking any new activities.

When the appropriations were examined closely, Mr. McAneny said, it seemed that no less than $8,000,000 was accounted for by salaries, which had been increased, and new places that had been created.

SCHIFF CALLS EMIGRANTS.

Hopes 2,000,000 Jews Will Settle West of the Mississippi.

Jacob H. Echiff, just returned from a tour of seven weeks in the West, where, he said, he found the Jewish people hapier than ever before, in an address which aroused much enthusiasm at the annual meeting of the Educational Alliance last night, called upon all Jews to unite to meet the conditions brought about by the European conflict. He said that the West was ready to welcome the Jews ,and that he hoped that at least 2,000,000 would emigrate from abroad to the country west of the Mississippi, where there was a land of plenty awaiting them.

The guest of honor was Sholom Aleichem (Solomon Rabinowitz) the Hebrew and Yiddish author often been referred to as the Yiddish Mark Twain. He was received with an outburst of applause, which lasted for several minutes. His address, given in Yiddish, was the expression of the hope that the Jews would emigrate on a large scale.

Mr. Schiff said he was glad to appear at this meeting where the atmosphere was that of unity on the part of the Jewish people, no matter from what country they came.

"I wish," he continued, "that my voice could reach across the waters to our more unfortunate people, so that I could say to them 'Peace.'"

His journey in the West, which took him from San Antonio to San Francisco, and thence, by way of Kansas City and Chicago, to New York, was undertaken in part to find out something about the sentiment in the United States toward the Jews. Everywhere he went, he said, he found the sentiment kindly, and he added that never before had he been so glad that he was a Jew.

"Everywhere I found them happy," he said, "and more are coming. They must make ready for many more of us who will come here after the war. I am glad that Judge Greenbaum said there was no division among the German Jew and the Russian Jew and the Turkish Jew. If we want to be successful in solving the Jewish problem, we can only be successful as American Jews. More than ever this is the time to be unified."

Judge Samuel Greenbaum, President of the Alliance, read a report which showed that the expenditures for the year ended June 30, 1914, were $110,681, and the income $103,028. The alliance, he said, now had 2,622 members. The retiring Directors were selected for another term.

There were addresses by the Rev. Harris Masliansky and Professor Israel Friedlander. Among those on the platform were Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Isidor Straus and Professor Gottlieb of Columbia.

WANTS AMERICAN HELP.

Panama, Says Banker Feraud, Will Make Plea at Washington.

Ramon Arias Feraud, Jr., general manager and Vice-President of the Bank of the Canal Zone, with headquarters at Colon and a branch in Panama City, arrived last night on the United States steamship Tenadores, as one of the delegates from the Panama Republic to the Pan-American Financial Conference in Washington on May 24. The other delegates, Dr. Estedas Arjona, Secretary of Finance, and Ramon Acevedo, general manager of the National Bank of Panama, will arrive later by way of New Orleans, he said.

Mr. Feraud said the contention of the Panamaian delegates would be that their country was not receiving the full benefits of the Canal, but that with the cooperation of the United States Government it would become one of the business centres of the world. By this he meant that Colon and Panama will become naturally great warehousing and transhipping points for the big cargoes which will pass from East to West by the Canal after the war.

"With warehousing," he continued, "necessarily comes banking facilities, and our banks are conducted along American lines. With our finance in a stable condition, the result is bound to be of great benefit to all.

"Despite the financial depression in Europe we have not been obliged to declare a moratorium, and the general business conditions in Panama are good. We need immigrants. There are fertile valleys and river bottoms for agricultural explorers, and there is a fine opportunity for cattle-raising."

Mr. Feraud added that there was no feeling between the soldiers and the Panamaian police over the recent clash, and precautions are being taken in Panama City to prevent such a thing happening again. He was met at the pier by Marion Flurher, Secretary to the Collector of the Port; Captain Halsted Dorey, U. S. A., aide to Major Gen. Leonard Wood, and Lieutenant Ralph P. Craft, U. S. N., aide to Rear Admiral Usher of the Navy Yard.

PROF. H. S. MUNROE RETIRES

It was announced at a meeting of the Trustees of Columbia University yesterday that Henry S. Munroe, Professor of Mining, senior professor in the university, would retire from active service on June 30 next. Professor Munroe began teaching at Columbia July 1, 1877, and under his administration the department of mining has gained a world-wide reputation. No successor has yet been selected.

Steps were taken to provide for the award of the various prizes established by the will of the late Joseph Pulitzer for excellence in journalism, in the American drama, in American music, and in American fiction. Plans are also under consideration for the establishment of instruction in the history of the fine arts, for which provision was made in the will of the late Hugo Reisinger.

The following were appointed as the Board of Managers of the George Crocker Special Fund for Cancer Research for three years from July 1 next: Dr. T. Matlack Cheesman, Dr. Walter Mendelson, President N. M. Butler, Dean Samuel W. Lambert, Professor Warfield T. Longcope, Professor William G. MacCallum, and Professor Francis Carter Wood.

Mlle. Madeleine H. Doby, instructor in French at Wellesley College, was appointed Secretary of the Maison Française, to succeed Mlle. Magdeleine Carret, who will resign at the close of the present academic year.

Professor John Dyneley Prince was transferred from the Chair of Semitic Languages to the newly established Chair of Slavonic Languages. One effect of the European war has been to increase the interest in the study of the Slavonic languages and literatures, particularly Russian, and the task of developing work in these fields has been assigned to Professor Prince.

WOMEN MINISTERS BADLY HANDICAPPED

SHE WAS ONE OF THEM

More than 100 women lawyers and women of other professions as their guests, with a few men thrown in for good luck, gathered at the annual dinner of the Women Lawyers' Association at the Fifth Avenue Restaurant last evening, and had a beautiful time "talking shop." Each of the speakers had a chance to say all that she wanted to about her own profession, and her good and bad luck, and she heard the other women do likewise. The most exciting history was that of the woman minister, Marie Jenney Howe, and she was the one woman who found too many obstacles to keep on with the profession of her choice, though she did not drop it until she had made a success, had builded a church, and raised her own salary.

One thing that the young woman minister can't do, according to Mrs. Howe, is wear pretty clothes ortalk to the young men of her congregation, and the congregation will never allow her to marry. Last night Mrs. Howe was wearing a pretty rose-colored frock, and the Chairwoman, Mrs. Mary M. Lilly, directed attention to the fact that she was also wearing "Mrs." before her name.

"I didn't think there were going to be any men here tonight, and I was going to tell you a great many things, but as it is I will be as confidential as I can, said Mrs. Howe. "They say that one place in which there are equal opportunities for men and women is in the ministry, but it isn't so. In the very first place, you have to go to some little seminary. One could not go to Harvard or any of the crack places, and there are only the freer churcher, the Congregational and its two branches, and the Universalists and the Unitarians who will have women. You can't imagine a woman as a Catholist priest or as an Episcopal minister.

"But finally you are graduated, and then you try to see what you can do. You write to the Trustees of some church to ask if they will give you a chance. No, they will not. They would think it beneath the dignity of their church to have a woman minister. There were six girls who graduated after me, and not one had a single chance, and they all went into other professions. The only way I managed was to give my services for a year to another woman minister. Then I got a little church of seventeen persons at Des Moines, Iowa.

"The only way a woman can ever get a church is to take a wretched, forlorn one that no man would have under any circumstances. I found this one that had not had a minister for years and I took it at $400 a year, a salary no man would ever think of accepting. Well, I got on, and after starting it is easy. I biult a church and built up my salary. You get applauded on all sides. You are one of the sights of the town, and every stranger is taken to see the little woman minister.

"But the life the woman lives is quite differentd from that of the man. Every one knows that when there is a young man minister all the young girls immediately fall in love with him and the old maids make him presents. Not so with the young woman. If she receives a man at her house, married or single, if she is seen walking on the street with one, or if one happens to jump on the car in which she is riding she knows that she is going to receive a little note from the Trustees of the church, will say:

"'My dear young woman, don't you know that the one thing a young woman minister must do is to see that she is not talked about.'

"The young woman minister can't possibly marry. If she does, it is good-by career. No one wants a married woman minister, and then what man would marry her? The church wants all the woman minister's time—every bit of it. Oh, how its loves her! She must do a great deal more work than the man and for half the salary. The women working together in a church will not make between them what would be given to one man in the same position."

Miss Ida Tarbell told the women lawyers that she thought that their profession and hers, that of journalism, commenced at the same time.

"It was in the cave days I am sure," she said, "when every thing was wild and woolly and no one over well clothed that some individual in a tribe had trouble and another one interceded for them with the chief. That was the first lawyer and at the same time the journalist. And at that gon a stone with a piece of flint making hyeroglphics or little pictures telling about it."

Miss Tarbell told the women that the law, coming along with the professions of medicine and theology, became respectable much sooner than journalism, which was only now getting a school of its own and a standing.

All the other professions had something to say and Dr. Adele Cuinet received the most applause of the evening when, after telling the little sympathy received by women dentists from the men, she concluded:

"I don't believe there ever will be a time when the men will not feel that they are much superior until the women are enfranchised."

Mrs. Jean H. Norris, President of the Women Lawyers, could not be present, having been elected member of the International Jury of Awards of the Panama Pacific Exposition, and she is now in San Francisco. Mrs. Olive Stott Gabrel was Chairman of the Dinner Committee.

ASSIGN FLEET ANCHORAGES.

The Mayor's Committee, of which Cornelius Vanderbilt is the Chairman, which was appointed to arrange for the reception of the officers and enlisted men of the Atlantic Fleet, who are due to arrive here Saturday morning, gave out yesterday the official anchorages of each of the vessels. Commander F. L. Sawyer, U. S. N., who is serving with the Mayor's Committee, said yesterday that the column will extend from a point opposite Eighty-second Street to apoint beyond 158th Street.

"It will be interesting, and, in a way, important," he said, "for the public to know the exact location of the ships in view of the fact that during the entire time they are here visitors who have left the boat landings for the ship by 4:30 will be permitted on board, but no one after that. By 5:30 it will be necessary that all visitors shall have disembarked."

BATTLESHIP SQUADRON.

DESTROYER FLOTILLA.

SUBMARINE FLOTILLA.

The destroyer flotilla will anchor on the west side of the river from Seventy-ninth Street to 140th Street except No. 83 (Yankton.) Landing will be assigned by the flotilla commander.

The submarine flotilla will anchor each of the battleships from 134th Street up. Tenders will be alongside the dock at 138th Street if possible.

In anticipation of the visit of the fleet many reservations are being made at the hotels for people from out of town, it was learned yesterday. Many of these start from Friday, and hotel men say the outlook is for a big business for the end of the week.

Heinze Estate Sued for $71,946.

John W. McKinnon, as agent for the shareholders of the National Bank of North America, brought suit yesterday in the Federal District Court against Linda M. Fleitmann, as administratrix of the estate of F. Augustus Heinze, for $71,946, which, Mr. McKinnon says, is due the bank on a note for $80,000 which Heinze made on March 10, 1906. It was secured by 15,000 shares of Ohio Copper stock and $20,000 of Ohio first mortgage bonds.

TUTTLE ENDS LIFE AS NURSES SLEEP

WENT THERE FOR CURE

Pleaded with Attendants to End Agony for Him—Guard Relaxed When He Feigned Sleep.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 3.—Dispondent over ill-health, Frederick Walker Tuttle of 289 De Kalb Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., committed suicide at his seachore apartment on Pacific Avenue here today. He had been suffering intensely from a cancerous growth, and was said to have pleaded with his nurse to end the agony. In consequence, his attendant and his housekeeper had kept constant watch over him.

Tuttle then planned to tire them both out by demanding every little attention. All last night and this morning, they were sent here and there on every pretext. When they minally rtird, Tuttl had apparntly fallen asleep. Upon being left alone, however, he turned on the gas, and when the nurse awoke Tuttle had been asphyxiatd.

Tuttle came here several weeks ago from Brooklyn for his health. His friends lent every aid, and for a time it was thought his recovery was only a question of time with the beneficial effects of the shore air. He grew worse, however, and since Saturday had been in constant pain.

Arrangements for the removal of the body to Brooklyn are being made by the brother, Clifford H. Tuttle. It will be shipped from here on Wednesday and buried in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn.

Mr. Tuttle was born in Brooklyn fifty-seven years ago. Twenty years ago he became a member of the firm of Tuttle & Bailey of 76 Madison Avenue, founded by his father, which manufactures radiators and ventilators in North Tenth Street, Brooklyn. He was Vice President of the firm when he retired two and a half years ago. At the time of his retirement he was suffering from an affection of the throat, which developed into cancer.

He leaves a widow, four sisters, and one brother, Clifford Tuttle of Englewood, N. J. Mrs. Tuttle went to Atlantic City yesterday after receiving word of her husband's suicide.

Mr. Tuttle was a member of the Lambs, Calumet, and Dyker Meadow Golf Club. He was a member of the Plymouth Church, in Brooklyn.

NEEDY MOTHER TRIES TO DIE

Mrs. Margaret McDonald, 29 years old, of 523 West Forty-ninth Street, last night used the secret savings of her daughter Elizabeth, 11 years old, to buy supper for her two children. Then, when they were safe in bed, she tried to commit suicide by inhaling gas, according to stories told by the children.

Mrs. McDonald's husband has been out of work for a month. He did not return home yesterday, and there was no money in the house. Bobbie, 9 years old, wept and complained of hunger. The mother hushed him as best she could and tried to put him to bed, when Elizabeth drew out ten dimes, her savings of two years of better times, and gave them for Bobbie's supper.

After feeding the children Mrs. McDonald went into her own room and placing a tube from the gas jets to her lips lay down to die. Elizabeth, smelling gas, called neighbors. Mrs. McDonald was revived in the Polyclinic Hospital and later transferred to Bellevue. She will recover. Neighbors took care of the children.

GARY ENTERTAINS SUNDAY.

On his third Monday visit to this city since the Paterson revival began the Rev. "Billy" Sunday was the guest at luncheon yesterday afternoon of Judge and Mrs. Elbert H. Gary at the Gary residence at Sixty-seventh Street and Fifth Avenue.

The vangelist came from Paterson in a limousine with Mrs. Sunday and two of their children, William, Jr., and Paul. After luncheon at the Gary residence, they started back at once for Paterson. At the luncheon were several other guests who were invited because they had expressd their eagerness to meet th revivalist. These were Nathan Straus, Arthur Brisbane, E. P. Fraelr, W. E. Benjamin, Alexander Brown of Baltimore, and Charles H. Hayden.

The invitation to the luncheon was extended to the Sundays several days ago, when Judge and Mrs. Gary and a party visited the tabernacle at Paterson. All the guests at the luncheon yesterday assured the evangelist that they would make a trip over to Paterson to hear him in the near future.

As he was leaving the Gary residence for his machine, Sunday said that he had had an interesting time and had met some "mighty fine people." Nathan Straus said that he considered Sunday "a wonderful man and a great force for good." Arthur Brisbane told how a story like the Sundays' visit to the Gary residence really ought to be covered. Judge Gary, who has frequently expressed his high opinion of Sunday, said yesterday that his guest possessed a natural grace, which gave a polish to every word that he spoke and every gesture that he made.

PATERSON, N. J., May 3.—Tired out from his trip to New York, Billy Sunday went directly to bed upon his arrival at his Park Avenue home this afternoon. "I had a bully time," he smiled when asked about the luncheon at Judge Gary's. For the first time in thirteen years the chimes of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, opposite the Sunday Tabernacle, were stilled yesterday afternoon and evening. Last Sunday the bells pealed forth just as Billy was "warming up" in his sermon, and they disconcerted him to such an extent that George Arnold, Sunday's backer, asked the Rev. David S. Hamilton, rector of St. Paul's, if they might be quieted.

"Mighty fine of Mr. Hamilton and his people," said Billy when told that the bells wouldn't interfere with his service any more.

Gift to Brown University.

PROVIDENCE, May 3.—Announcement of a gift of $7,000 to Brown University from Mrs. Jesse L. Rosenberger of Chicago was made today. The gift is in memory of Mrs. Rosenberger's father, the Rev. Charles K. Colver of the class of 1842, and its income is to provide for lectures by eminent scholars.

GIRL SUES FOR LOST SCALP.

Factory Worker, Seeking $50,000, Removes Hat, Wig, and Cap in Court

For the loss of her scalp while working in a factory, Miss Mary Haynes, 17 years old, of 345 Court Street, Brooklyn, asked $50,000 damages from the Cooke & Cobb Company in a suit tried yesterday before Justice Kelby and a jury in Part III. of the Brooklyn Supreme Court. The action was brought in behalf of the girl by her father, Harry, and late yesterday afternoon, after the jurors had deliberated over an hour, Justice Kelby directed them to hand in a sealed verdict, which will be opened in court this morning.

Miss Haynes, who was employed in the factory of Cooke & Cobb Company, manufacturers of stationery at 213 Steuben Street, Brooklyn, said that on Aug. 14, 1913, she went to a washing fountain in a corner of the room, nearby which was an exposed and unguarded vertical shaft. She said all the employes on the floor had to go there for drinking water. As she stood there her hair, which was partly braided, became tangled in the revolving shaft, and she was suddenly lifted to the ceiling. Her scalp was completely torn off, and she fell to the floor.

When Miss Haynes had finished her story her attorney, John J. Graham, former Surrogate of Nassau County, told her to remove her hat, and then a wig of brown hair, showing a tight fitting white skull cap. Then she removed the cap and exposed her scalp, showing the effects of her injury. The jurors took one look and involuntarily turned their heads away.

Dr. John H. Long, who attended the girl, testified that she had lost a head of beautiful black hair. After a vain attempt to have the girl's scalp grow back on her head, the physician said he had to resort to skin grafting. The girl was in the hospital for seven months.

The company set up a defense that the accident was caused because of the girl's negligence. She was asked whether she knew of the cloakroom on the floor. She answered that as the room was too small to accommodate all the girls, she and several others used a post with hooks on it in the corner, near the drinking fountain. She said it was not necessary for her to go to the cloakroom.

CITY BREVITIES.

W. J. Hammer will lecture on "Aerial Navigation" next Saturday evening at the Second Moravian Church, Wilkins Avenue and Jennings Street, the Bronx.

There will be an exhibit of old prints, showing the fleets engaged during the civil war and other antiquated American sea fighters, at the New York Public Library from May 8 to 18.

Blue Serge Suits
For Men and Young Men

At "The Store of Style."
The "kingpin" of summer suits, the perennial favorite of clothesdom. The one real institution in the summertime wardrobe of every well-dressed man.
A blue serge suit is to clothes what shade trees are to a garden, sea breeze to the beach or an ocean dip to the tired city man.
It's a haven of refuge from the high lights of innumerable mixtures, countless stripes and perplexing plaids; and no man's wardrobe is complete without one.
They are here, Single or Double-breasted, half-lined, quarter-lined and skeleton-lined, with mohair or with silk; in two button or three button models, and as smart and distinctive as thorough tailormen can make them.

"FRAMERS OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE U.S.A." NO. 3
Alexander Hamilton—"Father of American Credit"
DANIEL WEBSTER says of Hamilton: "He smote the rock of National resources and abundant streams of revenue gushed forth; he touched the dead corpse of public credit and it sprung upon its feet."
No man did more to build the Constitution of the United States than did Hamilton. He took a prominent part in every debate, and worked indefatigably on all the important committees. His genius, individuality and daring foresight are indelibly stamped upon every clause of our National Law—the law under which Americans are guaranteed for all time Religious, Commercial and Personal Liberty. During Hamilton's lifetime he used his great influence to encourage and protect the brewing indusry. Among all the Fathers of the Republic none knew better than he that honestly-brewed barley-malt beers make for true temperance. This American Colossus, who was second only to Washington in the service rendered to his country, drank good beer all his days. We know of no one who has yet dared declare that it injured him in any way. Under the tenets of the Constitution, which Hamilton did so much to make a fact, Anheuser-Busch 58 years ago launched their great institution. During these years they have honestly brewed honest beers. To-day 7500 people are daily required to meet the public demand. Their world-famed brand BUDWEISER because of its quality, purity, mildness and exquisite flavor, exceeds the sale of any other beer by millions of bottles.

MURDERER HERE TO TESTIFY

Flack Comes from Death House, but Won't Talk of Sing Sing.

William Flack, under sentence of death for the murder of Giuseppi Marino, was brought here yesterday from the death-house in Sing Sing under a special act passed by the Legislature to testify against Angelo Leggio, who is also charged with the murder of Marino. Flack was committed to the Tombs by Judge Nott, and will have several conferences with the District Attorney before Leggio's trial begins on May 12.

According to information obtained by Assistant District Attorney Wellman, Flack was the hired gunman who killed Marino. Leggio, it is charged, inspired the murder because of jealousy. While in the Tombs Flack will be under the same rules which apply to all prisoners there, and which are much more liberal than those in the death house.

Flack declined to answer questions regarding conditions in Sing Sing and in the death house.

"I am badly enoupgh off now," he said. "I'm a squealer and I have to go back there again, perhaps with the man I am testifying against. No, I'm not going to talk at all about the death house. That would make things still worse."

GOT 4 YEARS INSTEAD OF 1.

Burglar Who Tried to Fool Judge Rsentenced.

When John Phelan of 183 East 111th Street was arraigned before Judge Nott in General Sessions yesterday for sentence on his conviction for burglary in the third degree Judge Nott asked for the defendant's record. Phelan on the witness stand had sworn that he had never been convicted before, and the District Attorney's office could find no record against him.

"I will sentence you to Elmira," he said to Phelan.

The sentence was a light one, meaning only thirteen months at the longest, but those in the courtroom saw Phelan's face fall. He turned to a court attendant and said: "I can't go there. I've been there once, and they would know that I had no business to come back there a second time."

Phelan's admission was repeated to Judge Nott. "I will revoke my sentence and send you to Sing Sing for four years and six months," he said.

OPERA TENOR'S WIFE ACCUSES CHAUFFEUR

THEY QUARRELED IN HALL

He Demanded 25 Cents for Delivering Medicine, Woman Says—"Hit Me with Slipper," Says Chauffeur.

Miss Lydia Locke, a singer, who in private life is Mrs. Orville Harrold, the wife of Orville Harrold, the operatic tenor, was served with a summons yesterday requiring her to appear this morning in the West Side Court and answer a charge of disorderly conduct brought against her by Moses Small, a chauffeur. Mrs. Harrold lives at 106 Central Park West. The alleged disorderly conduct occurred on Saturday night, when the chauffeur called at Mrs. Harrold's apartment to deliver a package of medicine.

Stories as to what happened in the hall on the tenth floor after the chauffeur knocked at the door and announced that there was a charge of 25 cents on the medicine, differ. Mrs. Harrold says the chauffeur caught her arm, drew her into the hall, and struck her. Small charges that Mrs. Harrold came into the hall and emphasized her objection to paying him by striking him across the face with a high-heeled slipper.

Mrs. Harrold has been under treatment By Dr. Henri Iskowitz of 58 West Fifty-eighth Street for bronchitis. On Saturday he called and prescribed some powders. He said he would stop in a drug store, on the way downtown, and have the prescription filled and the powders sent to her by messenger. About 11 o'clock he stopped at a drug store near Columbus Circle and ordered that the medicine be sent to the Harrold apartments. To Small was given the task of delivering them.

When Small arrived Mrs. Harrold said, she was alone in the apartment and wearing her night robe under a dressing gown. When Small attempted to collect 25 cents she refused to pay it, and told him the doctor had promised to pay the bill. Small insisted that there was a charge, and he would not deliver the package until he was paid.

"I considered the charge most unjust, but I was alone, the maid having gone out with the dogs," said Mrs. Harrold, "so I determined to pay."

"I looked in my pocketbook and found that I had only half a dollar. This I would not give, and I put out my hand again demanding the package."

Instead of handing over, she continued, Small dragged her into the hall and beat her. She said she screamed and attracted the attention of those in a neighboring apartment, where a reception was in progress. It was necessary to break the door down so Mrs. Harrold could get back to her apartment.

Small denies the alleged assault and said the only assault committed was upon himself, and the instrument used was Mrs. Harrold's slipper.

Orville Harrold won a measure of fame on the New York stage, where he quickly advanced from vaudeville to opera. He divorced his first wife in Munice, Indiana, on Feb. 17, 1913, and on Feb. 21 of the same year he married in the City Hall Lydia Talbot, who gave her profession as singer. She was a widow and her first husband is said to have been an English Army officer.

AMBULANCE DRIVER HURT.

An ambulance belonging to the Washington Heights Hospital was overturned yesterday while on the way to answer a call at the 145th Street station of the Subway. James Maher, the chauffeur, was so seriously injured that he had to be taken back to the hospital. Dr. Louis Rosenberg, though suffering from shock and contusions, commandeered an automobile, answered the call, and took his patient to the hospital.

The accident happened shortly after 5 o'clock. The ambulance was speeding south with gong clanging. The traffic parted to give it the right of way. Near 150th Street an automobile swung to one side disclosing a heavy truck belonging to Bernard Greenwood of 20 Desbrosses Street, directly in the path of the ambulance. There was not sufficient time for the driver to get out of the way, and Maher attempted to turn west into 160th Street.

The ambulance was going too fast to allow the turn to be made in safety. As it swung about a wheel crumpled, and the ambulance turned upon its side. Maher was thrown out and was picked up by spectators. A chauffeur volunteered to take him to the hospital. Dr. Rosenberg fell inside the ambulance. The doctor took to the hospital Julius Shapiro, a clerk, of 217 West 140th Street, who had been taken ill on his way Home from work.

MUSIC NOTES.

The Aborn Opera Company began the last week of its engagement at the Brooklyn Academy of Music last night, with a performance of "Madame Butterfly," in which the principal singers were Ivy Scott, Henry Taylor, Thomas Chalmers, Mildred Rogers, and Alfred Kaufman. Ernst Knoch conducted. The bill will be changed Thursday night, when "Il Trovatore" comes into the repertoire, and there will be a special matinee of "Haensel and Gretel" Friday afternoon.

The Zuro Opera Company began its second week of opera at the People's Theatre last night with a performance of "Faust," in which Grace Hoffmann was the Marguerite.

The cast for the special performance of "Die Fledermaus," at the Metropolitan Opera House Saturday night, for the benefit of the German Red Cross and the relief of artists, will comprise Mmes. Frieda Hempel, Margarete Ober, Elisabeth Schumann, and Emmy Nicklas, and Messrs. Reiss, Bloch, Goritz, Bayer, Well, and Richard Hageman. Anton Hoff will conduct. The chorus will be made up of members of the German Liederkranz. During the concert scene in the operetta the following will appear: Mmes. Gadski, Kurt, and Mattfeld, and Messrs. Sembach, Braun, and Schlegel.

At the annual Composers' Night of the Fraternal Association of Musicians, to be held this evening at the McAlpin, the composers to be represented are Geo. Braucombe, Marion Bauer, Laura Sedgwick Collins, Cornelius Rubner, Hallett Gilberte, and Gustave L. Becker.

Josef Stransky is making some changes in the personnel of the Philharmonic Orchestra, as a result of which eleven new members will play next year. These include four changes each in the two violin sections.

JOB SAVES AGED COUPLE.

Neighbor, Seeking a Carpenter, Finds Them Unconscious.

When a woman neighbor asked Harold Heinrichs of 367 St. Mark's Avenue, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon if he knew of a carpenter who would do a few days work for her, he led the way to the floor above and knocked at the door of Martin Bock. No answer came, and when he was about to knock the third time, Heinrichs smelled the odor of gas. He rushed to the street, calling Patrolmen Ernst and Leasry of the Grand Avenue Police Station, and they broke in the door.

On the bed lay Bock, aged 60, and his wife, Margaret, aged 55, unconscious, with the gas flowing from a broken pipe. An ambulance from St. Mary's Hospital and a pulmotor and after an hour's work revived the couple sufficiently to take them to the Kings County Hospital.

Because a window was open, the police believe there was no suicide pact. Bock has been out of work for six months, and with his wife went out in the morning, presumably looking for a job. The police believe that upon their return, weak and weary, from the walk, they lay down for a rest. No charge was made against them.

Bock had been receiving aid from relatives in Germany, but his support was cut off by the war, and the aged couple had been on the verge of want for several weeks. Heinrichs said last night that the woman who wanted the work done could wait until Bock was able to do it, and said he was going to see that the old carpenter had enough to do in the future.

TYPHOID IN THE FAR EAST.

Cases Are Increasing, but American Methods Cut Death Rate.

Typhoid fever is more prevalent in the Far East than in former years. At the Philippine General Hospital in Manila there was a fairly uniform number of typhoid patients during 1911 and 1912. During the first half of the year 1913 there was a marked increase. A summary by Dr. Gutierres of the conditions in the Government hospital at Manila, where most of the cases of typhoid fever treated occur among native Filipinos, is based on a study of 125 Filipinos out of a total of 137 cases admitted to the Philippine General Hospital during the two years.

In the Philippines the greatest prevalence is during the autumn months, continuing into the Winter, and declining in the Spring. The Filipinos undoubtedly have a lowered resistance consequent on their modes of life and limited diet. Many patients come to the hospital in a hopeless condition, and thus help to swell the death rate. As the diet of the natives is being improved and the cases are admitted to the hospital earlier in the course of the diseases, a more normal death rate is being approached.

"This," says The Journal of the American Medical Association, "is what may be expected in an institution which during the few years of its existence has worked so effectively for the relief of the sick in Manila and in the provinces, has contributed much to scientific medicine, has helped to raise the standard of hygiene and of medical practice in the Far East, and has abundantly justified the expectations of those who have confidence in the efficiency of American institutions."

SAYS HUDSON IS POISONED.

The West End Association at its meeting in the Ansonia last night formally accepted the resignation of Commissioner of Docks and Ferries R. A. C. Smith, because of a difference of opinion.

A motion of W. E. D. Stokes, owner of the Ansonia, to investigate the cause of the death of fish in the Hudson River, possibly through pollution of the water, was referred to the Committee on Acids and Fumes. Mr. Stokes said the fish were victims of the refuse of a certain acid factory, and four fisherman with great nets caught but 32 shad in a whole day.

Charles M. Chadwick of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, gave an illustrated lecture on the Catskills.

NEED SHORT-HAIRED GIRLS.

New Australian Law Protects Machine Operatives.

In Australia, under the new factory laws, according to a report from United States Consul William C. Magelsson, stationed at Melbourne, no female factory operative shall work among or near moving machinery unless her hair be cut short and securely fixed and confined to her head, and no male operative may wear an apron or other loose garment under like circumstances.

Under the new statutes if any person operates machinery without proper guard, suitably adjusted, both the person using it and the factory are guilty of an offense.

DETECTIVE SAVED FROM 3-STORY DROP

Negro Was Pushing Policeman Through Window When Comrades Arrived.

ON A COCAINE RAID

George Peazewell, a powerful negro, had Detective Dolan, weight 180, of the Fourth Branch Detective Bureau, two-thirds out of a window last night, preparatory to dropping him to a cement court four stories below, when three detectives, working with Dolan in a cocaine raid on Peazewell's flat at 261 West 124th Street, rescued their colleague in the process putting the negro in a condition which demanded the attention of an ambulance surgeon.

Accompanied by Detectives Boyle, McGowan, and Miller, Dolan went to the flat about 11 o'clock. There was no answer to his knocw, although the detectives heard voices inside. Dolan imitated thevoice of a negro and the door opened a few inches, showing Peazewell's face. Dolan forced himself through the crack. The negro grabbed him and locked the door.

Inside were Cecil Jackson, a negro, and Samuel Schlosman, a white man, who watched Peazewell carry the little detective to the kitchen of the apartment. The other three detectives, hearing the scuffle, broke down the door, only to find their path blocked by Peazewell's two visitors. They subdued their men and rushed to the kitchen just in time to save Dolan from being hurled to the courtyard. They used their blackjacks freely on Peazewell's head.

The detectives found thirty-seven "decks" of cocaine and six packages of morphine in the flat. Peazewell and his two visitors were locked up in the West 123d Street Station, charged with having narcotics in their possession.

The police say that Peazewell has been out of Auburn Prison but a few days. They say that Schlosman had come down from the Bronx to buy cocaine.

Detectives Fanders, Waterhouse, and Judge of Dope Squad 3 from Police Headquarters last night raided the flat of Grace Arlington aged 25, at 66 West 133d Street. They said that as they broke down the door she drew five "decks" of cocaine from her dress and threw them into a stove. The packages were rescued by one of the raiders. She was locked up in the West 125d Street Station.

After leaving the Arlington flat, Squad 3 went to the apartment of Mrs. Grace Bostic, 114 West 136th Street, where they found her in the company of a negro, Joseph Dixon, who said he was from Boston. A package of cocaine was found under the bed. He was locked up charged with having cocoaine in his possession and she on the charge of being an habitual user of drugs. Shortly after midnight the woman was taken to Night Court.

CHILD HYGIENE STATIONS.

New York Diet Kitchen Association to Extend Its Work.

"Graduate Babies"" is a title that has been given to children between the ages of 2 and 6 who are to be given special attention at three of the stations of the New York Diet Kitchen Association, of which Mrs. Henry Villard is President. Excellent educational work has been carried on by the association for the babies under 2, and when the children reach the school age similar work is carried on by the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the Department of Health.

Conferences similar to those which have been held for the benefit of the smaller children will be given for the older ones. The mothers will be able to consult with nurses and doctors concerning diet and home conditions for the children, and when necessary dispensary and hospital treatment can be administered. The children will be brought repeatedly to the conferences, their improvement noted, and further advice given. The stations for graduate babies will be at 437 West Forty-first Street, 201 East Sixty-sixth Street, and 35 West 139th Street.

URGES BRUTAL WARFARE.

Hamburg Paper Says Germany's Chivalry is Not Appreciated.

After announcing officially that there were then 812,806 enemy war prisoners in Germany, of whom 520 officers and 20,307 men were English, and 3,868 officers and 238,496 men French, the Hamburger Nachrichten of April 10, under the caption "And Once More: Reprisals!" urges the carrying out of ruthless measures against the allied prisoners as an intensified punishment for the treatment of Germans by France and England.

The German paper quotes a sarcastic "Spring jubilation," in which the Paris Figaro tells of the employment of 200 German war prisoners to clean out the canal at Fontainebleau, which had not been cleaned for nearly a century, and it protests against this as of a stripe with other French "indignities," such as the elimination of the word "Allemands" (Germans) and the substitution of "boches" (blockheads) in the French press instead. Then it says:

"Among us the enemy warriors captured in the field are treated with every imaginable politeness and well taken care of; we send back more invalided French soldiers than are sent to us from over there What has this magnanimity netted us? Slander in gigantic falsehoods that are shrieked throughout the world; a refined system—no German word will cover the case—of torture and martyrdom that is carried out against the husbands, fathers, and sons of our people in the enemies' lands; loud, boastful revillings of all the decency, practiced by Germany. Kindness and chivalry are accounted in us as weakness; and the better enemy captives fare in Germany, the worse and viler is the treatment accorded to the Germans in captivity among our enemies. Eight months of the war have taught us that.

"Now at last we must recognize the true state of affairs. And we have recognized it. Now there must be canals to clean out among us also; prisons like those of the British Navy must exist among us also; dumdum bullets for the foes that use them must whizz as a punishment from German rifle barrels.

"All the gruesomeness that menaces the unselfish German fighters for Kaiser and Empire, who, after facing death and misery in battle, have fallen into the enemy's hands—all that gruesomeness must now loom up also for the sons of the enemy peoples. And in letters that reach us there is the question: Why must our submarines always first hail the English ships, search them, and then even tow the boats containing the crews into safety? We know that the English wish to be franc-tireurs on the sea. Otto Weddigen, with his loyal crew, has gone to the bottom—heroes for whom the German nation is in mourning and whom no satisfaction over rescued Englishmen will replace for us.

"We did not want the war—certainly did not want it as it has been waged by our foes. But now we must defend ourselves. For nobility of spirit we have reaped slander; for chivalrous warfare the wildest brutality. Our foes are hoping that they will win, and they know that victory will justify even the most infamous warfare. Therefore it is a law of self-preservation for us that we must win. The reverse is, in its ugliness, in its gruesome extirpation of our race, unthinkable. But we can win only through the loyal, death-defying, brave men who are fighting for us. Therefore, only they, only Germans, may count for us, and every indignity that is perpetrated on a German must forthwith be avenged manifoldly upon our foes. That we have the means and power of doing so is shown by the great number of prisoners brought in by our armies.

"Humanity in the war at the expense of one's own people is suicide. And it was an Englishman, the apostle of world peace, William Stead, who said that the most inhumane war is the most humane, because it soonest of all puts an end to the war. The Englishmen, Frenchmen, and Russians, together with their Serbian appendages, have learned this lesson and are acting accordingly. Germany, defend thyself!"

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Ruth Chatterton will end her long engagement in "Daddy Long-Legs" in the Gaiety Theatre a week from Saturday night. The performance that night will be the two hundred and seventy-third in New York. Miss Chatterton will appear in the play on tour next season.

Charles Frohman and Klaw & Erlanger have leased the Montauk Theatre, Brooklyn, and will present the better class of attractions there.

June 15 has been set as the date for the opening of the Globe Summer School for stage training. The school, which is open to all young women with stage ambitions, between the ages of 17 and 20, will be under the direction of R. H. Burnside. Tuition will be free, pupils giving the Globe management an option on their services.

Leon Errol will be one of the featured comedians in the Summer crop of "Follies." Mr. Errol will stage the ensemble numbers of the revue.

Roi Cooper Megrue's new play was put into rehearsal yesterday by Selwyn & Co. It will be given a preliminary production May 24 in Atlantic City.

The Vitagraph Company has made arrangements with Mayor Mitchel and Fire Commissioner Adamson to take motion pictures of the Fire Department at work. The films will be sent to the San Francisco Fair as a feature of the New York exhibit.

no more than five or six feet from where Charles was found dead, and they, too, heard no sound.

Escaped Over Fence.

For this reason the police considered a theory that the child might have been killed in the yard and his body put beneath the stairs. A fence on the left and one in the rear enclose the yard, and over either of these the murderer could have escaped. An ash can and a garbage can stand against the left side fence, and the police discovered that the covers of the cans had been interchanged.

Mrs. Julia Sumpter, Charles's grandmother and janitress of the house, said these covers were often mixed, however, and there was no sign in the yard that the murder had been committed there.

Charles returned home only Sunday evening from a visit to his grandmother in Brooklyn, Mrs. Mary Murray, mother of his father, and had attended kindergarten yesterday. In a few more minutes his mother would have called him up to bed, for the youngster had just started school and had to be up early in the morning.

Charles was the second of four children, Mamie being the eldest, and, after Charles coming, John, 2 years old, and Nicholas, 5 months. The family was heart-broken last night, and again and again the parents wept over the fate which had led them to bring little Charlie home to his death.

CHASES GIRLS WITH KNIFE.

Shortly before the mutilated body of little Charles Murray was found last evening a man, who said he is Joseph Daly, and who refused to give his occupation or address, was arrested by Patrolman Curry of the East Fifty-first Street Station at Forty-seventh Street and Third Avenue, after a struggle, in which he and man who escaped attacked the policeman with knives.

The men were accused by seven little girls, from 8 to 12 years old, of pursuing them with knives. Daly was locked up in the East Fifty-first Street Station charged with felonious assault and carrying a dangerous weapon.

Patrolman Curry was at Forty-eighth Street and Third Avenue. When the girls rain screaming to him and said the men were chasing them with drawn knives. The policeman saw the men in the midst of a group of children one block south in the avenue and ran toward them. Daly attacked him and stabbed him in the hand with a sharp knife. The blade of which was fourteen inches long. Curry felled his opponent with his night stick and was about to place him under arrest when the children cried: "Look out."

Curry turned as the second man lunged at him with a knife. The Patrolman dodged, and as the weapon tore through his uniform, brought his club down with a smashing blow on the man's head. As he reeled his companion, Daly, again sprang at Curry. Curry grabbed the latter and placed him under arrest. The second escaped in the crowd.

Curry took his prisoner to the East Fifty-first Street Police Station, where both were attended by Dr. Buckmeister of Flower Hospital.

Brooklyn Lawyer to Penitentiary.

Frank P. Martin, a Brooklyn lawyer, 51 years old, was sentenced to the Penitentiary for one year for grand larceny by Judge Roy in the Kings County Court yesterday. He had sold four lots at Bellmore, Long Island, to Miss Kate Ferando, representing that they were free and clear. Later the purchaser learned that the property was encumbered.

KINGSBURY REJECTS A GIFT.

Charities Commissioner Kingsbury a day or two ago received a large crate of asparagus and rhubarb from the gardener on Randall's Island, with the request that he "sample" it. Then he remembered that he had been asked in December to do the same with a crate of celery and had heard that in the same way First Deputy Commissioner Henry C. Wright had been asked to try some celery.

Mr. Kingsbury ordered the asparagus and rhubarb should be sent back to Randall's Island and issued yesterday an order that none of the products of the farms, greenhouses, and conservatories under the jurisdiction of the Department of Public Charities should be sent to any officials or employes of the department, but should be used exclusively for the population of the different institutions. Any violation of this order, the Commissioner announced, would mean dismissal.

"I think all the vegetables that can be grown by the department should be given to the patients," he said.

"The Wonder Car"

We give the two vital things in the Maxwell Car, and then the 17 new features, that have made the 1915 Maxwell, the most talked about car ever produced.

Here are the two vital things that any sane man wants when he buys an automobile:

In the first place

In the second place
—a powerful, fast, economical automobile, that will take him anywhere and bring him back.

We give these two vital things and just about every other detail of refinement, comfort, and endurance.

When you buy a 1915 Maxwell, you buy an exact duplicate of the stock Maxwell Cars, in which "Wild Bill" Turner, and Billy Carlson broke two World's Records, in two of the toughest, roughest mountain hill-climbs ever made—Mt. Hamilton and Mt. Wilson.

Then too, you get a car made by the same designers—the same chief engineer—from the same Maxwell Laboratory-tested, heat-treated steel, that was used in the Maxwell Racers in which Barney Oldfield and Billy Carlson finished first, and second, in the Venice Grand Prix Race, and made 300 miles non-stop race records at Venice, Corona and San Diego.

HALTS MOVE TO HAVE FRANK RESENTENCED

Judge Hill Declines to Grant Solicitor's Application for Immediate Action.

WAIT FOR SUPREME COURT

Mandate Covering Recent Decision Not Yet Handed Down—Lawyers May Still Apply for a Rehearing.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 3.—Solicitor General Dorsey applied today to Judge Hill for a writ of habeas corpus, directing the immediate presence of Leo M. Frank in court for resentence to death as the slayer of Mary Phagan.

Judge Hill announced tonight that he would take no action on the petition before the mandate of the United States Supreme Court is handed down. This is expected about May 20.

Judge Hill says Frank is still in the jurisdiction of the United States Supreme Court, and that that court can revoke its action in refusing to interfere, if it sees fit, between now and the time for handing down the mandate. Judge Hill intimates that for him to act before the Supreme Court mandate is received would cause a clash between State and Federal courts.

Mr. Dorsey's action today was unexpected, and the city's leading lawyers promptly declared that it was a dangerous step, likely to involve him with the Supreme Court. The delay in handing down the court's mandate, it was pointed out, was for the purpose of giving the prisoner's lawyers an opportunity to ask for a rehearing.

Lawyers cited the Jamison case in Macon a few years ago, in which City Attorney Wimberly was adjudged in contempt of the Federal Court for ordering the negro Jamison sent to the chain gang before the mandate of the Supreme Court was received, the court having affirmed the negro's sentence. Mr. Dorsey's contention is that all legal obstacles were removed when the Supreme Court announced its decision, declining to interfere in the Frank case. His sole motive, he says, is to prevent any unnecessary delay in the execution of the decree of the court when Frank was found guilty.

Frank's attorneys were not notified of Dorsey's move, and none of them were in court when the application was filed.

The resentencing of Frank at this time would mean the hastening of the hearing before the Prison Commission of his petition for a commutation of the death sentence to life imprisonment. Should the date of this hearing be pushed forward, it would mean that the case would reach Governor Slaton before the expiration of his term the latter part of June.

CHICAGO PLEA FOR FRANK.

Mass Meeting to be Held on May 16 in His Behalf.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 3.—A mass meeting with some of the city's most prominent speakers to protest in the name of humanity and civilization against the execution of Leo M. Frank in Atlanta, Ga., for the murder of Mary Phagan, is to be held in Powers' Theatre Sunday afternoon, May 16. The meeting will ask the Governor of Georgia and the Prison Board to commute the death sentence to one of imprisonment, as so much doubt of the doomed man's guilt is being felt and expressed.

This announcement followed the formation of a Leo M. Frank committee. Some of those who have signified their willingness to speak in behalf of Frank and Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout, President of the Illinois Equal Suffrage Society; Leonora Z. Meder, head of the Department of Public Welfare of the city; ex-Judge McKenzie Cleland, Bishop Samuel Fallows, and Attorneys Patrick H. O'Donnell, and Clarence Darrow.

The various organizations formed to appeal to the Governor of Georgia today consolidated into the Leo M. Frank committee. The Anti-Capital Punishment Society, the orignal Frank committee formed prior to the United States Supreme Court's hearing of the case, and various other committees and fraternal and benevolent bodies are now in the movement to obtain the commutation of the death sentence of Frank to one of imprisonment.

RETURN TO HANNA'S STATE.

Farmers Back from Canada and Bull Moose Wander Home.

Governor L. B. Hanna of North Dakota was at the Manhattan yesterday on his way to Norfolk to present to the Dreadnought North Dakota the handsome silver service which is the gift of the people of North Dakota. The service, which in spite of certain department orders regarding drinkables on naval vessels, contains a punch bowl, is of solid silver, was made by the Gorham Company, and cost $10,000. Governor Hanna, who is accompanied by Mrs. Hanna, left New York last night.

"Business is fair in North Dakota," said Governor Hanna. "We had a good crop last season, and prices have been good. Ours is a purely agricultural State. There is a big acreage of Spring wheat, our main staple, and of oats, flax, barley and corn, more having been planted than ever before. As a matter of fact, the war in Europe, we feel, has rather benefited us. Our cattle and hogs have been bringing good prices, as well as our wheat.

"There is a good demand for land now, many settlers coming in from other States. What is very noticeable is a marked return from Canada of Americans who had gone across the border in the hope of big returns from investments in cheap lands in the Canadian Northwest. Times are pretty hard up there just now, and the movement this way has rather overbalanced the trend northward.

"As for politics, two years ago we had three parties in the State, which is normally Republican. But from the Progressives there has been of late a strong trend back to the Republican Party."

The Byron Hits a Coral Reef.

The agents of the Lamport & Holt Line received a cable message yesterday from their agent at Barbados saying that the steamship Byron, on her way to New York, had touched a coral reef off the Island of Nevis in the West Indies and was anchored off the port of Charlestown in the same island. The Byron is reported to have water in her No. 1 compartment and will have to discharge a portion of her cargo, it was said.

BUYS MISS DODGE'S HOME.

aMdison Av. Corner for Mrs. W. G. Loew—Baker's Now Own Block.

The home of the late Miss Grace Hoadley Dodge, at 262 Madison Avenue, southwest corner of Thirty-ninth Street, has been purchased by Mrs. William Goadby Loew, who occupies the adjoining Madison Avenue house. Mrs. Loew is a daughter of George F. Baker, who has just bought from the Dodge owners the stable in the rear of Miss Dodges home, 20 East Thirty-ninth Street. The purchase of this corner gives the Baker family possession of the entire Madison Avenue block front on the west side from Thirty-eighth to Thirty-ninth Streets, their holdings there representing an assessed value last year of $1,535,000.

Miss Dodge's late residence is a large four-story house fronting 45 feet on Madison Avenue by 100 feet on Thirty-ninth Street. Its assessed value is $300,000, but the price paid for the property, as disclosed by the passing of title yesterday, was $275,000. The stable in the rear fronting 22.6 feet is assessed at $90,000, but Mr. Baker bought it for $75,000. The ownership of the two parcels was held in the name of the 262 Madison Avenue Company, of which Cleveland H. Dodge, brother of Miss Dodge, was President, while Miss Dodge was one of the Directors. A total of $350,000 was paid for these two corner parcels—$40,500 less than the city's tax valuation.

Mr. Baker has for many years been one of the strongest opponents of the encroachment of business in the choice Murray Hill residential section. His home at 258 Madison Avenue, in the middle of the block between Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninth Streets, is just north of the restricted Murray Hill zone, which ends on the south side of Thirty-eighth Street. Several years ago, when the large corner at Madison Avenue and Thirtye-ighth Street, adjoining his home, was purchased by operators for the purpose of building a large apartment, George F. Baker, Jr., bought the property after the excavations had been made for the contemplated building. It remained in that unimproved condition for three or four years, and then, when it was realized that it could not be sold for improvement with high-class private residences, Mr. Baker, about two years ago, erected a low and very artistic building on the corner for occupancy by doctors, dentists, and other professional men. This corner, with the building, is now assessed at $490,000. Mr. Baker, Jr., also owns the two adjoining dwellings at 13 and 15 East Thirty-eight Street.

DR. DUSSELDORF LOSES ARM

Dr. Louis M. Dusseldorf, a prominent physician in Brooklyn, had his right arm so badly cut and injured in an automobile collision at Grand Avenue and Dean Street yesterday that amputation was necessary. After the accident the physician was taken to the Methodist Episcopal Hospital, where Dr. Arthur H. Bogart, a visiting surgeon of the hospital, performed the operation, amputating the arm between the wrist and the elbow.

Frank McLoone of 532 Grand Avenue, commandeered an automobile and hurried the injured physician to the hospital. There was a consultation of physicians in which Dr. Dusseldorf calmly took part, and when his colleagues decided that an operation was necessary, he accepted the decision without protest. At the hospital last night the surgeons said Dr. Dusseldorf would recover.

Justice Carr was not in his machine. The chauffeur, Earl A. Fagan, of 578 Vanderbilt Avenue, was served with a summons, by Policeman Boettger, to appear in court today to answer a charge of violating a traffic ordinance. Frank Stanley, the chauffeur of the Dusseldorf machine escaped injury. Both automobiles were wrecked.

TO PROSECUTE QUACKS.

Assistant District Attorney Smith Assigned to Medical Cases.

Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith was assigned yesterday to cooperate with Assistant District Attorney Wilmot and Secretary George Whiteside of the New York County Medical Association in the prosecution of the alleged medical imposters who were arrested last week on a charge of maintaining a nuisance. The alleged quacks will appear before Magistrate McAdoo at the Chief Magistrate's office, 300 Mulberry Street, on Thursday morning to answer to the charge.

As a result of the publicity which has been given the medical institutes and their practices, more than one hundred persons have gone to the District Attorney's office to give information. District Attorney Perkins said yesterday. Many of them told of injections of water for tuberculosis and fake X-ray examinations, which seem to be two favorite treatments.

HONOR MEDAL FOR EDISON.

Civic Forum to Make Award at Carnegie Hall Meeting.

The Civic Forum will present its medal of honor for distinguished public service to Thomas A. Edison on Thursday night. The medal, which is awarded annually, went to Colonel George W. Goethals, last year.

The presentation to Mr. Edison will be made at a meeting in Carnegie Hall at which President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University will preside. Guglielmo Marconi, the wireless inventor; Dr. Charles Proteus Steinmetz, of the General Electric Company; Ex-Governor Fort of New Jersey; President R. C. MacLaurin of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Charles H. Coffin will speak, and Percy MacKaye will read a poem. The medal is inscribed—"Thomas A. Edison, 1915. Inventor-World Benefactor."

Among those expected to attend are Henry Ford, President Irs Hollis of the Worcester Polytechnic Institute; E. W. Rice, President of the General Electric Company; Theodore N. Vail, President of the American Telegraph and Telephone Company; Guy E. Tripp, President of the Westinghouse Electric Company; Nicholas F. Brady, President of the Edison Electric Company; Union N. Bethell, President of the New York Telephone Company; John Borroughs, Rear Admiral Robert E. Perry; Professor Arthur E. Kenneily of Harvard; Newcomb Carlton, President of the Western Union Telegraph Company; Cans Dunn, President of the J. G. White Engineering Company; J. G. White, President of the J. G. White Company, and Frang G. Sprague.

Held on Girl's Charge.

Gaetano Messina of 506 East Thirteenth Street was in the Men's Night Court last night on a charge of disorderly conduct made by Antoinette Perfetter of 210 Hudson Avenue, Brooklyn, a stenographer, 22 years old. She told Magistrate Ten Eyck that while she was walking through Counties Alley, which runs between Pearl and Stone Streets, on her way home last evening, the Italian jumped out and grasped her in his arms. She screamed, and Patrolman Costello of the Old Slip Station came and arrested the man. Messina was held in $500 bail for a hearing tomorrow morning in the Tombs Court.

Yes—but it's a real picture of the every-day stunt in offices where they still cling to the inefficient, wasteful, costly shorthand system. Doing business that way today is about as logical as riding around in a one-cylinder asthmatic runabout of the vintage of '92 if somebody told you a 1915 eight was waiting for you at the curb.

Business men everywhere—in one-man offices and one-hundred stenographer concerns—are fast waking up. Every day more men find that it's mighty poor business to write letters twice—once in shorthand and once on the typewriter, to say nothing of the expense and wasted time. They have scrapped shorthand with its high costs and inefficiency. They don't pay for shorthand sessions at some man's desk, with other men waiting to get their dictation off their chests. They don't pay for typewriting machines standing idle a good part of the day. They get their money's worth—steady production of finished typewriting—with dictators dictating when they want.

They dictate to the Dictaphone. And it's about time you did.

Don't call Barclay 6286 if that's the number you've got in mind. The Dictaphone has a new number. Now it's Worth 3272. Call that. Or, drop in at 83 Chambers Street—the Dictaphone's new and roomy offices. Or, write. And arrange for a demonstration in your own office on your own work.

MACK'S WRECKED ATHLETICS ROUTED

Bases on Balls and Errors Enable Yankees to Roll Up Big Score and Win.

The Yankees like their roost on pennant peak so well that they have decided to room and board up there for a while. The rates are high, but they have been living in the basement so long they can afford to live as befits their position. The Athletics seem willing enough to have the Yanks stay on the summit, for at the Polo Grounds yesterday two Mackian pitchers, Bullet Joe Bush and Rube Bressler, made it convenient for them to continue their sojourn by slipping them fourteen bases on balls. The Yankees won the game without a flurry of effort by a score of 8 to 4.

Bush is the wildest thing that has been seen around here since the Borneo head hunter left town with the circus. Joe served his passes on a silver platter decorated with parsley. He gave eight passes in three innings and no one out in the fourth.

Lady Grace Mackenzie, who has just returned from a hunt in the African jungles, was at the game, and she thought Joe Bush was as wild as anything she had taken a shot at. In the fourth inning Bush walked four Yankees in a row and forced in a run.

Connie Mack called together his board of strategy and it decided that Bush lacked control, so he subtracted him from the proceedings. A wise board. About the same time Bush was lacking control, Eddie Murphy, in right field, and Li Hung Schang, behind the bat, were stricken with an ailment something like St. Vitus's dance, and their errors gave the Yankees everything that Bush didn't.

Schoolmaster Ray Fisher was stingy with hits until the Yankees got a commanding lead and then he saw no harm in the Athletics getting a few hits and runs. In the sixth and seventh innings the Athletics bunched five hits, gathering three runs from the collection. All the other hits were harmlessly scattered.

The Yankees were all hot sand and ginger and Fritz Maisel and Hugh High romped wild on the bases. Maisel stole three times and High stole a couple bags. Peckinpaugh and Boone fielded the main alley in gorgeous style, while Doc Cook nabbed a long fly in right off Lapp's bat as it was about to kiss the bleachers.

Among others at the game were Old Doc Crandall, Grover Hartley, Germany Schaefer and numerous other Federal Leaguers, playfully named by Garry Herrmann as "undesirable" citizens. They had to rub their eyes before they would believe that they were really watching the Yankees.

Maisel singled in the first inning and stole second, scoring on Hartzell's double. In the third, with one gone, Maisel again singled and went to second on Murphy's error. Maisel stole third. Hartzell walked and so did High. Pipp grounded to Bush, who forced Maisel at the plate. Schang whipped the ball to first for a double play, but the ball soared to right field. Murphy tried to throw the ball back to third, but it bounded off Pipp's back, and, in the meantime, Hartzell, High and Pipp were across the plate.

In the fourth Bush walked Boone, Sweeney, Fisher, and Maisel in a row and Boone had to score whether he wanted to or not.

Bressler then went to the pitching mound. Hartzell greeted him with a single and Sweeney scored. Schang then made a wild throw to second to head off a double steal and Fisher scored. After that inning Connie Mack pulled Schang aside and told him his throwing arm was about as good as an old piece of hose pipe. Lapp did the catching after that. He can't throw as far as Schang.

The last Yank run came in the fifth. Peckinpaugh singled to right centre and Boone got a pass. Sweeney laid down a nice sacrifice and Fisher's sacrifice fly to centre scored Peck.

The first run for the Athletics was produced in the third. Bush rolled a single along the third base line which the Yankees all prayed would roll foul, but it didn't. Murphy also got a single and Oldring sacrificed. Strunk's sacrifice fly scored Bush. In the sixth Lapp walked and went to third on Lajoie's two-bagger. McInnis scored Lapp with a single and Lajoie trotted home as Kopf was being thrown out at first base.

Oldring singled in the seventh, went to third on Strunk's double, and counted on Lapp's long sacrifice fly to Cook.

An extra touch of excitement was added in the seventh inning when a pickpocket had an idea that one of the customers was so absorbed in the game that he had forgotten all about his watch. Not so with the customer. He felt the gentle touch and raised an alarm. The culprit tried to escape under the bleachers, but the bleachers don't miss a thing and he was captured.

Tonight the Yankees and the Athletics will be the guests of the Royal Theatre in the Bronx. The score:

FIGHTING FOR MARSANS.

Depositions Taken in Cincinnati Club's Suit in Jumper's Case.

ST. LOUIS, May 3.—Protest against the taking of depositions in the suit brought by the Cincinnati Nationals against Armando Marsans to prevent him from playing with the St. Louis Federals, was filed before a notary here today by George H. Williams, attorney for the Cincinnati Club. The protest was overruled and the taking of depositions continued.

The protest was based on the ground that the Federal District Court in Chicago has under consideration an application for an injunction restraining the Cincinnati Club from proceeding with its suit against Marsans.

The deposition of Manager Herzog of the Cincinnati Nationals said that he went to Catcher Wingo's home in Georgia last Winter to sign Wingo for the St. Louis Nationals. Wingo had then gone over to the St. Louis Federals. Wingo signed with the St. Louis Nationals, Herzog said, but it was not definitely decided that Wingo would become a member of the Cincinnati team. The understanding was that a trade would be made if satisfactory agreements could be reached, Herzog said.

Miller Huggins, Manager of the St. Louis Nationals, testified that he went to Cuba to get Marsans back in organized baseball, and that he told Marsans he would like to get him for the St. Louis Nationals and that a satisfactory trade could be arranged.

UMPIRE BANISHES TWO.

CHICAGO, May 3.—Chicago won its sixth straight victory today, defeating Pittsburgh, 5 to 1, in a game shortened to five innings by rain and punctuated by arguments between players and umpires. Home runs by Hinchman and Saier produced the first score, and fast base running, a few hits, and Cooper's wild pitch gave Chicago four in the third. Thereafter the visitors, Manager Bresnahan charged, strove to delay the game so that the threatening rain would fall before the legal four and one-half innings could be played. Manager Clarke of the visitors was expelled following Umpire Byron's demand that his team cease dilatory tactics, and Pitcher Pierce of the Cubs was ousted for throwing his bat at Cooper, who, he thought, tried to hit him with the ball. Senior Hall Wins at Fordham.

The undefeated nine of Senior Hall jumped higher into the lead in the interdormitory series at Fordham University yesterday by shutting out the team of Junior Hall by a score of 8 to 0. Billy May, the big Maroon football player, pitched for the Senior aggregation and limited the Juniors to three scratch hits. Only one of the losers reached second base. Billy Rowan pitched a steady game, but poor judgment by his outfield cost him several runs. Dick O'Brien, the right fielder of the Seniors, made three and drove in four of the eight runs. Butler choked off several attempted steals by his accurate throwing to the bases. The score:

Harvard Player Has Scarlet Fever.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 3.—Frank G. Fripp of Albany, N. Y., third baseman of the Harvard College baseball team, was lost to the nine when physicians today pronounced him suffering from scarlet fever. Mahan, pitcher and utility outfielder, will be used at third whenever possible. It is not believed the other players have been exposed to the disease.

Peace Conference at French Lick?

FRENCH LICK, Ind., May 3.—Charles Weeghman, owner of the Chicago Federal League Club, arrived here today, and it was said James A. Gilmore, President of the league, would reach here later. Weeghman would have nothing to say regarding the object of his visit, but it was currently reported about the hotel that a number of organized baseball men would come here later for the purpose of talking peace in the baseball world. It could not be learned when the representatives of organized baseball would arrive or who they would be.

PHILLIES FALTER IN NINTH; GIANTS WIN

New Yorks Had Been Shut Out by Chalmers Up to Their Last Time at Bat.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., May 3.—The Phillies bunched all of their bad baseball into one inning today, thereby giving the Giants an opportunity of evening up the series by squeezing out a 3 to 2 victory. Moran's men did not play bad baseball generally, but the mistakes they made were all crowded together.

The trouble occurred in the Giants' half of the ninth inning. Up until this time Chalmers was master of McGraw's men at all times, and when New York came to bat for the last time the Phillies had registered two runs, while the Giants had none.

Chalmers was pitching so well that even when Lobert led off with a double few of the spectators were worried. Lobert reached third as Bancroft tossed Fletcher out, and scored a moment later on Burns's sacrifice fly to Whitted. Thus far all was well, for the Phillies were still one run ahead, and there was only one more man to be retired.

Chalmers quickly got two strikes on Robertson, when the latter started to foul them off. Finally he sent a tainted single to Dugey, and the Giants began to show signs of life. Chalmers also had two strikes on Brainard, when he also scratched a single.

Chief Meyers came to the plate with the tying run on third and the winning run on second. Chalmers, who appeared to have just as much stuff as he did at any time during the game, made the Chief go after two bad ones. Then the Philadelphia pitcher evidently thought he could clip over the third strike on Meyers, but the latter was looking for it and hit a clean single to centre. Robertson came racing home as Whitted retrieved the ball and threw home. E. Burns set himself to take the throw and put the ball on the runner, but the sphere bounded badly and got away from the diminutive maskman. Before Luderus, who had backed him up, could recover it and throw to the plate Brainard came over with the run which won for the Giants.

In the Phillies' half of the ninth Whitted fanned. Dugey flied to centre and Lobert tossed out Luderus, ending the game. The score:

KAUFF NOW ON OUTSIDE.

Must Accept Brookfeds' Terms or Toss Away His Bat and Ball.

Benny Kauff, who hurdled the East River from Brooklyn and back again quicker than anybody ever did before, is still under suspension by the Federal League. Benny isn't drawing any salary these days, but he is doing considerable talking. He had a conference yesterday afternoon with Robert B. Ward, President of the Brookfeds, but the matter of his contract was not settled. The men will confer again today, and it is believed that Kauff will accept the Brooklyn Club's terms. There seems to be nothing else to do if he wishes to continue in baseball.

As soon as Kauff jumped to the Giants last week he changed his residence to a Broadway hotel. Yesterday he moved back to a Brooklyn hotel. During the course of several interviews, which Benny gave out yesterday, he said among other things that the contract he made with the Giants was binding, and if the New York Club did not pay him the bonus they promised for signing he would sue.

Kauff is plainly disappointed because he did not land with the Giants. A very rosy future was pictured for him. He is an impressionable young man, and the bigger the promises he heard, the more enthusiastic he became. Benny expects to confer with his lawyers part of the day, then maybe he will see Mr. Ward, and later, he mai give out some interviews and go to one of the many ball games around town. Life is easy for Benny these days.

HERZOG AND RIGLER FINED.

ST. LOUIS, May 3.—Manager Herzog of the Cincinnati Nationals and Umpire Rigler of the National League were each fined $5 and costs in Police Court here today for fighting at the St. Louis-Cincinnati game Saturday.

The fines were remitted on payment of costs. Neither Herzog nor Rigler appeared in court.

PITCHER WALSH ILL.

LOS ANGELES, May 3.—Developing a severe case of grippe from a cold contracted five days ago, Ed Walsh, Chicago American League pitcher, suffered from a high fever today, and was in such a condition that his departure for Chicago has been indefinitely postponed. Walsh's "come-back" as a premier pitcher also has been put into the indefinite future.

Walsh's physician predicted it would be several weeks, if not months, before he would again be in condition.

"HEAVIES" TIRE QUICKLY.

A large crowd of enthusiastic boxing fans attended the regular matinée boxing show yesterday afternoon at the Broadway Sporting Club, Brooklyn. The spectators saw forty rounds of boxing of various degrees—good, bad, and indifferent. There were ten semi-professional bouts of three rounds each and a ten-round final between heavyweights. Joe Woods of Bay Ridge and Battling Johnson, announced as the champion of the Fiji, or the South Sea Islands, whichever has Tahiti as its capital, this being the town of Johnson's nativity, furnished the fireworks in the final.

There was little to choose between them. Both men sparred cautiously in the opening round. Woods was the first to get into action. He started jabbing Johnson's left eye, under which there was a scar, until he had that optic all puffed. In the fourth, Johnson neutralized what little advantage his opponent had gained in the previous rounds, keeping up a perfect tatoo on Wood's stomach, and the latter not liking this kind of punishment went to a clinch at ecerp opportunity.

Both were as slow as molasses in January. Johnson took a good lead in the eighth round, when with a hard right in the mouth, he drew blood. This slowed Woods up, and he held on tight throughout the remainer of the round. The ninth and tenth were even and little damage was done. Both men were tired at the finish and the gong was a welcome sound.

The results of the preliminaries were as follows:

Young Whitey had a shade on Battling Joe. Young Swat Mulligan stopped Young Silver in the second round. Eddie Chase defeated Ellmer Green. The latter refused to continue after the first round. Kid Ziminio defeated Young Beck. The bout was stopped in the third round to save Beck from further punishment. Young Baldwin easily defeated Sailor Ascher. Young Jack Mann, defeated Young Martin. Young Kid Williams quit in the second round of his bout with the Yankee Kid. Willie Nesh of Philadelphia easily defeated Young Buckley, who was pounds pounds lighter and some inches shorter than his opponent. Joe Collins stopped Pascal Marionio, early in the first round, and George Raynor sent Frank Monroe to slumberland long before the opening three minutes was up.

Reich and Coffey Stop Work.

Boxing and heavy work in general will be eliminated from the training routine today at the camps of Jim Coffey and Al Reich, who are to box at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night. Both men have gone through two weeks of strenuous work without injury, and as condition will play an important part in the bout nothing has been overlooked to bring them around to their best possible condition. Both Reich and Coffey will weigh 200 pounds entering the ring. The fighting spirit of the men has been stirred to a high pitch on account of their long-standing grudge, dating back from the day Reich had Coffey all but out in a gymnasium when the bout was stopped. Reich has accused Coffey of being afraid of him since that eventful day until Coffey, after cleaning up all the other heavies in the East, decided to go after Reich.

Clabby and Al McCoy Tonight.

The Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn will stage the season's big middleweight bout tonight, in which Al McCoy, the title holder, will box Jimmy Clabby of Hammond, Ind. Clabby arrived in town on Sunday morning and went at once to his training quarters to put the finishing touches on his condition. McCoy has trained faithfully at Stratford, Conn., and will enter the ring brimful of confidence. He intends to force Clabby to step faster than he ever did before.

REFEREE STOPS BOUT.

Johnny Schwartz Outclassed by Young Rector, but Is Game.

Three ten-round bouts featured the card offered by the Olympic Athletic Club in Harlem last night, and the large crowd that attended witnessed some interesting sport. Only one of the feature bouts did not go its scheduled distance. This was the contest between Young Rector, the Jersey City featherweight, and Johnny Schwartz of the West Side. Referee Billy Roche was forced to intercede in the seventh round to save the West Sider from furthr punishment.

Rector proved to be a good two-handed boxer, with ability to land hard, and he sent home many effective blows. Schwartz, although outclassed from the start, displayed unusual ability for assimiliating punishment and stuck doggedly to the task of trying to land one deciding blow. Repeatedly Rector landed heavily on his opponent's face and stomach, but the Jersey City boxer was unable to floor Schwartz. One of Rector's blows split the West Side boxer's lip. Schwartz deserved credit for the exhibition of gameness he displayed when hopelessly outclassed.

In the first ten-round bout Young Lippy outpointed Young O'Mega. The contest was an even thing up to within a few rounds of the final bell, when Lippy cut loose and, assuming the aggressive, earned the honors by a shade.

Four "Heavies" in Rink Ring.

Four of the best heavyweights now in the East will box ten rounds at the St. Nicholas Ring Friday evening for a chance to meet the winner of the Coffey-Reich bout, which takes place at the Garden tomorrow. Jack Reed, the Ohio heavyweight, will clash with Jack Hemple, the Canliornia heavyweight in the first bout. The other bout will bring together Terry Keller, one of the gamest men who ever entered the ring, and Artie Stanton of Seattle.

The opening bout will show Willie Astey and Corona Kid, who is considered one of the best little men in the game. Astey has a knockout in either hand, and in the last ten contests has won with a knockout.

BROOKFEDS DIVIDE WITH PITTSBURGH

The Brookfeds staged the first double-header of the season at Washington Park yesterday, and split even with Pittsburgh, losing the first game, 3 to 1, and winning the second in an exciting ninth-inning rally by the score of 8 to 7. Benny Kauff, former centre fielder for the Brookfeds, who jumped to the Giants last week and was sent back to the Feds by the National League, sat in a box and watched the games, but he maintained a strict silence regarding his own case. He is under suspension by President Gilmore for jumping his Federal contract.

Although the first game was a clean, fast, errorless contest, taking only one hour and twenty minutes to complete, it was the second game of the double bill that furnished the excitement for the fans. Three times in the last contest the Brookfeds attacked the Pittsburgh forces in an attempt at a winning rally, but it was not until the ninth inning, with two down, that Lee Magee's nine sent the winning run across the plate, and then it was through the generosity of Left Fielder Jones of the Pittsfeds, who dropped Delehanty's drive into left centre.

Pittsburgh started scoring in the second game in the third inning, and, with two down, pushed three runs across the rubber. Seaton passed Berghammer and Mowrey singled. Then Seaton gave another pass to Konetchy, filling the bases. On his third strike Oakes slashed the sphere into centre for a double, scoring Berghammer, Mowrey, and Konetchy. Lewis drew a pass, but Kelly ended the inning by flying out to Anderson.

The Brookfeds came back in their half of the inning and scored two runs. Watson singled, going to third when Oakes let the ball get past him in centre field, and scored on Seaton's sacrifice fly. Anderson walloped the ball over Jones's head to the wall in left field, and dashed around the circuit for a homer. Dixon passed Magee, and after he had three balls on Cooper, the next man up, Manager Oakes rushed Camnitz into the game to relieve Dixon, and a fast double play put a sudden stop to the Brookfeds' rally.

With the score of 7 to 2 against them the Ward outfit started a rally in the seventh which netted them two runs and, incidentally, sent Mr. Camnitz back to the bench, while Clinton Rogge was sent in to stop the galloping Brookfeds. Another double play ended this Brookfed rally. With one down in the ninth Magee singled and Cooper walked, then Rogge tried to heave the ball over the stand and Magee dashed home. Evans singled and Myers walked. This ended the activity of Mr. Rogge, and Barger was rushed to the firing line. He fanned Holt, but Delehanty connected and drove the ball low into left centre and the runs necessary to win came in when Jones dropped the ball.

In the first game Pittsburgh scored two in the second inning. Konetchy singled and Oakes doubled, then Lewis swept the ozone thrice, but Kelly made a safety, scoring Konetchy, Oakes going to third. When Berry drove out a sacrifice fly, Oakes scored. Pittsburgh's other run came in the fourth when Konetchy tripled to left and crossed the plate on Lewis's sacrifice fly. Brooklyn's lone tally came in the second, when Evans doubled, going to third on Myers's single and scoring when Holt drove out a single. Myers was run down between first and second trying to steal, thereby cutting off another Brookfed tally. The scores:

CHANCE FOR ATHLETES.

Chicago Firm Offers Free Trip to Chicago to Big Field Day.

A number of New York and Boston athletes may make part of the trip to the national championships in San Francisco in August at the expense of a Chicago commission firm. Martin A. Delaney, coach of the Chicago Athletic Association, has written the following explanatory letter to a member of the New York A. C.:

"J. Loomis reported last Winter that you did everything possible to help some Chicago A. A. athletes make a trip to New York and Boston for relay races, and I will now try to reciprocate, if possible. A large commission house has authorized me to arrange for a special race as an added attraction to their Employes' Field Day, the date to be set by myself.

"Inasmuch as your team will be under great expenses en route to the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco, where the national championships will be contested, I have figured that we would be able, perhaps, to arrange a relay race between the New York A. C., Irish-American A. C., Boston A. A., and Chicago A. A., and help defray the expenses of the men.

"Kindly advise me as to your plans, time of leaving for the Fair and any suggestions you desire."

MOTOR BOATS GOING OVER.

Skippers Getting Ready for Forthcoming Visit of Warships.

The approaching visit of the United States Navy to the Hudson River has hastened preparations for motor boats going into commission all along the river front. Many who have been in the habit of waiting until June have suddenly decided to be in readiness to do the honors to the fleet.

Some idea of the activity and how it is being spurred on by the coming visit of the fleet may be gained by knowing that the New York Motor Boat Club alone put four boats overboard on Saturday. There was a 60, a 33, a 21 and a 16 footers in the list. Commodore Ruby of the Manhattan Island Club will go over today, and scores of others are about ready to follow along the river.

RUDOLPH UNABLE TO HOLD DODGERS

Long Hits Shatter the Braves' Pitcher and He Is Beaten, 3 to 2—Smother Rally.

A broad smile wreathed Wilbert Robinson's face yesterday afternoon at Ebbets Field. He had forgotten that there ever existed a path of thorns. The world was just one large planet of joy, without a jarring note. The reason was that the world's champions, the Boston Braves, had failed to impress the Dodgers with their greatness and the Brooklyn team captured a 3-to-2 victory over the learned players from the Hub. Before the game started, the feelings of Charles Ebbets and Wilbert Robinson were still smarting because of that erroneous report that Wheat was to be traded, but when the game was finished all that was lost sight of in the largeness of the new conquest. The Dodgers don't defeat world's champions frequently, and such a happening has all of the rights to be listed as one of the red-letter days of Brooklyn baseball. And when one remembers that the Braves—the champions, mind you—include a number of players who were cast-offs from the Dodgers in past seasons, it was particularly gratifying to show that the old club admitted no mistakes and still considered them cast-offs. That was the case yesterday, but, of course, there may be an entirely different story to tell this afternoon.

George Stallings placed Dick Rudolph, whose name is a household word in the Bronx, on the mound, but even Dick's presnece could not check the attack of the Ebbets-McKeever outfit. The Bronx lad was not quite the formiable opponent that might have been expected. If the plate had been larger he wouldn't have had to pitch so many balls and pull himself out of tight places. His delivery was not so sure as is customary. Perhaps it was a bad day for the wet ball. At any rate it did not break well. In reality he did not allow many hits. There were five altogether, but the trouble was that when the Dodgers did hit they left no doubt in the mind as to what was intended. It apepared always that there was a prayer that the sphere might skim over the fence. Of the five hits only one was a single. Two went out for two bases each, and in the seventh inning the Dodgers won the game by sending out two three-baggers in succession. Cutshaw whipped out the first to centre field and it started Connolly and Magee in an impromptu foot race. They had hardly turned back to their places before there was another sharp crack of leather on wood and again they went scurrying back to the fence. The ball was streaking it out like lightning and it rolled up under the score board as if to say, there is another tally for Robbie. Those two smashes broke things up generally. The Dodgers were too much in earnest to allow the Braves to get away with the game after such wallops. They had a two-run lead and it would need a crowbar to pry away that advantage. The Braves did try. They struggled until the first half of the ninth with only one run tacked up. Then came the rally that the Brooklyn fans had been fearing. A sharp single by Smith over the third sack started things, and though the next two men went out, a pass placed two men on the bases. Moran's single scored one run and then a foul fly ended the game in Brooklyn's favor.

Incidentally it was Wheezer Dell, the lanky Westerner who comes from Spokane, who kept the Braves in control. He pitched heady ball and it won for him the third victory of the season. When you look at Wheezer sideways you can't see him, but he's a great pitcher. The Stallings crew will sign the certificate telling all about that. They know. They made eight hits off Dell, but two were decidedly scratchy.

Jake Daubert and Butch Schmidt tried the "after you" sort of thing in the way of errors. Each made one and gave a run to their opponents. Butch tried it first in the fifth inning. Myers had just doubled to left, one of those that just burns the air over the third sack. He reached third on a wild pitch, and then Schultz rolled one up to Schmidt. Myers started to come in and this took Schmidt by surprise. He held the ball for a second, and then in astonishment dropped it. The result was that Myers scored and Schultz was safe. This was Brooklyn's first run.

In the seventh Daubtr decided an error would help the Braves. It did. Schmidt singled to left, and Smith tapped one to Daubert. He attempted to throw out Schmidt and tossed the ball away out to left field. The omnipresent Wheat was there and made a beautiful throw that nipped Schmidt at the plate, but Smith had reached third and scored when Maranville singled. The second run by the Braves was a result of a single by Smith, a pass and a single by Moran that scored the old Brooklyn player. In the seventh Brooklyn scored two runs. Cutshaw tripled and Myers followed with another, which brought in Cutshaw and Myers scored on Miller's out at first. The score:

OARSMEN WANT ROWING COURSE IN PELHAM BAY

TO BOOM PELHAM BAY FOR ROWING

Oarsmen Organize to Establish New Course—Harlem River Unfit.

Olin J. Stevens, President of the Nassau Boat Club, and a Bronx business man, was elected permanent Chairman of the Pelham Bay Course Committee of the New York Rowing Association at a meeting held at the New York Athletic Club last night. The meeting was the committee's first since its thirty members were appointed by R. Sturcke, President of the New York Association, several weeks ago. Mr. Sturcke was chosen Vice Chairman of the Pelham Course Board, Fred R. Fortmeyer, New York A. C., the Secretary, and Harry Lauer, Metropolitan Rowing Club, the Assistant Secretary.

This being the organization session, little advance was made in the work to get the city to establish a permanent rowing course of a mile and a quarter at Pelham Bay. Many suggestions were made as to how the duties of the committee should be conducted, but no real action was taken, and none will be until Chairman Stevens gathers his committee together at a session to be held some time next week.

Rowing men have come to recognize the fact that the Harlem River is no longer fit for rowing races, and they are more than eager that work should be started as soon as possible at Pelham Bay. Every year the Harlem course has been becoming more unsuitable and dangerous, and a change has been desirable for years.

One suggestion which may be adopted was that Mayor Mitchel and the Board of Estimate be invited to inspect the proposed course in connection with a gala day which would be arranged by the association.

President Storcke spoke for a few moments o nthe new course, and said it was his belief that it would cost the city little money to go through with the proposition. The entire financial outlay would fall upon the city, but the rowing clubs of the greater city are willing to co-operate in any manner desired by the city authorities.

There has been talk in rowing circles for some time that clubs along the Harlem that have recently built new homes would fight the proposition to take the championship course to Pelham Bay was without foundation. It will not be necessary for the Harlem clubs to move, for only regattas would be held at Pelham Bay. The Harlem River could continue to serve as a practise course.

Harry Lauer of the Metropolitan Club submitted a plan to build a 13-8 miles straightaway on the east side of the Hudson River from Fort Washington Park to Spuyten Duyvil. His plan was adjudged not feasible, for the property along this front is owned by the New York Central Railroad, which might at any time decide to build piers in this district and thereby spoil the course. The Interstate Park Commission would not permit a rowing course on the west side of the river.

Only half of the committee of thirty was present at last night's meeting, but a big gathering is expected at the next session. Those present were R. Sturcke, Fred R. Fortmeyer, James A. Miller, F. J. Berger, H. Oetting, H. C. Schroeder, James Cremins, C. H. Goeckler, E. Scully, W. Wade, C. D. Bergen, J. J. Mulcahey, and H. Lauer.

Tennis Coach for New York A. C.

The New York Athletic Club has followed the lead of several other clubs and engaged a professional tennis coach. Arrangements have been completed whereby William F. Ganley, formerly with the Essex Country Club in Massachusetts and now instructor at a White Sulphur Springs (Va.) resort, will take up his duties at Travers Island on Saturday. His services will be tendered all members of the club who use the Travers Island courts. The tennis season was opened at the Summer home of the New York A. C. two weeks ago.

COAST TO COAST IN A CANOE.

A Novel Trip Across the Continent Over Its Inland Waterways.

A canoe trip from the Atlantic to the Pacific over the inland waterways of the country is the novel trip which two young New Yorkers propose making during the Spring and Summer. Harry Duncan of Flushing and Harry Forman of this city, who were canoe companions on a trip up the Hudson and through the Erie Canal to Lake Erie last Summer, are the pioneers in this sort of an outing from coast to coast.

So far as can be learned no such trip has ever before been undertaken in a canoe so lightly rigged as their boat of the Oldtown model, eighteen feet in length, and with a portable motor, will be. The Winter has been spent in locating their route and finding the most feasible one with the least possible portage. Their idea has been to prove that such a trip over inland waters from one edge of the continent to the other can be made, and the seeming obstacles of the two mountain ranges that will have to be crossed, overcome.

Starting from Flushing some day this week, they will paddle to New Jersey, and the first stage of the journey will be through the old Morris and Essex Canal to the Delaware River. Thence they will paddle to the Delaware Bay and then through the Delaware and Chesapeake Canal to and through Chesapeake Bay to the Potomac. This lordly stream will be followed to Georgetown, where the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal will be employed to Western Pennsylvania. There the first portage will be made, the canoe being carried by train a few miles to the headwaters of the Monongahela. This stream will be followed to its junction with the Ohio, down which they will paddle to the Mississippi. There will be a short trip up this muddy "father of waters" to the still muddier Missouri and Kaw to the North Platte. This latter stream will be followed to the Yellowstone and thence north over its turbulent waters to its junction with the Snake River. Their plan is to follow this and its tributaries to the Columbia, after reaching which the course to the Pacific Ocean will be simple and easy.

It is for the purpose of overcoming the difficulties of navigation in the turbulent mountain streams that the motor, which can be attached to the stern of the canoe, will be taken. Rapids in which paddling is extremely difficult are common in these streams, and it is in this section that the most portages are expected, though study of the route, as given by travelers and in guidebooks, seems to indicate that these will be neither so common or lengthy as canoeists have imagined. Guides write that carries through these mountain streams are much less common than in a trip through the Adirondacks. Even headwaters are said to have depth enough to make paddling easy, except at the few spots where there are falls of a few feet in height.

Whatever of pioneering there is to be done will be in this stretch between the waters of the Snake and the Columbia, where the travelers will pass over the Divide. But the country is now so thoroughly explored and so well settled—for a country in the making from a wilderness to a civilized community—that the venturesome canoeists anticipate nothing but fun in this part of their journey.

The young men expect that the trip will take from four to five months. During that time they will live mostly in the open, taking a canoe tent along for shelter. They will carry only an ordinary canoe equipment for their journey, depending on the river villages and such foraging as may be necessary or convenient for their supplies.

So long a voyage under such conditions is a record for canoeists. There is so much that is appealing in it to the lover of life in the open that canoeists will watch their progress with interest. Should it be the success the young gentlemen confidently believe it to be, it will be apt to set a fashion in Summer outings which others will be very apt to follow, as it is so out of the commonplace and smells spicy with adventure.

NATIONAL CHAMPION SCORES AT TENNIS

Miss Molla Jjurstedt, the national indoor tennis cahmpion, with Miss Florence Ballin as a partner, won two interesting matches yesterday in the women's doubles competition of the Spring tournament of the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills, L. I. In the first round Miss Bjurstedt and Miss Ballin defeated Mrs. Robert Le Roy and Miss Gertrude Della Torre in straight sets, at 6—2, 11—9, and in the second encounter eliminated Mrs. S. F. Weaver and Mrs. T. B. Cassebrer in hollow fashion by the score of 6—4, 6—1. In both matches the national champion displayed the same brilliancy that won for her the indoor title. She was admirably supported by Miss Ballin, and the teamwork of the pair should make them a powerful combination this Summer.

More than three hours were required to decide the contest between Miss Katherine Force and Miss Abby Morrison and Miss Peck and Miss Pagenstecher. The first set of the match went to deuce a number of times, until the former pair broke through their opponents' service and won their own with the score of 14—12. The second set was quickly ended, Miss Force and her partner winning, 6—1. The contest was marked by long rallies and clever net work.

Theodore R. Pell proved to be in splendid form, and advanced two rounds as the result of his afternoon's work. He found a hard opponent in Frederick T. Frelinghausen in the first set, and was extended to 6—4, 6—3 to win. In his second match, with Ralph L. Baggs, Pell allowed his opponent only one game in the first set. He then let up in his playing, but when Baggs brought the score to 4 all, Roosevelt settled down again and ran out with the next two games.

The best match war between Charles M. Bull, Jr., and Dean Mathey, the former intercollegiate champion. Both players were in excellent early season form, and divided the first two sets. Bull then settled down to his long drives and hand smashes, and swept the former college player off his feet, winning the match 6—2, 3—6, 6—1.

Material progress was made in the other classes, several of which advanced to the semi-final round. With fine weather the Tennis Committee expects to close the tourney by the end of the week. The summary:

Women's Doubles.—First Round—Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Miss F. Ballin defeated Mrs. Robert L. Le Roy and Miss Gertrude Della Torre, 6—2, 11—9; Miss Edith White and Miss E. Gauthey defeated Mrs. E. M. Barnes and Mrs. E. Smith by default; Mrs. Royall Victor and Miss M. Taylor defeated Miss Alice Kortright and Miss Louise Witherbee, 6—2, 6—0; Mrs. M. McLean and Mrs. Barger-Wallach defeated Miss Katherine Wheeler and Miss Helen Simpson, 6—1, 6—1; Miss Katherine Force and Miss Abby Morrison defeated Miss Peck and Miss Pagenstecher, 14—12, 6—1.

Second Round—Mrs. M. McLean and Mrs. Barger-Wallach defeated Mrs. Royall Victor and Miss M. Taylor, 6—3, 6—1; Mrs. Robert Pope and Mrs. de Gersdorff defeated Mrs. Eward Knapp and Miss Cragin, 6—1, 6—1; Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Miss F. Ballin defeated Mrs. S. F. Weaver and Mrs. T. B. Men's Singles, Class E.—Second Round—A. C. Pooley defeated G. T. Hill, 4—6, 6—2, 6—4; A. L. Milne defeated R. O'Gorman, Jr., 7—5, 6—3, 8—6; W. H. Adams defeated E. F. Tyler, 6—4, 6—1.

Men's Doubles, Class A.—Second Round—Smith and Shafer defeated Peasiess and Parker by default; Man and Major defeated Freilnghuysen and Tobey, 6—4, 6—1.

Men's Doubles, Class B.—First Round—Edwards and Moore defeated Hagar and Swain by default; Myrick and Hildt defeated J. Norman and partner by default.

Second Round—Henry and Gatcomb defeated Sturdy and Gifford, 6—2, 6—1; Groesbeck and Bishop defeated Fake and Sammis, 6—0, 6—1; Grinnell and Hyde defeated Hoppein and partner by default; Davenport and North defeated Beardsley and G. Roberts, 6—4, 6—2; Platz and Dodge defeated Newcomb and Idelymen, 6—2, 6—3.

Men's Doubles, Class C.—First Round—North and Cunningham defeated Leask and partner by default; Farrington and Gunther defeated Coulin and partner by default.

Second Round—Barrington and Weaver defeated Farrington and Gunther by default; Kenyon and Kenyon defeated Milne and partner by default.

DIVIDE PRIZES IN GOLF.

White and Turner Take Gross After Tieing for Net Award.

Newspaper golfers tried their hands at the game yesterday when they teed up on the links of the Fox Hills Golf Club. This is the third time that the members of the New York Newspaper Golf Club have tried their luck at Fox Hills.

There was a tie for the chief prize of the day, that being in a foursomes competition, and the deadlock involved Gardiner W. White and Clifford L. Turner of magazine affiliations, and Col. W. N. Amory and Albert Hedley, with respective cards of 78, 8—70 anad 84,14—70. White and Turner took the gross and the other pair the net. That is how the tie was settled.

John G. Anderson, who was runner-up to Jerome D. Travers in the 1913 national amateur championship at Garden City, was paired with Harry D. Cashman, but the pair of them could get no better than 80, best ball counted, and as they had the low handicap of the day, a 7-stroke allowance, they had to be content with a 73 net. White practically made the 78 for his pair unaided, his partner helping him on only two holes. The scores:

Gardiner W. White and Clifford L. Turner, 78, 8—70; Colonel W. N. Armory and Albert Hedley, 84, 14—70; R. F. Foster and Fred K. Plaugh, 82, 11—71; Bozeman Bulger and W. J. McBeth, 95, 24—71; John G. Anderson and Harry D. Cashman, 70, 7—73; H. B. Martin and Grantland Rice, 82, 9—73; Frank J. Pope and Fred Benzinger, 83, 20—73; Archie J. Gifford and George F. Ralston, 88, 14—74; T. Hall and Fred Beachler, 109, 24—75; Andrew Murray and Charles Atherton, 85, 9—76; R. J. Groff and C. F. Parrish, 98, 22—76; Harry A. Haines and Alfred P. Roth, 90, 14—76; Clare Briggs and Albert Owens, 95, 18—77; John C. Flinn and Cecil Allen, 94, 16—78; Charles L. Fletcher and A. E. Laverty, 85, 15—80; J. W. Munroe and A. E. Laverty, 95, 10—80; S. W. Frenkle and C. F. Laux, 102, 19—83; H. Z. Hardin and W. J. Haywood, 100, 24—85.

TRAP SHOOTING HANDICAPS:

Based by Governing Body from Monthly Records.

Because New York is but mildly interested in trap shooting, except in so far as the men who indulge in the sport are concerned—and they are the wildest kind of enthusiasts—little is known of the organization which controls the sport.

Generally speaking, trap shooting is as purely amateur as any sport in the long category. Yet it is a game of pools with a division of money prizes from those pools. Primarily on account of the very considerable expense attending participation in it, this division of money from pools is winked at by all other governing athletic bodies, and no man loses his amateur standing because he accepts a division of the pools. In this respect it is like the pools of the golf links.

Trap shooting is governed by the Interstate Association for the Encouragement of Trap Shooting, an organization which has its headquarters at Pittsburgh, because its ruling spirit, Elmer E. Shaner, has his residence there. There are kept the records on which the handicaps are based. Those records are as carefully compiled as are those of professional ball players, of amateur golfers, of tennis players, of the performances of harness race horses or thoroughbreds, at the respective headquarters of the governing bodies of each of those sports. On those records are based the handicaps under which men shoot at all the sectional contests, the Interstate and State contests, and the crucial test of all trap shooters, the Grand American Handicap.

There is no sport which is better organized or better conducted, from the point of handicapping, than trap shooting. Averages of all monthly shoots are the basis from which the handicaps are worked out. As the records are officially registered and published annually, a novice with a good head for figures can work out the problem as to whether a given shooter shall fire from scratch, the 16-yard line or at any of the intervening points. The rules for handicapping are as inviolable as the laws of the ancient Medes and Persians were said to be. Monthly revision keeps them thoroughly up to date. So keen are the trap shooters to always do their best that it is to their credit that there is almost never a charge of a trap shooter "pulling" at any of the weekly shoots in order to get a better figure in a handicap.

Clean Sweep for New York L. T. C.

The New York Lawn Tennis Club made a clean sweep in the inter-club match with Bedford Park Tennis Club, played Sunday on the former's courts at Columbia Oval, Williamsbridge. The home players won five singles and two doubles, and only in one match did the visitors show any real opposition. This was between Arthur M. Lovibond, the Seventh Regiment crack, and Harry Steinkamp, in which the former won after three hard sets. The summary:

Singles.—Arthur M. Lovibond, New York, defeated Harry Steinkamp, Bedford Park, 4—6, 6—4, 6—2; Wylie C. Graub, New York, defeated Ingo Hartman, Bedford Park, 6—1, 6—4; Dr. William Rosenbaum, New York, defeated T. F. Work, Bedford Park, 6—2, 6—4; W. Halsey Wood, New York, defeated A. J. Ostendorf, Bedford Park, 6—2, 8—6; S. P. McAllister, New York, defeated Mr. Tousand, Bedford Park, 6—3, 6—0.

Doubles.—J. M. Shemacher and Dr. Wallace Kugler, New York, defeated M. E. Hoffman, Jr., and A. V. N. Fox, Bedford Park, 6—4, 10—8; Dr. Wait and W. Halsey Wood, New York, defeated Guy S. Brinkerhoff and J. Nolan, Bedford Park, 6—1, 6—4.

WOULD PLACE SPORT IN STATE'S CONTROL

National "Secretary of Athletics" Also Suggested by Chicago Mayor.

State supervision of all athletic contests to which an admission fee is charged is proposed in an amendment to the boxing bill now before the Illinois Legislature. National supervision of professional sports may follow, Mayor Thompson of Chicago believes.

Before the amendment was made it seemed quite probable that the bill legalizing boxing in the State of Illinois would be defeated. Senator Hull of Chicago made the amendment to the original boxing measure, proposing that instead of appointing a commission for the sole purpose of regulating boxing contests throughout the State an athletic commission be appointed, to have charge of all professional sports, and that a tax for the benefit of the State and sports competitions as well be levied.

The original bill called for a tax of 7½ per cent. of the gross receipts. The amendment would make it 7½ per cent. of the net receipts of all professional contests. Half of the proceeds would go direct to the State, and the remaining sum would be used in paying instructors and coaches in baseball, football, and other sports in schools which have never been able to afford the luxury of paid instructors.

Mayor Thompson of Chicago in support of the present bill in the Illinois Senate, argued for the appointment of an athletic commission. He did not even confine himself to the State of Illinois, but announced that he would work for national supervision of all sports, with a Secretary of Athletics in the President's Cabinet.

In discussing the situation in Illinois regarding the governing of sports competitions, Lieut. Gov. O'Hara said recently:

"There is no reason why Illinois should not take the lead in the conduct of sports. The present boxing bill offers a golden opportunity. Supervision of sports by the State is bound to come, and the law should be such that it would not be onerous on those affected.

"I think that the big ball clubs in Chicago would be willing to contribute to the State, but at the same time I believe that 7½ per cent. of the gross receipts would be unpopular. Make it net and no one would object. This would not affect the minor league clubs, who do not make money. Sports that are not for profit would not be affected.

"As for boxing, that would require close supervision of the commission unless a home-rule clause be inserted. The duties of the commission would also cover racetracks, and wherever harness or running races were held for profit the State treasury would be enriched.

"Here is a chance for the legislators, through this amendment, to put the State of Illinois in the forefront so far as sports are concerned. There is no reason why this should not meet with favor from all classes of people."

Remedies for Rheumatism.

CASCADILLA MAY ROW HERE.

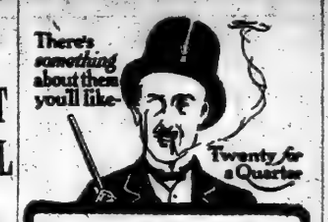
Cascadilla School of Ithaca, a sort of nursery for Cornell University oarsmen, has written President Sturcke of the New York Rowing Association, asking permission to enter a crew in the eight-oared shell race for schoolboys to be rowed on the Harlem River on Memorial Day. The Ithaca institution would pay all the expenses of its representatives, and the local rowing association would be under no obligations whatever. The rowing organization has taken the application under advisement and will decide at a meeting to be held next Monday night.

Many of the members of the Rowing Association favor permitting the Cascadilla boys to take part in the regatta, for their appearance would lend considerably more interest to the schoolboy race. The up-State school is recognized as being foremost among institutions of its kind in turning out good oarsmen, and annually Coach Courtney of Cornell has some Cascadilla boys in his various boats.

It is thought that no objection will be raised by the local schools over the entry of the Ithaca oarsmen, but if there is the New York association probably will have to decline the entry.



After the first few puffs you will say—"there's something about them I like."

THE CASE OF THE GULFLIGHT.

When Captain WILKES, commander of the American cruiser San Jacinto during the civil war, stopped the British mail steamer Trent and took from her MASON and SLIDELL, the Confederate envoys to Europe, Great Britain demanded the immediate release of the envoys, and pending compliance with that request made swift preparations for war with the United States. The seizure of the envoys on board one of her steamers was an affront to Great Britain and a flagrant violation of her rights; after due inquiry the United States Government released MASON and SLIDELL. The attack upon the American oil steamer Gulflight by a German submarine, which dispatched against her a torpedo and caused the death of her Captain and two of her ship's company, is an equally flagrant violation of our rights, and it is an affront to the American nation made more serious by the fact that it comes after due warning that such attacks upon American ships and American citizens will not be tolerated by us. The matter is of so serious a nature that there is a general disposition to waive for the present all discussion of the graver consequences to which it might lead. As anybody can see, the attack upon the Gulflight, an American ship flying the American flag, was one of those acts which constitute a provocation to war. But as there is not the slightest reason for a rupture of the friendly relations between Germany and the United States, it is to be assumed with entire confidence that Germany will disclaim any intent to destroy a merchant ship of a friendly and neutral nation, and that she will make proper apology and reparation.

It is to be assumed as most probable that the commander of the German submarine, in the dense fog, was unable to see that the Gulflight flew an American flag and mistook her for a ship belonging to the enemy. Such an explanation coming from Germany would palliate the offense, it would not excuse it, it would fall far short of justification. The commander of a submarine who launches a torpedo against any ship he may chance to meet upon the sea, without making sure of her nationality, is guilty of carrying on war with a degree of recklessness that indicates a depraved mind. Germany has been culpably negligent if she has not advised the commanders of her naval vessels that, in view of the warning we have given, they must avoid all risk of attacking one of our ships. When the war zone proclamation was issued, advising us and other neutral nations that in view of the use of neutral flags as a disguise all ships venturing within the war zone would run grave risk of destruction, we replied that we could not assent to or accept that doctrine of a belligerent's rights. We warned the German Government that if the commanders of its vessels of war, under whatever mistaken presumption, > should destroy on the high seas an American vessel or the lives of American citizens, it would be difficult for the Government of the United States to view the act in any other light than as an indefensible violation of neutral rights which it would be hard indeed to reconcile with the friendly relations now so happily subsisting between the two Governments.

The indefensible violation of our neutral rights against which this warning was issued has now been perpetrated. It remains for Germany to give to us, and with great promptness, assurances which will remove any suspicion that the attack upon the Gulflight was an intentionally unfriendly act. But we went further. We said to Germany that if such a deplorable situation should arise we should be > constrained to hold the Imperial German Government to a strict accountability of such acts of their naval authorities and take any steps it might be necessary to take to safeguard American lives and property and to secure to American citizens the full enjoyment of their acknowledged rights on the high seas."

The calmness with which our Government and our people habitually regard incidents of this regrettable nature should not mislead the German Government as to our true feeling. It is more difficult for us to be patient because our patience has been so sorely tried. Other American ships have been under attack from German missiles, one was sunk by a mine in the North Sea, an American citizen lost his life when the Falaba was sent to the bottom in circumstances which were a violation of the usages of war, and the American ship the William B. Frye was sunk by a German cruiser, although in the last-named case the German Government at once consented to make payment for the ship and cargo.

Moreover, German agents and German sympathizers have abused our hospitality and defied our laws in the course of operations undertaken by them in aid of the German cause. Little attention has been paid to the attacks upon us in the German press here and in Germany which, while they were unprovoked and insulting, have been for the most part too silly and stupid to arouse our resentment. An attack by a torpedo upon an American ship flying our flag is a very different matter. It falls within the scope of the warning we had given, and given in language of such grave import that we have not often employed it in our diplomatic communications with nations living on friendly terms with us.

For the very reason that the affair is serious and grave it has been and will be discussed with soberness and restraint. But Germany must not for that reason harbor any doubt as to what is expected of her. We may be very sure that she will not by any unseemly delay in making her explanation and apology or by any evasion of the point or any attempted justifications disappoint our hope of receiving assurances fully in keeping with the friendly relations that exist between the two Governments.

THIS BILLION-DOLLAR COUNTRY.

Speaker REED first discovered that this was a billion-dollar country. He made the discovery in relation to our expenses. Secretary REDFIELD has made the discovery anew, and in relation to our riches. He is a little premature, to be sure, but his discovery is welcome nevertheless. He remarks that this year our indicated credit balance, or, what "abroad" must pay us on account of the excess of exports above imports, will be about equal to our national debt. That is not an entire novelty in American finance. Foreign Chancellors of the Exchequer are troubled with their deficits. It is only the United States which is worried as a rule, to which the present year is an exception, by its surpluses. That is one reason why our Government finance is so bad. If deficits were a rule there would straightway be a reasonable budget system, and greater care in the levying of taxes, and of spending money.

The Secretary spends the billion—in his mind—as though it were the Government's. He reckons that it would build two more Panama Canals, which, by the way, the country almost paid for out of its pocket money, a sort of investment which it is not necessary to amortize. The year's billion excess of exports would pay the aggregate debts of all the States, or the debt of New York City, and Philadelphia's thrown in.

It is a pleasant day dream. It would be a nightmare to think of the nation setting out to spend that money. And, after all, it is not the Government's money. It belongs to the people, who would object to its being taxed away from them, and who, nevertheless, are being taxed for comparable sums, which are being spent not so wisely that additional taxes would be welcome. There is no waste like raising tax money for Government expenditure, and yet it constantly is supported on the idea that in some way there is profit in providing funds for Government trading.

GOVERNMENT SHIPPING AGAIN.

Secretary REDFIELD rejoices at the unprecedented balance of foreign trade, and is sure that it would be larger if the Government would supply ships to carry cargoes whence and whither American commerce desires them to go. This is in the familiar American manner of thinking of American commerce as an American affair, a matter of exports rather than of imports. Not even Secretary REDFIELD can complain of lack of cargo capacity for our exports. Their volume is amazing without assistance from a Government shipping line. If there is need of more shipping it is for imports, and the difficulty is that the imported goods are not being produced, still less sold. The check to foreign production and the inability of foreigners to pay for our goods with their goods is the check to our commerce rather than the lack of shipping. That is the explanation of the war orders, which are the backbone of our exports of goods rather than of agricultural products. There are particular exceptions, of course. Germany would be glad to send us dyestuffs in exchange for cotton, for one thing. But, speaking broadly, the check to commerce remains what it was, chiefly a disturbance of credit and production and of military hindrances to distribution.

No doubt there also are freight difficulties. These, however, are being dealt with better than by Government establishment of steamship lines. The bankers who are establishing foreign credits are doing more for the promotion of foreign trade than Government ships could do. The officials seem to think that if the ships are provided the trade will follow. Nobody buys or sells goods because steamers are provided. The motive of trade is profit, not economy in freight charges. If the trade and the profit are sufficient the shipping will appear from the most unsuspected sources, and if they are not sufficient the provision of cargo capacity is waste. One sign of this is seen in the Argentine trade. Liberal credits have been established there and the shipping is in the process of appearing in response to the stimulus of credit.

The representative of Argentina at the Pan-American Financial Conference next month, Mr. PEARSON, has expressed himself very much to the point. The trade of the United States with Argentina was larger fifty years ago than now. Scores of American ships used to be seen at Buenos Aires. Now there are none. The reason is that English and French merchants gave Argentina credits which enabled it to buy from them. Trade followed the credits and shipping followed the trade. That is now in process of reversal for our benefit. Argentina's European credits have been stopped, for no fault of hers. She must borrow elsewhere and can only borrow here. She will not have to trade here, but she will do so naturally, and the shipping will be provided by those who are under compulsion to trade, that is by Argentina. Our trade with Argentina will be optional. Argentina's trade with us will be influenced by her credits here. In order to pay her borrowings with her goods she will provide the costs of the operation, including the cost of shipping. If there are profits in the operation there will be opportunity for us to share them, and with no unnecessary thanks to Government.

The trade with Iceland is too small a matter for Government to trouble about, but it is providing its own shipping through the necessity of selling. Another vigorous factor in the establishment of American shipping is the foreign trade of the trusts, the Steel Trust, the Oil Trust, the Fruit Trust, and others. They are under the necessity of finding foreign outlets and they provide the shipping. The Norwegian-American Line is promoted by the Union Carbide Company. The list is extensible. In all cases the trade precedes the shipping, and it can hardly be imagined that if the trade did not exist it would be brought to life by shipping which could not exist without Government support. Secretary BRYAN ably supports Secretary REDFIELD in this idea of Government assistance to trade, in the Republican manner rather than in the Democratic, although they are Democrats. Secretary BRYAN published a list of things which Holland would buy from us if we would provide the shipping. Otherwise Holland would buy elsewhere. Where, it may be asked? The reason why Holland's trade is less readily supplied with shipping lies on the surface. It is in the war zone and subject to obstacles and costs which a Government line could not escape. In fact, a Government line running to Holland might cost the Government difficulties compared with which the promotion of trade is insignificant. The Government has a great deal to do without mixing with trade, and trade will be very well pleased if the Government will attend to its governing.

The idea that Government is already doing almost too much about shipping is entertained by not a few. The La Follette Seamen's bill is a distinct addition to the costs of American shipping and a discouragement to Government shipping as well as to any other on a commercial basis. At the meeting of the Cunard Company in the middle of April the Chairman rejected the idea that the Cunard Company owes its success to the Government subsidy. Mr. BOOTH asserted that if Great Britain paid for its mails at the United States rate the Cunard Company would receive $250,000 more annually than under its British agreement. The suggestion that the Government is too liberal with the funds it uses to aid shipping is not encouraging to the proposal that it shall spend more.

COLLEGE MEN IN BUSINESS.

The business man who complained in a letter printed on this page of THE TIMES yesterday of what his experience has led him to believe is the general unfitness of college-bred men to take up a business life must have been unusually unfortunate in his acquaintance with young graduates. He complains of their bad penmanship and their bad spelling. The latter is not a defect to be attributed to a college education. If a boy does not know how to spell correctly when he goes to college it is conceivable that he may squeeze through an academic or scientific course without learning orthography. There are persons, and they of reasonable erudition, who never master the intricacies of English spelling, while, on the other hand, many children not otherwise noteworthy for intelligence learn to spell accurately at an early age. We are confident, however, that most young men who go to college can spell, and that the handwriting of the average graduate, even in this degenerate era of the typewriting machine, is legible if not beautiful. Time was when youths went to college only when they intended to enter one of the learned professions, but a great majority of graduates in these days go directly from the classroom to the business office, and there is ample testimony that there are plenty of college-bred youths who are apt and alert and soon familiarize themselves with the commercial routine.

We have in mind a number of young men who, within a year or two after they had received the degree of B. A., had put themselves by diligent application in a position to be able to choose between two or more offers of positions not only reasonably lucrative but promising large future profits. These are exceptional cases, but they certainly tend to prove that four years in college do not spoil a boy for the business career and to justify those modern merchants who aim to fill all the clerical and executive positions in their establishments with college-bred men. The young man who lacks a college education is handicapped nowadays. Success for him is harder to attain. He has missed influences that are potent in developing manhood, self-reliance, and knowledge of his fellow-men. The new graduate may not often know as much as he thinks he knows, but he has at least been put in a way to learn quickly and has had his faculties developed by his associations of four years.

Our correspondent who has had such bad luck with college men, if he is not too exacting in his requirements, has certainly encountered an unusually large proportion of college men who have derived no benefit from education. That a large number of boys are sent to college, and manage to get through somehow or other, who might better have been set to learning a decent trade is not to be denied. There is equally good testimony that a fairly large proportion of the graduates of the public schools seem to have learned too little from their schooling. Education can only develop good natural gifts, but in spite of such discouraging testimony as our correspondent has given, we are confident that the young man with a college education is better fitted for advancement in modern business than the one who begins at the foot of the ladder with small learning and is compelled to fight his way upward, if he is able to climb at all, against great obstacles.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

New Aspect of the Frank Case. As all other efforts to secure a new trial for LEO M. FRANK, in circumstances permitting a fair decision of his guilt or innocence, have come to nothing, the present determination by the Georgia Board of Pardons to make an inquiry into FRANK'S case that will amount to a calm hearing of all the evidence, new or old, is sure to give general satisfaction.

An inquest so elaborate by such a body is, of course, unusual, but it is an entirely legal exercise of a large discretionary power, and it is fully justified by the peculiarities of the situation. It should be, and presumably will be, as gladly welcomed in the State of Georgia as elsewhere. The Georgians are no more desirous than the rest of us that a man should be put to death for a crime that he did not commit or even for one the commission of which by him has not been proved beyond a reasonable doubt. That some of them—a fraction probably not as large as it has been articulate and influential—had, or seem to have had, inclinations of that sort, need not be ascribed to any essential difference between Georgians and other people.

A sufficient explanation can be found in a condition of intense public excitement, produced by a particularly atrocious murder following others of the same sort for which nobody had been punished. That brought strong pressure on the Atlanta police promptly to offer a solution of the latest mystery, and it is not in that city alone that such pressure has led to hasty action, afterward from various motives too long persisted in. And for what has seemed to observers, more or less remote, a groundless, or inadequately grounded, belief in FRANK'S guilt was shown by citizens of Atlanta, not because they thirsted for innocent blood, but largely because the newspapers of the city became irretrievably involved in the police aspect of the case, which was the first and popular impression, based on what has since proven to be a wholly false accusation of FRANK'S degeneracy.

The Board of Pardons will be free of the menaces that were directed against the original jury, and it is almost inconceivable that its members can fail to see what has been so clear to every disinterested student of the conviction—that it was reached in conditions that made a fair trial impossible.

Karl Bitter's Death Not Forgotten. Action in the case of the late KARL BITTER, the sculptor, run down and killed by an automobile in front of the Metropolitan Opera House, seems discouragingly slow to his friends and others who could not accept the verdict of "accidental death" as warranted by the circumstances. Accidental it was, of course, so far as the absence of any evil intent justifies the use of that word, but Mr. BITTER'S closer associates know that he was a man notable for full appreciation of street dangers. Not only did he take rather unusual precautions to avoid them himself, but he systematically taught the members of his family to be careful.

That he was crossing the street in the middle of a block when the so-called accident happened is true, and this in a way introduces the element of contributory negligence, but against this must be counted the well-known fact that in many places a crossing can be made in greater safety in the middle of the block than at the intersection of two streets, where the currents of traffic are more confused and confusing. Whether or not the front of the Opera House can be so described, it is a place where, after each performance, many people do cross, and drivers of automobiles and other vehicles are fairly chargeable with knowledge of this established habit.

Certainly they have no right to ignore that habit, and none to punish with death or injury those who venture into the street at other than the regularly appointed crossings. And always "reasonable" speed is safe speed. Whenever a pedestrian is run down, the strong presumption is that the vehicle doing it was moving at a rate which, in the circumstances, was excessive, as obviously it was a dangerous one.

The taking off of KARL BITTER was a loss to his art and to his city. It was not the more reprehensible on that account, perhaps—in the eyes of the law we are all equal, or like to think ourselves so—but in the case of eminence realization of wrong done is so much more poignant that the demands for reparation and future protection are naturally more insistent than in the case of mediocrity.

Showing Belated Caution. If even some of the rumors in circulation about "war orders" are true, the announced determination of the French Government to investigate, and, in case of need or reason, to revise or abrogate, the contracts made in its behalf will send apprehensive chills down many a spine.

That France and the other Powers with access to our markets should pay what are called "good" prices for what they want and must have in the only country able to supply them—that is all right. At any rate it is right enough by all the rules and regulations ever laid down and observed for the conduct of business in like conditions. But there have been whispers many of foreign agents, more or less officially accredited and authorized, who were not making their purchases with an eye quite single to the interests of their respective principals—who were thinking a little, and even much, about the possibilities of profits that were secret as well as personal.

Tales have been told of agents who demanded—and obtained—from reluctant, but not obdurate, manufacturers two invoices, and even three, for the same goods, and in every such instance, of course, the suspicion that somebody was being robbed could be entertained without convicting the entertainer of very shocking cynicism. However, that contracts made and signed by authorized agents, whether honest and wise or not, can be repudiated or changed at this late day it is not easy to see. To do it would vastly increase the difficulty of future negotiations and lead to a general insistence on "money down" at delivery, or even before.

If the Powers have been sending unfaithful or too acquisitive representatives over here, it is their own fault. American manufacturers are not eager to deal with middlemen, and they are not passionately fond of paying large commissions.

DR. GORGAS'S CRITICISM.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The unwarranted attack upon Major Gen. Goethals, published on the first page of THE TIMES this morning as emanating from Dr. Gorgas, Surgeon General of the United States Army, is so at variance with the facts that I cannot refrain from making a statement with reference to the matter.

In the first place, there appeared in THE TIMES several months ago, on the editorial page, a letter signed by one of the former engineers on the Isthmus, giving the facts with reference to the sanitary work which was efficiently performed by the civil engineering corps, and not by Colonel Gorgas. As a matter of fact, his inefficiency and neglect of duty with reference to the prevention of disease were apparent even to a lay mind. When visiting the Isthmus at the request of President Roosevelt and Secretary of War Taft in June, 1907, to make suggestions for improvements for the employes, I said to Colonel Goethals: "Why does Colonel Gorgas use machetes to cut away tropical growth?" After a hearty laugh he replied: "Well, that is ludicrous, but I have made it a point not to interfere with the sanitary department." Conditions forced him to do so afterward.

If Colonel Gorgas had paid attention to the prevention of pneumonia by securing in the quarters of the bachelors drying rooms for the wet garments of the men, and had he seen to it that screening for the quarters both of the bachelors and the married families was of the quality for which the Government paid, and had he provided in the hospitals one of the greatest essentials to the restoration of health, namely, good food, great suffering among the men and their families, much illness and many deaths would have been obviated. It was commonly understood that whatever was undertaken in the department of Colonel Gorgas was at an enormous expense. Had conditions continued which existed at the time that Colonel Goethals became Chairman of the commission, we would not today be able to point to a finished canal. One of the recommendations made to Mr. Taft was that Colonel Goethals should be given power and held individually responsible, and if he failed, then some one else should be put in his place. While legally such a step never was taken, Colonel Goethals's position as an autocrat was recognized by the officials at Washington as the only feasible method of securing the construction of the Canal.

Nothing, except drainage, was more essential to the prevention of malaria than proper screening for the homes, and yet Colonel Gorgas ignored the fact that the quality supplied by his pet Commissioner was of such inferior grade that it split and permitted the mosquitos to enter the quarters very soon after it was put upon the houses. This and other glaring items of neglect are well known by many who were there. A petty attack of the character made by Surgeon General Gorgas against Major Gen. Goethals is absurd. With due regard for his scientific knowledge, which, undoubtedly, has been of great humanitarian value, it has often occurred to those who were familiar with the shortcomings of the sanitary department before Colonel Goethals took charge of this work that undue credit has been given a very ineffective administrative officer.

Richmond Protests.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Can your powerful paper be induced to take up arms for the protection of the defenseless Borough of Richmond?

I refer to the unjust upheaval of the Staten Island schools in order to save a few dollars, regardless of lowering the efficiency of the schools. I refer to bleeding by taxation while leaving the island without cheap transportation, the only borough where for nearly half of its acreage it costs 60 cents a round trip to Manhattan. I refer to the closing of the lower waiting room of the Staten Island Ferry House after 10 o'clock at night—the very time when the ferry is used almost solely by bona fide residents of Staten Island. Whenever the permanent residents of Richmond Borough are the only people affected, miserly economy is promptly practiced.

SYRINX.

Within the forest there's a haunted pool,
Silent and deep. A moss-grown pathway leads
Close to its brink, where, laved by waters cool,
Quivering and rustling, grows a host of reeds.
Down such a path, maybe, fair Syrinx ran,
Panting with fear, a fugitive from Pan!
Beneath the low-hung arches of thick trees,
Sometimes at even, when the world is still,
Swept by the vagrant fingers of the breeze,
The reeds make plaintive music, weird and shrill,
As though the nymph, so long immured therein,

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Has it occurred to any one to test the child Winifred Stoner, for whom her mother makes such remarkable claims? The claims of the lecturer seem to have been taken for granted without any trial.

At the first lecture a number of small children were brought upon the stage, and the lecturer would have them repeat after her several words which meant "cow," "pig," &c., in Chinese; "good-bye" and "good morning" in Japanese, "Twinkle, twinkle, little star" in Latin, and a few in Esperanto. They would repeat these after her—though there were some whose lips did not move at all—just as they might say "eeny meeny meiny mo," and there is no certainty that in ten minutes after they could have repeated any of the words or told one kind from the other. After each attempt the lecturer would say with beaming complacency, "There you see, they speak Japanese," or Chinese, or Esperanto, as the case might be. But if Miss Winifred Stoner, the accomplished daughter, speaks her twelve languages only on that basis, she has not added much to the world's stock of knowledge.

Then, geography was supposed to be taught by giving each child a small globe and singing in rhymes some fact connected with a place pointed out on it. Thus:

> To Tasmania we will go
> Because they never there have snow.
> To Tasmania we will fly
> Because the wheat grows eight feet high.

Here is an idea, of course, but as Tasmania is not the only place where they don't have snow, what is to prevent Tasmania from being jumbled up pretty soon with a lot of other places? Furthermore, the number of rhymes is quite limited and the number of places is very great. How are you going to get enough to go around? If you must repeat the same ones, the mixing up process soon begins. Furthermore, there are many mothers who cannot rhyme at all, even in such an elementary way as above.

Note that if you must teach the geographical fact by locomotion, you run out of words expressing locomotion in very short order. As you have to make your fact suit your rhyme also, should we not be driven to this, for example:

> Out to Pittsburgh let us scoot,
> Where the air is mostly soot.
> From Rock Island let us skip
> For there's the great receivership.

Deviating from Binet.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your article "Questions to Test Mentality," you quote three of several questions which were asked a young girl. The first, which you admit is sensible, is the only one which, as you quote it, bears more than a passing resemblance to the original as developed by Professors Binet and Simon. The second—"If a bicycle rider fell from his bicycle and broke his neck and was taken to a hospital, what would be silly about that?"—you intimate is in itself silly. I agree with you. But how does it sound in its original form? "An unfortunate cyclist has had his neck broken and is dead from the fall; they have taken him to the hospital and they do not think that he will recover." Incidentally, I asked this of an eighteen-year-old boy whom I was examining last week and he was unable to see anything absurd about it.

The third—"Is it easier to forgive any one if he struck you in anger or otherwise?"—you say is clumsily expressed. Again I agree with you. Is Binet's original text open to the same criticism? "Why does one excuse a wrong act committed in anger more easily than a wrong committed without anger?" Either the examiner has wandered far from Binet's instructions or you have distorted the incident to make a good "story."

Who Deserves the Direct Tax?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your paper and other New York journals have stated many times in the last few weeks in substance that the Legislature which recently adjourned planned to get as much money as possible out of New York City, "to be expended for up-State purposes." We ask you to recall the uncompleted Barge Canal, its cost, and for whom it is being built. At the time of its projection, and when it was falsely declared that $101,000,000 would complete it, the up-State counties, except a few cities through which it passes and which hoped to profit by the money to be expended for its construction, voted against it. New York City, which was to be almost solely benefited by it, voted overwhelmingly for it, and carried the proposition to build it.

Without the millions that have been already expended for the canal there would be no necessity for a direct State tax and the State would have abundant funds in its Treasury for all its benevolent and charitable purposes. In the face of all this your paper and others are making much ado about New York City raising money by taxes "for up-State purposes." We ask what up-State purposes? Mainly the Barge Canal imposed upon the whole State by the votes of New York City for its own purposes.

French Use of Asphyxiants.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As you publish on the first page of the issue of April 26 an account of the use of asphyxiating shells by the Germans, perhaps you will publish the following paragraph from "Impressions of a Neutral in France," by Javier Bueno, the Paris correspondent of the well-known Spanish paper, A. B. C. The article in which this paragraph appears was written some time before March 13 last, or forty-five days before your article in question:

> In the vicinity of Epernay I saw a German trench in which every soldier was dead, still in the position of firing, and with no wounds. Was this the effect of turpinite? I cannot say, definitely, but death seemed the result of asphyxiation. A French artilleryman whom I met in Epernay told me that turpinite was being used, though not with every shot, as this explosive matter fouls the gun and necessitates its cleaning after every third or fourth shot. He also told me that the English tried to make use of turpinite, but that it caused their guns to explode.

Brazil's Sincerity.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Having read, with justified astonishment, the article signed by a "Retired Journalist" published in your issue of April 30 regarding Dr. Lauro Muller's visit to Uruguay, Argentina, and Chile, I must express my vehement protest against his very unkind and unjust words both concerning the Brazilian Minister of Foreign Affairs and the republics of South America. Dr. Muller's visit to those nations is the realization of a long-sought aspiration and marks the real friendship and cordiality which has always existed between the Latin-American Governments, whose relations are based on solid and everlasting sincerity, the American Government sharing the same in a most enviable percentage. It is not "a movement fraught with the gravest consequences to the whole American Continent, and to no part of it more seriously than these United States," as it appeared to the writer's fancy. The Brazilian Government is inspired by the laudable desire of establishing in our continent a real harmony and good understanding among its inhabitants.

REASONS FOR A STATE INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION.

Not to Change Existing Labor Laws at All, But to Co-ordinate the Work of Administering Them.

By GEORGE M. PRICE,

New York, May 3, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There seems to me to be much misapprehension as to the value and importance of the Spring bill, reorganizing and consolidating the Labor Department and the Workmen's Compensation Commission, upon which bill there is to be a hearing before the Governor on Wednesday, May 5.

As a member of the Committee of the American Association for Labor Legislation, which has been partly responsible for many of the features of the bill, I trust you will permit me to clear away some of the misapprehensions evidently existing among labor organizations as well as among some social workers in regard to this bill.

In the first place, let me state something which seems to have been entirely forgotten by the opponents of the bill, viz., the many criticisms of the working of the Labor Department for the last two years and of the organization of the Workmen's Compensation Commission. Since the reorganization of the Labor Department nearly two years ago criticisms have often been heard as to defects in the organization of the Industrial Board, its lack of power, the political and unsatisfactory composition of the board, the filling of the upper ranks of officials of the department by political employes without civil service examinations, and the general chaotic state of the work of the department during its formative period. Similar complaints have also been made as to the top-heaviness of the organization of the Workmen's Compensation Commission and the filling of all exempt positions from among members of the dominant political party.

These criticisms seem to have been forgotten in the present discussion of the reorganization bill. The opponents of the bill do not take into consideration, also, that the consolidation and reorganization bill does not imply the following points:

1. It does not affect the labor law or the Workmen's Compensation act except in their administrative provisions.

2. It does not affect the organization of either the Labor Department or the Workmen's Compensation Commission except as to the heads of departments.

3. That less than fifty employes of the higher rank in the hitherto exempt class are affected by the new bill.

4. That the rank and file of the Labor Department, as well as of the Workmen's Compensation Commission, are not disturbed and retain their positions.

On the other hand, the following features justify the enactment of the new law:

1. Consolidation of the functions of workmen's compensation and the administration of labor laws. Apart from the payment of claims for injuries, the work of the Workmen's Compensation Commission is an integral part of the administration of labor laws and of the prevention of industrial accidents. The consolidation of the two departments will avoid a great deal of duplication and put accident prevention upon a scientific and practical basis.

2. The administration of both departments by a commission is a principle recognized in the administration of the Workmen's Compensation Commission, which should for the same reasons be extended to the administration of labor laws. The idea of an Industrial Commission has also been adopted in the creation of the Industrial Board, which, however, has proved itself unsatisfactory because of certain inherent faults of its organization.

3. The administration of the Workmen's Compensation law is relieved from the too great number of deputy commissioners and assistant deputy commissioners and other high-class officials which made the department top-heavy.

4. The administration of the two departments is to be upon a bi-partisan basis, which surely cannot be worse than a mono-partisan administration.

5. The power to legislate and rule upon appeals and variations is given to the whole Industrial Commission, all members of which have equal administrative and legislative powers.

6. The abolition of exempt positions and putting of all superior positions in the department in the civil service.

7. The creation of an advisory Industrial Council, which simply substitutes an official council for the several unofficial advisory bodies which have been hitherto employed as appendages to the Industrial Board.

In view of the above considerations, it seems to me that the fears and criticisms of the Spring bill are not at all justified, and that there is much to be hoped for from a properly organized new Industrial Commission, especially with the probable retention of two such representatives of labor as John Mitchell and James Lynch.

It is also to be hoped that the most useful member of the Industrial Board, Miss Pauline Goldmark, will surely find a proper niche in the reorganized Industrial Commission.

Chairman of the Committee on Enforcement of Labor Laws, American Association for Labor Legislation.

THE PACE OF ART.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some fifteen years ago I was a student at Pratt Institute. I remember how I hung around in the halls and rooms feeling proud of the work on the walls. Today a friend called me up and I left my studio early in the afternoon to pay a visit to the school exhibit. There were the self-same youths and lassies standing around courteously advising the strangers to pass from right to left, or informing, "This is first year work." Human nature does not change, but art in its form of expression does. Yet here in Pratt are the self-same still-life drawings, the same heads, (only of different models,) the identical dry life drawings.

I walked into my old classroom. Yes, there is the corner with the ice box, in which we kept our flowers, red peppers, and other familiar still-life accessories. I looked at the walls. Am I fifteen years older or are these the same studies that hung in my time? There are those charcoal drawings delicately tinted with color, or the heavy line brush and ink sketches with bolder color, and further on I see the freer, "more artistic" work in full color. I said to my friend: "Look up there at those objects on the rack; now, quickly back to this group of studies (?). Up there mellow, subtle gradations of an infinite number of shades—here a general effect of red, yellow, blue, and green. And, look, there is the same view from the window—the red-roofed school and the bridge towers in the distance. Why have not a half-dozen seen that a half-dozen different ways?"

Scattered in between are glimpses of an illustration "model in relation to environment." My friend, an absolute layman, remarked, "Somebody is trying to imitate Flagg." A pen and ink or a brush and water and lamp black are still capable of a thousand variations in technic. Is it true that real technic is the result of knowledge and comes spontaneously with the attempt to express; or, is it to stick out all over the work killing what is expressed and hiding what one does know?

There are certain art magazines which, if taken up today and a thumb run over their pages, show in the composite color effect of their pages no difference from a copy ten years old of that same publication if it were looked at in the same way. I do not know whether it is bias or lack of perspective on the part of the editors. My conviction is that such a magazine should keep the reader in touch with the times no matter what the tendency.

The value of musical notes and rests, harmony and counter-point are the same today as when Beethoven composed; yet, what a difference in the ultimate result expressed if those compositions be compared with Puccini or Strauss! Drawing, pigments, the laws of contrasting, harmonious and complementary colors are identical with those employed by Inness that Jonas Lie uses today—you all know the contrast in the effects obtained. A school should advance in its teaching with the spirit of the times. It should encourage experimentation. Yes, it would even be of no harm if it were ahead of its times!

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It has surprised me that the celebration planned for the opening of the new stadium of the College of the City of New York has brought forth no comment from your readers. I find there seems to be general amazement that the honor of opening an American institution has been given to a foreigner.

An occasion so local should surely be celebrated with local pride, and New York certainly has theatrical producers of whom it can be justly proud. Why was not Charles Frohman or David Belasco considered? Mr. Frohman's "Jeanne d'Arc," with Maude Adams, would surely have been fitting. E. H. Sothern's work is close to our hearts. There are Mrs. Fiske and Otis Skinner. If it must be a Greek play, you need go no further than the column next to the news of Mr. Barker's production in THE TIMES for the announcement of Margaret Anglin's productions to be given this Summer in California.

SUNDAY'S HELL.

Its Feasibility, Reality, Use, and Content Debated.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In discussing Billy Sunday's emphasis on hell Dr. Chalmers asks if it is not odd that "apostles, saints, and godly men in all ages" should have professed a belief in hell, if no such thing exists.

Up to within about three centuries "apostles, saints, and godly men of all ages" believed implicitly that the earth was a flat disk and that the sun and moon and stars revolved around it.

Our Creator has put men of all sorts and conditions to live together on this fair earth of ours, and is it not reasonable to believe that he will do similarly in a future life, rather than separate them into sheep and goats on some imaginary basis of good and evil evolved in such minds as Dr. Chalmer's and the Rev. Sunday's?

If hell really exists it must be a place of considerable magnitude, because most of the inhabitants of the earth have been consigned there through countless ages by "apostles, saints, and godly men." So real and so large a place cannot be easily hidden; where is it? Dr. Chalmers and Billy Sunday, being experts on the subject, ought to be able to enlighten us.

EUGENE DAVIES.

Scranton, Penn., April 25, 1915.

Unreality.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Dr. Chalmers's letter entirely misses the point. The objection to Mr. Sunday, with his revival of mediaeval eschatology, is not at all that he makes hell too real, but, precisely on the contrary, that he makes it totally unreal. When hell becomes a place where God, with eternal persistence, inflicts upon the unregenerate endless torments of the most appalling torture it ceases to be believable.

The Eastern Situation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When Japan served her demands upon China she undoubtedly misjudged the temper of the Chinese people. Improved methods of international communications have brought the different parts of the vast republic much more closely together. The latest news of the Chino-Japanese situation is being disseminated throughout the country with remarkable rapidity. The spirit of nationalism is thus thoroughly aroused, and the Chinese people are even more united today than they were at the time of the revolution.

The Chinese people naturally look toward America for moral support. Among the terms of the Root-Takahira agreement is the following: "They are also determined to preserve the common interests of all powers in China by supporting by all means at their disposal the independence and integrity of China." In the interest of peace and civilization the United States should see to it that this agreement shall not become another "scrap of paper."

OLD ARTILLERYMEN DANCE AT BILTMORE

MANY DINNER HOSTESSES

There was a large attendance last night at the annual invitation dance of the New York branch of the Veteran Corps Artillery, which was organized in 1790, given at the Hotel Biltmore. The appearance of the military guests in their dress uniforms added a touch of color to the scenes in the ballroom and supper, during the evening.

Dinners were given preceding the dance by Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Oakley Rhinelander, Mr. and Mrs. A. Ludlow Kramer, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Van Rensselaer, Mr. and Mrs. Theodorus Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Shrady, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Elliott Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Guernsey Curran, Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Delafield, Mr. and Mrs. George Austin Morrison, Jr., Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Denny.

The occasion brought out a representative assembly of military men, including many officers and men from the Seventh Regiment, Squadron A, Twelfth and Seventy-first Regiments, as well as from the forts in the vicinity of New York. The regular band of the corps furnished the music for the dancing, with Lieutenant Henry Liff conducting.

Among the military guests were Colonel E. F. Glenn, chief of staff of the Department of the East; Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan,r commanding the National Guard of New York; Lieut. Col. Louis W. Stotesbury, General George R. Dyer, Adjt. Gen. W. A. Simpson, Chief Quartermaster J. B. Bellinger, Colonel J. L. Chamberlain, Lieut. Col. J. J. Byrne, N. G. N. Y.; Major H. G. Sanford, President of the Society of Colonial Wars, and Rear Admiral Nathaniel R. Usher, commandant of the New York Navy Yard.

The patronesses consisted of Mrs. Leonard Wood, Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Henry S. Rokenbaugh, Mrs. George L. Nichols, Mrs. T. Roosevelt Pell, Mrs. F. Egerton Webb, Mrs. DeWitt C. Falls, Mrs. Mortimer Delano, Mrs. W. Lanier Washington, Mrs. George D. Yeomans, Jr., Mrs. W. S. Groesbeck Fowler, Mrs. Louis W. Stotesbury, Mrs. Bryce Metcalf, Mrs. J. Herbert Claiborne, Mrs. T. M. L. B. DUNHAM TO MARRY.

Third Deputy Police Commissioner Engaged to Miss M. G. Putnam.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Putnam of 70 Willow Street, Brooklyn, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret G. Putnam, to Lawrence B. Dunham.

Mr. Dunham is the Third Deputy Police Commissioner of New York, having been appointed on Dec. 9 last by Commissioner Woods to succeed Leon G. Godley. Previous to that he was First Deputy Commissioner of the Department of Bridges. He is a lawyer, and is a graduate of Yale University, class of 1904. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Dunham of West Newton, Mass., and resides at 60 West Tenth Street.

Miss Putnam made her début several seasons ago, and is well known in the younger set in Brooklyn.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Harriman-Bisbee Wedding Plans.

The wedding of Miss Loise R. Bisbee, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Bisbee, and Oliver Carley Harriman, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman, will take place on Monday, June 7, in St. Bartholomew's Church, and the Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks, rector of the church, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Thayer of St. Mark's School, will officiate. Miss Bisbee will have no attendants. Mr. Harriman is to have his cousin, Alan Harriman, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wright Harriman, as his best man, and the ushers are to be another cousin, E. Roland N. Harriman, Edward Dodge, Henry H. Landon, Jr., Willard Simpkins, and Samuel Sloan Walker. The reception will be held at the Bisbee residence, 60 East Seventy-eighth Street.

C. S. Buckley Weds Marian Wilson.

The wedding of Charles Stone Bulkley of Summit, N. J., and Miss Marian Sherwood Wilson, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Howard Wilson of New York, took place yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, 901 Lexington Avenue, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Dr. D. P. McMillan of the New York Presbyterian Church. The bride wore a white satin gown veiled with tulle and a tulle veil and carried white orchids and lilies of the valley. She was attended by two flower girls, her nieces, Caryl and Alice Elliott, the daughters of Surgeon Middleton S. Elliott, U. S. N. Mr. Burkley's best man was Orrin Wood of Boston. A small reception followed the ceremony. After a honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Bulkley will live in Short Hills, N. J.

SOCIAL NOTES.

Mrs. Warren McConihe of 449 Park Avenue is sailing on the Patria on Saturday for Europe and will serve as a war hospital nurse in France until August, when Mr. McConihe plans to join her, when they will return to New York by the way of Spain.

A garden gambol for the benefit of the Mayfair Relief for Convalescents and Refugees will be held at the Biltmore on Thursday afternoon. Miss Julianna Cutting will be in charge of the general dancing.

The wedding of Miss Elizabth Goddard Binney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Binney of Providence, R. I., and Barnes Newberry, son of the former Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Newberry, will take place on June 28. Mr. Newberry will be graduated from Yale University in June.

Mrs. Henry W. Taft and Miss Leary will receive tomorrow with Mrs. Pierre Tartoue at the reception and tea Mr. and Mrs. Tartoue are to give for Cardinal Farley at the latter's studio, 6 East Forty-sixth Street. The recently completed portrait of the Cardinal will be shown.

Mrs. Clarence Clough Buel will give a French tea this afternoon. A one-act play in French will be presented by Beatrice Wood, M. Renavant, and Frederic Mathews, and Mrs. Herbert Brown will recite two short French poems.

Swift & Company's sales of Beef in New York City for the week ending Saturday, May 1st, averaged as follows: Domestic Beef, 11.66 cents per pound.—Advt.

ANOTHER WAR PLAY ACTED

The latest, but hardly the best, of many recently inspired war plays was produced for the first time yesterday afternoon, when "The Spoils of War" was presented as part of the week's program at the Palace Theatre. This one-act frenzy by Hilliard Booth, which summons womankind to a united rebellion against war's inhumanity, has for its story that of a conquering general whose own daughter is mistaken by his soldiers for one of the conquered people. At the violent conclusion, his wife, maddened by what she has seen, shoots him and every other soldier in sight. It would not be easy to exaggerate the horrors of war, but, dramatically, Mr. Booth's playlet is extravagant and reckless. Blanche Walsh plays sonorously the rôle of the wife, a part which, according to early gossip, was to have served Mrs. Fiske for a contemplated entrance into the land of the two-a-day.

Though "The Spoils of War" is a theatrical protest against the ruthlessness of an invading army, yesterday was distinctly Berlin's day at the Palace, for the popular writer of popular songs had a part in nearly every number on the bill. Himself indefatigable, Irving Berlin seems to have every one else working for him. At least his "Bird of Paradise" was played by the Palace orchestra, rattled off by Bessie Clayton's attendant band, sung by his own protegée, Helen Rook, and finally warbled by Fritzi Scheff. The little Viennese prima donna found it received with such favor that she forthwith sang "for the first time on any stage" an entirely new and unpublished Berlin song, called "When I Leave the World Behind," wherein, after the rest of the universe has been divided into prodigal bequests, the testamentary emotions of the singer are set forth in a lavish refrain, concluding thus:

To those who love
When I leave the world behind.

Or words to that effect. Miss Scheff sang it often and, for that matter, so did Mr. Berlin himself, who wandered down the aisle at Miss Scheff's invitation, having chanced by the greatest good fortune to be in the audience just at that moment.

GOODHUE-SMITH WEDDING.

Bride Wears a Lace Veil Worn by Her Great-Grandmother.

The wedding of Lawrence Cushing Goodhue of Boston, Mass., and Miss Gertrude Munroe Smith, the daughter of Professor Munroe Smith and Mrs. Munroe Smith, was quietly celebrated at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the residence of the bride's parents, 169 East Seventieth Street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Lea Luqeer of Bedford, N. Y.

The house was decorated with Spring flowers, and the wedding took place in the drawing room under a bower of cherry blossoms, that came out from a cherry blossom screen that covered the end of the drawing room. The bridal party approached the temporary altar through an aisle outlined by white stanchions joined by white ribbons and decked with white flowers.

The bride, who walked with her father, wore a gown of white and silver tissue brocade cut on simple lines and having the low corsage finished with a bertha of old family lace. The court train, clasped to the shoulders, was of plain white satin and from her coiffure fell an old point lace veil, which she was the fourth to wear, it having been worn by her great grandmother, grandmother, and mother. She carried no flowers but an old point lace handkerchief, which, like all of the other lace worn, was once the property of her great grandmother. A string orchestra, made up of a harp, flute, violin, and 'cello played the Traumerer during the wedding ceremony. While the Lohengrin and Mendelssohn Wedding Marches preceded and followed it.

The maid of honor was Miss Anne Swan Hubbard of Boston, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wells Hubbard. She wore a gown of corn colored and silver brocade and carried an armful of cherry blossoms. There were no bridesmaids, but six friends of the bride, in light colored frocks, stood up with her. They were Mrs. Francis Abbot Goodhue of Boston, Mrs. Harold Freeman and the Misses Katharine Grane, Genevieve Sanford, Elizabeth J. Russell and Dorothy Cramp. There were also two little pages in picturesque costume, Masters George Walton Green and William Henry Wetherill, cousins of the bride.

Mr. Goodhue had his brother, Francis Abbott Goodhue of Boston as his best man, and the ushers were Franklin King, Robert King Munroe, William A. Barron, Franklin King and Roger Hooper of Boston and Eben S. Doolittle of Utica, N. Y.

The ceremony, which was witnessed by the families, was followed by a small reception, to which a few intimate friends were asked. Mrs. Munroe Smith, who received, wore an orchid-colored gown trimmed with yellow lace, and Mrs. Goodhue, the mother of the bridegroom, was also in orchid color. Mr. Goodhue has taken at house at Nahant for the Summer, and will occupy it at once.

Among the relatives at the wedding were Mrs. Huidekoper, the grandmother of the bride, of Washington, D. C.; General Huidekoper, Edward Huidekoper, Mrs. Henry Bowditch, Frederick and Reginald Huidekoper of Washington, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, Mrs. Butler, Miss Sarah Schuyler Butler, Dr. James Wooster and Mrs. Wooster, Mme. Cortazzo and Miss Cortazzo of Newport, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Wetherill of Philadelphia, Mrs. Henry P. Kidder of Boston, Mrs. Eliza Bowditch and William Codman of Boston, Miss Luqueer, and George A. Plympton.

Rossire-Hamilton Wedding May 10

The wedding of Miss Elizabeth Hamilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Hamilton of Mexico City, Mexico, and Louis D. Rossire, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Rossire of Yonkers, and grandson of the late A. Oakley Hall of New York, will take place on the afternoon of May 10, in St. Andrew's Church at Yonkers.

Mr. Rossire and his bride will make their home in St. Thomas, Canada, where Mr. Rossire is connected with the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

ELEANOR CAREY DEAD.

Miss Eleanor Carey, an actress, who last appeared in this city at the opening of the Punch and Judy Theatre in the Fall of 1914, died last night at the Mount Vernon Hospital in Mount Vernon, N. Y., in her sixty-fourth year. Until a month ago she was playing in stock in St. Louis, Mo., with Florence Roberts. Three weeks ago she was operated on at the hospital.

Miss Carey was born in Chile, South America, in 1874; went to California, where she made her first appearance with a stock company in San Francisco. She made her début here in 1878, playing Queen Elizabeth in "Richard III," with Edwin Booth at Booth's Theatre, and subsequently appeared with him in the rôles of Katharine in "The Taming of the Shrew," Desdemona in "Othello," Portia in "The Merchant of Venice," and in other Shakespearian plays. Miss Carey was with the Union Square Stock Company for four years, supporting Clara Morris, and then toured in "The Silver King" with Frederick de Belleville. She also played with Robert Mantell, and was associated with Richard Mansfield in his répertoire.

Miss Carey played with Leslie Carter in "Du Barry" and with Robert Edeson in "Ranson's Folly." In 1906 she appeared with Wright Lorimer in "The Shephard King," and during the season of 1906-7 was with Blanche Walsh in both "The Woman in the Case" and "The Kreutzer Sonata." During the season of 1907-8 she was with the Belasco Stock Company of Los Angeles, Cal.

OPERA RETAINS ITS FIRST RANK SINGERS

Maria Barrientos, Soprano, and Henri Scott, Bass, Among New Engagements.

NEXT SEASON'S NOVELTIES

"Goyescas," a Spanish Work, and Additions to French Repertoire—Gatti-Casazza Sails Today.

General Manager Giulio Gatti-Casazza of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who will sail for Italy today on the Ancona after putting through a season of opera threatened with more difficulties than any New York has seen of late years, gave out yesterday his accustomed statement telling the make-up of the company for next season, the novelties contemplated, and other matters of operatic interest. It had been awaited with more than usual interest this year because of the many rumors of changes that were in the air.

With the single exception of Mme. Emmy Destinn, however, none of the singers of first rank is to be absent. Geraldine Farrar's name appeared in its accustomed place among the sopranos. She will not be heard during the first part of the season next Fall on account of her concert engagements. It is understood that Mme. Destinn, who has gone abroad, will return next season to make a long concert tour. Elisabeth Schumann, who was heard here for the first time this season, does not appear on the new roll, nor does Dinh Gilly, the Algerian-French baritone, who did not sing this year because the Austrians have held him prisoner on Mme. Destinn's estate in Bohemia. The only other important change is that Clarence Whitehill, the American baritone who sang last season in "Parsifal" and "Carmen," appears on the list as a regular member of the company for the first time in several years.

Among the new engagements is that of Maria Barrientos, a Spanish coloratura soprano widely known, who was engaged by Oscar Hammerstein for his last season of opera here, which the courts forbade. She has sung at the Scala in Milan and the Covent Garden, Buenos Aires, Warsaw, Madrid and Paris Opera Houses, among others.

The other women newly engaged are Edith Mason, an American lyric soprano, who has been a member of the operas at Nice and Marseilles; Helen Warrum, a young American, who sang lyric rôles with the Chicago Opera Company and afterward in Europe, and Julia Heinrich, the daughter of Max Heinrich, a famous German lieder singer, who established himself here many years ago. Miss Heinrich sang two recitals in New York this season after an absence from the concert stage of several years. She has sung at the Hamburg opera.

The new men singers engaged are Henri Scott, bass, who held a prominent position in the Chicago Opera Company, and Giuseppe De Luca, baritone, who is well known in the opera houses abroad for his singing of principal baritone rôles. He has appeared at the Scala, Milan, and in the opera houses of Rome, Naples, Lisbon, Petrograd, Buenos Aires, and Covent Garden.

Another new engagement is that of Carl Holy as stage manager. He comes from the Grand Ducal Opera of Mecklenburg-Schwerin.

Arthur Bodansky, who is to conduct German opera in place of Alfred Hertz for the first time next Fall, is an Austrian by birth, and a pupil and former associate of Gustav Mahler.

Among the new operas announced for production is "Goyescas," a Spanish work, with book by Periquet and music by Enriques Granados. It will be sung in Spanish, bringing this language to the répertoire of the institution for the first time. Borodine's "Prince Igor," which was to have been done last season but could not be prepared in time, figures among the works announced.

The French répertoire is to be strengthened by the addition of Bizet's "Les Pecheurs de Perles" and Saint-Saëns's "Samson et Delilah," neither of which has been sung at the Metropolitan for many years. Other novelties and revivals will be selected from a list comprising Wolf-Ferrari's "The Jewels of the Madonna," Zandonai's "Francesca di Rimini," Flotow's "Marta," Fevrier's "Gismonde," Kienzl's "Evangelimann," and either of Glück's Iphigenies.

Messrs. Toscanini and Polacco are re-engaged as conductors, Richard Hageman receives the title of "conductor and assistant conductor," and the others named as assistant conductors are Anton Hoff, Frederick Jacobi, Gennaro Papi, Francesco Romei, Hans Steiner, and Willy Tyroler. Giulio Setti will be chorus master, Edward Siedle will be technical director, and Jules Speck, stage director. Mlle. Rosina Galli is re-engaged as première danseuse.

In his statement Mr. Gatti-Casazza gives for the first time the répertoire of the imperial Russian ballet under Serge Diaghilew, to which the last four weeks of the season is to be given over. The works will comprise "Scheherazada," "Les Sylphides," "Le Pavillon d'Armide," "Le Carnaval," "Petrouchka," "Le Spectre de la Rose," "Narcisse," "Thamar," "Le Dieu Bleu," "L'Apres Midi d'un Faune," "Papillons," "L'Oiseau de Feu," "Le Legende de Joseph," and other ballets which have been successful in Europe.

At the outset, Mr. Gatti-Casazza summed up the results of the season in general terms, and said it had been a success.

"After the close of the season of 1914-15 more than on any previous occasion during my administration," he said, "I feel that I must express my most cordial thanks to the public, to Otto H. Kahn and his colleagues of the Board of Directors and to all the members of the opera company, my co-laborers.

"No season in the history of the Metropolitan, I venture to say, had been confronted at the outset by so many difficulties and with prospects less promising than the season just ended. However, the courageous spirit shown by the Board of Directors in assuming the entire responsibility for what seemed to be a most risky undertaking, the loyalty of the public which so numerously attended our performances despite the general financial depression and the good will and zeal of every one, high and low, connected with the organization, have helped surmount the difficulties. So that it affords me special pleasure to be able to say that the season has been a success."

Gruenstein-Bettmann.

Mr. and Mrs. Moritz Gruenstein of 60 West Ninety-fifth Street announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Fannie Gruenstein, to Jesse W. Bettmann, a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Bettmann of 3,100 Broadway.

Daniel W. Edgecomb.

FAIRFIELD, Conn., May 3.—Daniel W. Edgecomb, Secretary of State in 1873, inventor, astronomer, and manufacturer of telescopes, is dead at his home here at the age of 75 years. He was a member of the British Astronomical Association and of the Société Astronomique of France. He supervised the construction of the first electric street railway car in New York. Mr. Edgecomb had lived here for many years.

'ARMS AND THE MAN' AGREEABLY REVIVED

GIDDENS AND LOVE PLEASE

But Doris Mitchell is a Too-Vociferous Raina in Shaw's Enduring Comedy.

ARMS AND THE MAN.—A revival of G. B. Shaw's comedy by Arnold Daly. In the Park Theatre.

Captain Bluntschli	Arnold Daly
Major Sergius Saranoff	Montagu Love
Major Petkoff	George Giddens
Officer	Charles Laite
Nicola	Stanley Dark
Raina	Doris Mitchell
Catherine Petkoff	Anne Sutherland
Louka	Fania Marinoff

Arnold Daly, who entered some weeks ago upon a season of Shaw's comedies at the Garrick, gathered his company about him last evening, moved up to the Park Theatre, and marked the occasion by a revival of "Arms and the Man." This play has been seen twice in New York before, but there have been long intervals between the productions, and there must be many among this season's theatregoers to whom it is new or but dimly remembered. In general excellent the present performance scarcely measures up to the recent revival of "You Never Can Tell," but it has its admirable moments and is decidedly worth a journey to Columbus Circle.

This comedy, wherein the Irish dramatist sings "arma virumque" satirically, is as fresh as if he had planned it especially for the Granville Barker invasion of New York. He did write it in the early nineties, and while many a play conceived and produced since its first presentation has grown yellow in the intervening years, those years have left no mark on "Arms and the Man." It is not merely that its substance, its wit, and its satire have not staled, but its dramatic manners are all the manners of today. With this comedy and its bright companions Shaw anticipated and helped to shape the theatrical fashions that now prevail.

It was "Arms and the Man," with its deft suggestion that all is very likely to be humbug in love and war, which prompted the engaging "Chocolate Soldier" and its insidious "My Hero" waltz, which for some reason was ignored by last evening's orchestra. As the incorrigibly matter-of-fact soldier with his knapsack full of chocolate creams and his father's will full of tablecloths, Arnold Daly plays with delightfully quiet humor and grace. His first act exhaustion is so perfect that it becomes almost infectious and his exceptional gifts as a comedian are in full play in his later encounters with the persistently romantic Bulgarians. His performance and those of George Giddens as the reactionary Major Petkoff and Montagu Love as Sergius amply reward the visitor to the Park.

Doris Mitchell, who appeared to such excellent advantage as Gloria Clandon, is distinctly disappointing as Raina. She plays with an extravagance bordering on burlesque. This is emphasized by her unexpected disposition to roar forth all her speeches. Raina's heroics can hardly be whispered, but they need not be shouted. In vociferousness she vies with Miss Sutherland. These two were possibly haunted by the consciousness that they had just moved into an uncommonly large theatre, but, while the Park is somewhat more spacious than the Punch & Judy, it is not as large as Madison Square Garden.

Stanley Dark does well as Nicola, and Fania Marinoff, who enters Mr. Daly's forces for the rôle of Louka, plays it with understanding and just the proper devilry. It is quite the best thing she has done in New York. The company really should assemble before this evening and agree on some one pronunciation of Louka's name, and at the same time Mr. Love should either seek to convert his associates to his own notion or abandon his preference for calling Raina Raw-eena.

The stage settings are more nearly passable than those thrown together for "You Never Can Tell," and while they are pretty paltry, they may possibly be excused as tending to reflect the ideals of interior decoration attained in Bulgaria by 1885.

Although a widespread acquaintance with Bernard Shaw has not existed in this country much more than a decade, nearly twenty-one years have passed since the first New York performance of "Arms and the Man." It was played in London for the first time in the Spring of 1894, and on the following September it served to launch the season of Richard Mansfield and to open the newly completed Herald Square Theatre. Mansfield, of course, played Bluntschli. The Raina was Beatrice Cameron, the Louka Amy Busby, and the Sergius Henry Jewett.

When Arnold Daly made his revival in the Spring of 1906 these rôles fell to Chrystal Herne, Bijou Fernandez, and Aubrey Boucicault. By that time Shaw had come into his own. Mr. Daly has since played the part on the road in America an dhe has even played it in London. Indeed, it was during the London nengagement that he and the Irish draamtist had the falling out of which the echoes served as lively advance notices of Mr. Daly's present season.

That season is now transferred to the Park Theatre, where "Arms and the Man" isto hold the boards the first half of each week, with the remaining days devoted to "You Never Can Tell." Then, if we are good, Mr. Daly may give us "Candida."

OLIVE HARPER DIES.

Veteran Author and Newspaper Writer Was Widow of Col. D'Apery.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., May 3.—Olive Harper, a widely known author, died early today at the home of her son in this city. She was the writer of sixty-eight books, and in addition, had translated from the French many detective stories by Maurice Le Branc, and other works including Pastor Wagner's "The Simple Life." In private life she was Mrs. Helen Burrell D'Apery.

Helen Burrell was born in Tunkhannock, Penn., in 1842, and was taken to California by her parents in 1851. In 1870 she was commissioned by a syndicate of newspapers to go to Europe and write descriptions of life in the various capitals. While in Vienna she married Colonel D'Apery, a French engineer in the Turkish Army. He died some time ago in California, where they had settled.

While coming East to visit her son last January, Mrs. D'Apery fell in a train at St. Louis and fractured her hip. The shock of this accident, it is believed, weakened her heart, and eventually caused her death.

J. A. GOULDEN DROPS DEAD.

Bronx Congressman Had Just Arrived in Philadelphia—His Career.

Colonel Joseph A. Goulden of the Bronx, Congressman from the Twenty-third New York District, dropped dead yesterday afternoon in the Broad Street Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad in Philadelphia on his arrival to attend a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, with which he had been associated for more than forty years.

Colonel Goulden had just been on a visit to the family homestead near Taneytown, Md., which had been in the family for seven generations. In spite of the fact that he was in his seventy-first year, he had been apparently in first-rate health right up to the moment of his death.

Colonel Goulden, who lived at 2,433 Creston Avenue, the Bronx, left a widow and three children, Maurice Goulden, who was associated with him in business, and two daughter, Mrs. Mary E. Blanchard and Sister Regina Fidelis of the Order of Sisters of Charity. The body arrived in this city last night. The interment will take place at Taneytown.

Colonel Joseph A. Goulden was born on Aug. 1, 1844, at Gettysburg, Penn. He was educated at the Eagleton Institute at Taneytown, Md., and at 18 years became a school teacher. In 1864 he enlisted at Philadelphia in the United States Marine Corps and rose to be a non-commissioned officer, serving in the North Atlantic, Potomac, and James River Squadrons. He took part in a number of naval combats, particularly in the hot fight at Drewry's Bluff, when his ship was raked by the fire of the batteries which lined the southern shore of the Potomac. He was mustered out at the close of the war, and declined the appointment of Second Lieutenant in the regular army.

He again resumed teaching, and was soon appointed Principal of the high school at Emmitsburg, Md., and afterward at Martinsburg, W. Va. In 1870 he engaged in the insurance business in Pittsburgh with the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia. From 1882 to 1886, while he was a resident of Pittsburgh, he served on the staff of Governor Pattison of Pennsylvania. He took up residence in this city in 1889, when he was appointed General Manager of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company. He later established the firm of J. A. Goulden & Son, General Agents, 180 Broadway. In November, 1892, he was appointed a Commissioner of Education in this city by Mayor Grant, and he held that position until Jan. 1, 1896.

He was elected to Congress on the Democratic ticket from the Eighteenth Congressional District, which then had a population of 450,000 and was the largest Congressional District in the country. He was re-elected in 1904, 1906, 1908, and 1912, representing the Twenty-third District at his last election. He made a storm in Congress in 1906 by remarking that his company had to pay $10,000 graft at Albany and that the job of State Senator was worth from $50,000 to $100,000 a year, most of which was paid by the insurance companies. In 1913 Colonel Goulden ran on the Democratic ticket for President of the Board of Aldermen, but was beaten by George McAneny.

Colonel Goulden was formerly a member of the Board of Managers of the State Reformatory at Morgana, Penn. He was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Soldiers' Home at Bath, N. Y. He was Secretary of the commission which erected the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument in this city, Past Commander of the Winfield S. Hancock Post No. 259. He belonged to the Fordham Club, the Brownson Club, and the North Side Board of Trade. He was a member of the General Committee and the Committee on Organization of Tammany Hall in the Thirty-fifth Assembly District.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—The entire New York delegation in the House was appointed tonight as the committee to attend the funeral of Representative Robert Gordon, Sergeant-at-Arms of the House, made that announcement after an exchange of messages with Speaker Clark at Bowling Green, Mo.

James Fairchild Hudson.

PITTSBURGH, May 3.—James Fairchild Hudson, for thirty-three years the principal editorial writer of The Pittsburgh Dispatch and the author of a number of works on economic subjects, died suddenly of heart disease at his home in Benavon, a suburb, yesterday. Mr. Hudson was 69 years old. He was born in Oberlin, Ohio, and served for a short time in the civil war. Dr. Hudson then went to Oberlin College, from which he was graduated in 1867. His first newspaper work was on The Toledo Blade. He joined the staff of The Commercial-Gazette of Pittsburgh in 1874, and in 1882 became a member of the staff of The Dispatch. Dr. Hudson was the author of "The Railways and the Republic," "A Silver Symposium," and of several other works.

Greatest Quantity of the Greatest Quality

Greatness is measured by size and quality and influence; not by one of these, but by all three. Measured by these standards The New York Times has the greatest circulation in the world.

Size is represented by volume, or area, or weight, or numbers. By actual count of newspapers sold the circulation of The New York Times, daily and Sunday, is in excess of 300,000 copies.

The quality of a newspaper's circulation is measured by the character of its readers, their intelligence, their purchasing power, the continuity of their patronage, their standing in business or in the community. By these standards The New York Times is the acknowledged leader in quality of circulation.

Size and quality of circulation are intensified by influence; by the newspaper's seriousness of purpose and the authoritative character of its news. The New York Times is a recognized authority among the newspapers and periodicals of the world and an accredited institution in more than three hundred thousand homes.

The average advertiser, whether merchant or manufacturer or tradesman, can reach more possible customers at less expense through the columns of The New York Times than through the columns of any other newspaper or periodical in the world.

TO TEACH CITY BOYS JOYS OF GARDENING

Tract in Bronx Park to be Tilled by Youngsters Who Have No Back Yards.

$25,000 FUND IS NEEDED

Promoters Hope to Turn Schoolboys from Influence of Gangs to That of Nature.

A campaign to raise $25,000 to provide exercise and education in gardening for several hundred boys at a time from the more congested parts of the city has been started by a volunteer committee at the instance of the Bronx Society of Arts and Sciences. The committee, which has the custody of a sixty-five-acre plot in Bronx Park between the Zoological and Botanical Gardens, is composed of Mrs. Steven B. Ayres, wife of the ex-Congressman, Chairman; Henry Clews, Treasurer; Thomas W. Whittle, Commissioner of Parks of the Bronx, and Dr. William A. Murrill, Assistant Director of the Bronx Botanical Gardens.

"Our big purpose," said Mrs. Ayres, in outlining the projected work, "is to provide health insurance for the coming generation. Of course, we hope to rescue many boys from the crowded tenements and give them health and a useful occupation, but this will be only a means to an end. By teaching them practical gardening we hope to interest them in the work and in outdoor life so that when they come to marry and make homes for themselves they will want to settle in the country or at least in the outskirts of the city where they can have their own little garden plots.

"We believe that if the children of immigrants are saved from the influence of the city streets before they have come too much under that influence, they will prefer later to live healthy and wholesome lives in the open country.

"To give our work the best chance for success, therefore, we shall begin with boys who are just leaving school. Our selections will be made from the lads between 14 and 16 years of age who have reached the 7A grade and have obtained their working papers, intending to leave school for work. The great majority of boys of this class are unable to obtain work and gradually change from schoolchildren to the idlers and criminals. It is such boys whom we want to interest in gardening before the transformation has begun. Also we shall take boys only from the homes where there are no facilities for gardening. No boy who has a back yard or access to a vacant lot where he may make his own garden will be taken."

The plot where the experiment will be made has been donated by Commissioner Whittle, and Dr. Murrill has consented to teach the boys how to become gardeners. The first class, it is hoped by the committee, will be made up from the boys leaving school next June, who will be started on a two-year course in gardening. Not only will they have practice on garden plots allotted to them, but they will be taken through the Botanical Gardens and shown the work of experts. Also, lectures on practical gardening illustrated with lantern slides will form part of the course.

For those boys who show special aptitude, a post-graduate course in commercial farming will be given. The object of this will be to encourage and enable boys who want to make their living on farms to do so. Those who take the two-year course, Mrs. Ayres said, will be able to have gardens of their own in conjunction with any seasonal vocations, and those taking the post-graduate course will be expected to give all of their time to farming.

A feature of the gardening experiment will be the giving of a ten-day outing to different groups of boys from the city.

The boys of the garden school will be expected to go from their homes to the gardens daily, just as they now go to public school, but from them groups will be selected who will spend ten-day periods camping in Bronx Park. The campers will have a regular outing, with opportunity to play when they are not working at their gardens. Commissioner Whittle has provided baseball fields and arranged for instructive trips through the Zoological and Botanical Gardens.

Another feature of the undertaking will be that the boys will be allowed to take many of their products home for use by their families. Selections from the flowers and vegetables will be made for exhibition purposes, but the boys will get the bulk of what they produce. Also the committee hopes to make some arrangement whereby the carfare of the boys between their homes and the gardens will not be a tax on the young gardeners or their families.

Mrs. Ayres was careful to emphasize that the garden plan was not intended to take the place of public school gardening, but rather to supplement it.

"No boy who has opportunities for gardening in any public school will be received by us," she said. "Our idea is to have only the boys who would be absolutely deprived of opportunity for gardening."

The plan to raise the $25,000 estimated as needed for the success of the plan has already begun. It has been announced that subscriptions should be sent to Henry Clews, at 15 Broad Street.

FIGHT CIGAR-DRUG MERGER.

Tobacco Men Demand Dissolution of United Cigar Stores Co.

Following a semi-official announcement that the United Cigar Stores Company of America and the Riker-Hegeman Company were about to form a merger, protests were filed last Friday simultaneously in the District Attorney's office in New York and in Washington by William H. Hunter, attorney for the Independent Retail Tobacconists' Association of America, Inc.

The protest, which has been turned over to Assistant District Attorney Thompson, asserts that the combination is indictable under a clause of the Sherman law on the ground that it is a combination in restraint of trade.

The Independent Retailers' Association represents the interests of 1,700 retail tobacco concerns within the metropolitan district, as well as 30,000 to 40,000 affiliated concerns. They charge that in order to use the profit-sharing coupons of the United Profit Sharing Company they are forced to buy through the Tobacco Products Company. Asserting that this constitutes a trade monopoly, they have appealed to the Attorney General to take measures to dissolve the United Cigar Stores Company.

The matter has been referred to the special tobacco department of the District Attorney's office, which was instituted about a year ago at the time of the tobacco litigation.

TRICK WOULD-BE ARTISANS.

Pretended Trade Schools Take Fees and Time, but Teach Nothing.

Warning against a new plan for obtaining money under false pretenses is given in a report which Leonard McGee, Attorney in Chief of the Legal Aid Society, has just made to his organization. According to Mr. McGee, some small manufacturing corporations have devised a plan to tide themselves over the period of business depression due to the war. They do it by operating alleged trade schools in connection with their plants, and many instances where poor persons have been tricked out of their money have come to the attention of the society.

"These unfortunates," says the report, "secure the desired tuition, ranging from $25 to $50, by borrowing from their friends, or pawning any valuables they possess. The applicant then signs an agreement, whereby he is to work for nothing for a period ranging from four to six weeks, and the offenders promise to teach the trade and even give steady employment after he has finished his apprenticeship. The employer puts a novice to work, and at the end of the time specified the applicant is summarily dismissed. He has been taught nothing. He has paid considerable money to the defendant, and the defendant has secured his services for a number of weeks for which the applicant is given no remuneration. As usual, the defendant is judgment proof, and the District Attorney has been unable as yet to convict the offenders of any crime."

Other schemes for defrauding which it has been the work of the society to combat in the interests of the poor persons for whom it provides legal advice are set forth in the report.

It is said in the report that the Legal Aid Society last year went through one of the most trying years of its existence, because the appeals for help were more than usual, although finances were as limited as ever. Mr. McGee says his office represented 40,430 clients at an expense of $44,140, and that never before were so many appeals for aid had from the employes of the various city departments. They were mostly the victims of loan sharks, and the society has obtained from the Appellate Courts a decision on tying up salaries which has materially cleared the situation.

THE CUSTOMS SERVICE.

Recommendations Approved by the Treasury Department.

The Treasury Department has made public the recommendations of last year's conference of Collectors of Customs held at the Custom House in this city, together with the action of the department on the suggestions, which, to be effective, require adoption by the department. The recommendations relate to both the personnel of the service and regulations affecting the transaction of business.

The department concurs in the recommendation that all protests whether filed before liquidation or more than thirty days after liquidation shall be accepted and recorded at Custom Houses, but if filed before liquidation the protestants are to be informed that the protests are void. Another recommendation adopted by the Treasury is that brokers be furnished with desk room in Custom Houses and that no rent be charged therefor. The department approved the suggestion of the conference that, where the revenue derived from bulk cargo is very small compared with the weight, the actual weights should not be taken unless some special reason exists.

Another recommendation adopted by the department was that duty be assessed at destination on the entire shipment when the loss is merely part of a package and the package arrived at the first port in good order and is received at destination in bad order. If an entire package is lost in transit, allowance is to be made in the assessment of duties. The conference suggested that Postmasters and Assistant Postmasters be authorized to take acknowledgments on declarations of owners covering goods conditionally free, imported through the mails, such as American goods returned. The Treasury Department will take up the question with the Post Office Department and, if acceptable to the latter department, will amend the Customs regulations accordingly.

CHINA'S HEALTH NEEDS.

Commission Reports Opposition to Our Methods Waning.

The report of the commission to study medical and health conditions in China reveals the tremendous need for better medical, hospital, and nursing service in that country. The commission believes that better teaching is the first step, and with that idea it studied carefully existing medical schools. Seventeen schools were visited, together with various universities and secondary schools, both missionary and governmental, and a large number of hospitals. Everywhere the lack of funds, personnel, and equipment for effective work was apparent. In only one or two medical schools was there anything that resembled adequate teaching facilities.

The central government maintains schools at Peking and Tientsin, and there are government-supported schools in some of the provinces. Missionary medical schools are found in almost every province. In only a few places were adequate hospitals found, but many, mostly under missionary management, were doing good work under great difficulties. The need for medical work in China is great, and the opportunities for progress in all lines are equally great, the report states.

Though there is opposition in some quarters to Western medical methods, this is rapidly breaking down, and the objects of the commission were approved by officials and prominent citizens. The commission recommends that the foundation undertake medical work in China in co-operation with missionary and other existing institutions; that a high standard be maintained for medical instruction, which should be in the English language; that the time is not ripe for large public health work on account of lack of suitably trained men, though existing hospitals should be assisted and two model tuberculosis hospitals established; that the first educational work organized should be at Peking, if possible, in connection with the existing Union Medical College; that the Christian College for medical education at Canton and the Yale Mission at Changsha should be assisted, and that the two competing medical schools at Shanghai, both under American auspices, should be made over into a single institution. The requirements of the situation are so great that the development of effective service will be the work of years.

"The report," says The Journal of the American Medical Association, "is a record of a splendid piece of work, accomplished in a comparatively short time, by a body of experts happily selected for the task. It is a document of great human as well as medical interest in the picture which it reveals of conditions in an awakening country."

CUDAHY'S WILL FILED.

CHICAGO, May 3.—The will of John Cudahy, the meat packer and grain man, filed for probate here today, leaves the entire estate to the widow and four children. The instrument does not mention the value of the estate.

The bulk of the property is to be held in trust for seven years, when all of the heirs except John R. Cudahy of Chicago may take it over.

Counsel for the testator valued the estate at $1,500,000.

Medium Merinos Sell Poorly.

LONDON, May 3.—The offerings at the wool auction sales today mounted to 12,200 bales, including a quantity of medium inferior merinos, which met with a slow sale at 7½ to 10 per cent. decline and were frequently withdrawn. Good clips were steady and purchases of scoureds for Russia increased. Crossbreds were irregular, despite buying by the home trade.

A Deception That Pays.

A clothing buyer happened to compliment a manufacturer, with whom he was placing his order, on the finely tailored suit he was wearing. From the very emphasis that the manufacturer used in stating that the clothes were made in his own factory, the buyer was given the impression that the clothier was trifling with the truth. Not long ago he had reason to recall the incident when he was told by a clothing salesman that it was a well-paying investment for one of his profession to have a suit made to order by the best tailor possible and worn on selling trips.

French Have Contracts to Place.

With the wants of most of the warring nations settled by the several large contracts that have been let recently, France seems to be the only government that is still hunting for mills to take orders for uniform cloth. One commission house is understood to have closed a deal a few days ago for supplying a large quantity of goods, but the price specified is so low that the mills are timid about accepting a share of the business. The cloth, which is the regular sort used, has been offered to the mills at $1.25 a yard, which is said to be at least 25 cents below what they should get for making it.

Increase in Customs Receipts.

Customs revenue at this port has been of an encouraging character the past fortnight. In the week ended last Saturday, duties collected totaled $2,473,248, which is regarded at the Custom House as an excellent showing in view of the slump in imports from the countries at war. For some time the Government's revenue has shown an increase in the form of duties collected on merchandise withdrawn from bonded warehouses. This was illustrated yesterday when the day's receipts aggregated $447,140, of which sum $221,828, just about one-half, represented duties paid on withdrawals. It was said yesterday that receipts are likely to run heavy this week also.

Neckwear is Active.

It is difficult to pick the style leader in the women's neckwear field at the moment, but the evidences are that an excellent business is being done on large collars of the "lay-down" type. They are being shown in a variety of novel effects. Buyers are also favoring maline ruffs to a considerable extent, some of which are edged with narrow silk ribbon, while others are made with dainty ribbon. Quite a good business is being done on white ruffs, with black and white, black, gray, brown, blue, sand, and other color effects also moving well. Some of them run as high as $3 to $4 each at wholesale. In laundered and semi-laundered collars the Eton and Dutch types are being taken freely, and quite a good demand for sets is told of. Windsor ties continue to meet favor in a large way, especially black and white effects in novelty checks and stripes. The crêpe weaves are much used in these goods. Quite a number of the more elaborate collars make use of small flower and ribbon garnitures, and some show dainty patterns in hand embroidery. The most favored fabrics seem to be voiles, gabardines, organdies, and piques.

Large Drop in Gem Imports.

The depression in the precious stone trade brought about by the European war continues to be reflected in the imports at this port. The April report of gem transactions filed yesterday by Deputy Appraiser Wolf shows that the American people are apparently not buying precious stones to any extent, as last month's entries were more than $1,000,000 below those of the corresponding month in 1914. April's imports totaled $1,331,870, of which $926,498 were cut gems. Stones uncut, had a value of $388,834, while miners' and glaziers' diamonds were appraised by Examiner Treadwell at $16,538. In April, 1913, before the enactment of the present tariff law raising duty on gems, the importations reached the high figure of $3,898,681.

Variety of Waist Models.

Manufacturers of waists and blouses attribute the brisk business they are now doing to the wide variety of styles which have been put out to attract buying. The styles in vogue give all the freedom for original ideas that the designer could wish for. For the time being the popular models are being manufactured in the V neck design and have the flaring collar and a number of variations. Jabots are coming in again, if the present tendency is any indication. Striped materials, chiefly black and white effects, rule, and as in the designs themselves the same variety is given in the matter of materials. Combinations of voiles and organdie or net and organdie are moving very briskly. Crepe de chine and crepe Georgette and handkerchief linen are other fabrics that are being used.

Standards for Macaroni.

A public hearing is to be held in Washington on May 14 to discuss definitions and standards for macaroni, spaghetti, noodles and similar alimentary pastes, for the guidance of Federal and State officials in the enforcement of food and drug laws. All interested are invited to attend, and those who cannot be present in person may present their views in writing to the Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture on or before the date set for the hearing. The hearing has been called by the Joint Committee on Definitions and Standards, representing the Association of American Dairy, Drug and Food officials, the Association of Official Agricultural Chemists, and the Department of Agriculture. It will begin at 10 A. M. in Room 427 of the Bieber Building, 1,359 B Street, S. W.

Taking a Loss Promptly.

The head of one of the fastest growing lace and embroidery houses in the business gives most of the credit for the progress which his firm has made to the quick and decisive action which is taken when it is seen that goods are beginning to clutter up the shelves. The trouble with most businesses, he said, where style plays as big a part as it does in the lace and embroidery game, is the objection which the manufacturers find to taking a loss. The regular prices are held too long, he explained, after the popularity of certain goods has begun to wane. The thing to do is to mark down the merchandise immediately and keep on marking it down until it has been cleared out. The longer the manufacturer delays, the more his loss amounts to. Most houses, this man pointed out, could get much better results by putting into new merchandise the energy devoted to selling only half-popular goods.

The Floor Coverings Situation.

The two big sales of carpets and rugs that were held in this city recently have apparently not satiated the buying appetites of the jobbers and retailers to any great degree, and the former are taking regular Fall goods in a nice way, from all accounts. The retailers will stock up a little later. What was practically the rear guard of the army of salesmen left this city Saturday for their respective territories, and orders are confidently expected to start coming in in the course of the next few days. As has been the rule of late, rugs are better than carpets, but the demand is general. Axminsters, Wiltons, Brussels and velvets are all moving well, but the reports say that the cheaper goods are moving most freely just now. Of the business being done on linoleums and floor oilcloths there is little complaint being made, but it is felt by the producing interests that better prices should be got for these goods.

Colored Cottons Running Low.

Aside from the fact that the various lines of colored cotton goods are constantly being narrowed as the merchandise is sold and the dyestuffs supply is depleted, there has been no great change in this part of the dry goods market of late. Prices continue to rise on such goods as have not yet been put "at value" or withdrawn entirely, which will not be pleasant news to those buyers who "laughed up their sleeves" when the possibilities of a serious shortage in color stuffs was made known to them by the selling houses. Business is daily growing more difficult on such goods as dress and staple ginghams, prints, percales, outings, chambrays, denims, &c. While it is difficult, because of the varying assortments in the hands of the mills, to generalize on the colors, besides blue, that are scarce, it is said that reds, greens and blacks come near to heading the list. The Eastern mills are experimenting with the so-called fugitive colors with varying degrees of success, but it is thought here that none of the Southern manufacturers has yet taken them up.

Gray Goods Prices Stand.

The uncertainty in the cotton market had an adverse effect on business in the gray goods field yesterday. Buyers were after printcloths hard enough from all accounts, but the business actually closed was said to be small because first hands refused to accept the price views of those who wanted the goods. The letting out of small lots of 38½-inch 64-60s and 64-56s by second hands at 4¼ and 4 cents, respectively, encouraged buyers in their attempts to bear the market, and it was reported that sales of 39-inch 68-72s had been made by second hands at 4¾ cents. It was also said that in some quarters of the trade sellers were a bit more willing to meet buyers' views on goods for the later deliveries, but so far as could be learned this willingness, if it existed, was not proved to any great extent by the sales made. There was a good inquiry for sheetings during the day, and the weights suitable for bag purposes were said to have moved quite well at recent prices. Good words were also said of the day's business in fine goods and fancies. Staple printcloth prices for spot delivery were:

'CLEAN-UP' APPEALS ISSUED.

Drivers of the rubbish cars of the Department of Street Cleaning—475 of them—started out yesterday, the first day of "Clean Up Week," with two cards appropriately inscribed. This is a feature of Street Cleaning Commissioner John T. Fetherston's campaign to arouse civic pride with a view of making the city more beautiful and healthful.

Each driver has two cards which will be changed every week. This week's inscriptions on carts are as follows:

You live in the greatest city in the world. Let's make it the cleanest and healthiest.

There are ten other inscriptions which will be used the following five weeks.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Tripods, Fish, Wood, and Metal Articles Were Passed On.

In overruling protests by G. Gennert and Gallagher & Ascher, New York and Chicago, the Board of General Appraisers yesterday held that tripods designed for use in supporting photographic cameras while in operation are not "parts of cameras" within the meaning of the tariff law, and therefore not dutiable at 15 per cent. as claimed. They were returned as manufactures in chief value of metal with a tax of 20 per cent. ad valorem, which is affirmed.

Several jobbers in fish products were sustained in protests affecting the classification under the Tariff act of 1909 of fish of various kinds packed in tins. The claims sustained were by the Strohmeyer & Arpe Company and Charles Fredenberg of this city; George S. Bush & Co., Inc., Seattle; Swayne, Hoyt & Co., and the New Granucci Grocery Company, San Francisco.

C. L. Daly, San Francisco, objected to the classification of lumber invoiced as "super cedar" under the tariff at 10 per cent. ad valorem as "cabinet wood." He claimed at the hearing that the wood is sawed lumber not advanced in condition, and therefore free of duty. The witnesses testifying in behalf of the protestant stated that this kind of lumber is used for flooring, casings, furniture, paneling, and interior trim, and that it takes a brilliant finish similar in appearance to mahogany. This testimony, Judge McClelland said, tended to confirm the Collector's classification which was affirmed.

The board overruled protests by William Larzelere & Co., Philadelphia, relating to the classification under the Tariff act of 1909, of galvanized iron strips. They were returned for duty at 45 per cent. ad valorem as manufactures of metal, and were claimed properly dutiable at lower rates as shapes of rolled or hammered iron.

Another decision made by the board dealing with the Act of 1909, concerned importations by J. P. Lavigne, consisting of half-round and flat steel wire. The Custom House authorities took duty at 45 per cent. as metal manufactures, while the importer claimed a tax of 35 per cent. ad valorem or other rate under Paragraph 135, according to gauge. The record contained no evidence as to the gauge of the wire. In overruling the protest Judge Fischer points out that the Customs Court of Appeals has held that the first proviso to Paragraph 135 does not establish 35 per cent. ad valorem as a primary rate, but does establish it as a minimum rate. On authority of that ruling the present protest was overruled and the Collector affirmed.

Edward Bennche & Brother controverted the Collector's classification on merchandise invoiced as metal shanks, consisting of a cup one-eighth of an inch in diameter with a loop at right angles one-quarter of an inch long. Duty was levied at 20 per cent. ad valorem as manufactures of metal. The shanks were claimed properly dutiable at 15 per cent. as parts of metal buttons. The sole witness who appeared at the hearing on behalf of the importers testified that he was not able to state upon what kinds of buttons the shanks in question are used, and that as a matter of fact he did not know what they are used for. In view of this testimony the board affirmed the Collector.

MORGAN MUST ANSWER SUIT

Subpoena Issued for Him in Martha Washington Will Case.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—J. P. Morgan has been subpoenaed by the Supreme Court to answer the State of Virginia's suit to recover the will of Martha Washington, taken from the Fairfax County Court House during the civil war and now in the collection of manuscripts of the financier.

He will be served when he lands in New York from Europe in the next few days.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Collector Malone will hold today at the Appraiser's Stores, Washington and Christopher Streets, the semi-annual auction of unclaimed and abandoned merchandise remaining in the custody of the Government. The offerings represent 1,365 lots of dry goods, liquors, tobacco, cigars, cigarettes, and a great variety of other articles. The sale starts at 10 o'clock, and will be continued each day until all of the goods have been disposed of.

The monthly meeting of the Directors of the Cotton Garment Manufacturers of New York will be held Thursday at 4 o'clock in the rooms of the association.

To Yield 5⅞%

We offer the bonds of one of the largest and strongest public utility corporations in the United States. Net earnings over twice annual bond interest. The number of the Company's customers has more than doubled in the past seven years. This issue is highly regarded and is held by several thousand different institutions and individuals, insuring a constant and ready market. We recommend this bond as a very attractive purchase at present price.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Perhaps the best of reasons for yesterday's weakness on the Stock Exchange was the fact that there had previously been no substantial reaction following the prolonged advance. Wall Street regarded the crippling of an American vessel presumably by a German submarine as an incident which might lead to important complications, and it was to that news that most people referred yesterday's fall in prices. That undoubtedly was a factor, but the extent of the influence which it exerted was accounted for by the fact that recent advances had carried prices forward at a rate which increased the market's sensitiveness to any such news as that which came to hand yesterday.

Early in the day some stocks, notably United States Steel, showed marked strength, but that and practically all other stocks yielded later to the pressure to which the list was subjected. The decline went far enough to reach a number of stop orders, which had been placed by those who sought to protect themselves from too great an inroad into their profits in the event of a reversal in the course of the market. The position of the list yesterday also encouraged increased operations on the short side, and beyond those sources of selling the market was called upon to absorb a good deal of stock ordered sold by London. This extended to a number of issues, and in a few the foreign liquidation reached sufficient proportions to prove a substantial element in the day's selling.

There is no reason at all for assuming that yesterday's decline on the Stock Exchange reflected any lessening of the general confidence which has lately been felt not only in New York, but throughout the country. Conditions elsewhere as well as here have shown signs of improvement, which in part have been the cause and in part the effect of the optimism which has been developing in this country. If the market were never too impetuous, it might never have to react so long as general conditions remained favorable, but both when advancing and declining markets proverbially move too far or too fast reactions and recoveries are the natural means by which these excess movements are corrected. That in a general view of what went on in the market yesterday and of what had gone on there before is all that the day's reaction meant. If the situation which was the immediate cause of yesterday's setback should develop into one more acute, the financial community would of course have to take serious count of it, but that was not its expectation yesterday. There were internal reasons, technical reasons usually so called, for yesterday's setback, and such external developments as were pointed to as explaining the decline, the sinking of an American ship the chief among them, were contributory rather than primary causes of the day's break.

The bond market was still profiting by a very large and varied investment demand, but it was chiefly interested yesterday in the expectation of several important new issues in the very near future, the chief of those expected being an offering of Pennsylvania bonds. The great ease in money, the spread of confidence in future business, as well as the offering of rates which are attractive to investors, are among the elements looked upon as facilitating the financing of the needs of corporations in high credit which may make application to the capital market at this time. It is further true, of course, that a very large part of current financing is for refunding purposes, and to that extent calls merely for a reshifting of capital instead of an increase in the total amount employed.

LONDON MARKET QUIET.

Budget Statement Awaited with Great Interest.

LONDON, May 3.—Money and discount rates were easy today.

Tomorrow's budget statement is awaited with interest on the Stock Exchange. The market does not expect an increased income tax, but is prepared to accept philosophically further taxation in other directions to assist the war.

Business was moderate. Investors supported Japanese bonds, and the war loan and Colonial issues, but offered Indian stocks. Oil shares and Kaffirs were in better demand.

American securities were uncertain, and prices were below parity. A moderate business was done in United States Steel and Union Pacific. The closing was dull.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, May 3.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes 72 francs 50 centimes for cash. Exchange on London 25 francs 50 centimes.

WEEKLY FAILURE REPORT.

Readjustment of general business to a more staple basis is indicated by the diminishing number of commercial failures, each succeeding month disclosing progressive improvement in this respect. Thus, there were 2,063 insolvencies reported to R. G. Dun & Co. for April, as against 2,000 in March, 2,276 in February, and 2,348 in January—the decrease in comparison with the opening month of the year being 27.5 per cent. The April record, however, shows an appreciable increase over the same period of 1914, when only 1,336 defaults occurred, while the aggregate liabilities, owing to a few suspensions of unusual size, were next to the largest of the current year and more than double those of April, 1914—$43,517,870, comparing with $20,549,144 at that time.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Pennsylvania to Sell Bonds.

It was understood yesterday that an announcement of the sale by the Pennsylvania Railroad of a block of $65,000,000 of bonds was impending, and investment dealers who expect to share in the syndicate's underwriting were guessing as to the price at which the issue would be brought out. This will be the first offering under the Pennsylvania's new general mortgage, authorized by the stockholders in March of last year. Under the terms, the size of the mortgage is limited only by the amount of capital stock outstanding. It is expected that the new issue will bear interest at 4½ per cent., and will be offered on about that basis. After taking care of the balance of $87,000,000 of bonds maturing next October the proceeds of the sale will leave about $20,000,000 of new money for the company's improvements. Dealers believe that judging by the market's ready acceptance of the larger New York Central offering the Pennsylvania bonds will be absorbed by investors in a relatively short time.

The Magic Touch.

When the stock market finds a company which can supply something for the war makers to consume it has a busy day or two marking up prices on the company's shares. "Another Bethlehem," the commission man whispers, and competition for its stock is on. Yesterday it was Crucible Steel, but because the general market was very much out of sorts after the morning's war news, there was not so much of an advance in the newest favorite as might have been expected by the discoverers. Crucible Steel has had a member's card on the Stock Exchange for many years, but has not availed itself of the club privileges. Yesterday sales in the common stock totaled 22,000 shares, which carried the price up two points. Prior to sales of two small lots on Friday and Saturday of last week there had been no transactions in the junior issue in thirteen years. The preferred sold yesterday at 86, and the historians found that the previous sale had been made in 1903 at 64, but so many things have happened in between that the conscientious statistician would not concede an advance of twenty-two points between sales. The versatility of the American manufacturer is rated high by the speculators in his stocks.

Paying for War.

In view of the tremendous orders which have been placed in this country by the Allies, Wall Street has expected to hear at any time of arrangements for another credit here on behalf of Russia, France or Great Britain. Russia is spending millions for supplies, which are paid for through her fiscal agent in this city, but there has been little talk of a loan or credit to cover such purchases. Great Britain, on the other hand, is expected to make arrangements in this country, when it becomes necessary to protect her gold reserve.

Copper Exports Appear Light.

A casual inference to be drawn from the record of copper exports from Atlantic ports in April is that demand from abroad did not have a great deal of effect in lifting prices more than 3 cents a pound in the month. Shipments amounted to a little more than 37,000,000 pounds, in comparison with about 80,000,000 pounds in April, 1914. The point is to be borne in mind that the buying of April was largely for future delivery, so that the progress of deliveries had little connection with the progress of prices. In view of what has been said about Europe's heavy consumption of copper in war munitions, the deduction might be made from the figures that statistics hardly bear out estimates of the rate at which copper is being shot away. But allowance must be made for the fact that a vast quantity of copper is being turned into brass for the manufacture of shells in the foundries of this country, and does not find a place in port records of the movement of raw material, although it is destined for Europe in the end. Another thing to be remembered in comparing exports of this year and last is that in the Spring and Summer months of 1914 Europe took our copper in exceptionally large amounts.

War Stocks Beaten Down.

As was natural when the reaction occurred, stocks which of late had received the greatest impetus forward were subjected to the hardest blows yesterday. Gross declines of about ten points for Bethlehem Steel, eight points for Westinghouse, four points for American Locomotive, five points for Pressed Steel Car, and seven points for New York Air Brake, showed this. The action of these issues at times seemed to show that stop-loss orders were being caught, and the same was true to a lesser extent in the standard issues. In addition to selling brought about by this factor brokers said quite a lot of stock was let go by holders who had been under the impression that the "market never was going down again." On the whole, the day's decline was considered in the Street as a development somewhat overdue, and not in itself indicative of a broad change of sentiment toward prices.

Interborough Consolidated.

Stockholders of the Interborough-Metropolitan Company, despite the recent announcement of the Public Service Commission that the forming of the Interborough Consolidated Corporation will be scrutinized closely, have been sending their proxies favoring the proposed reorganization, according to a Director. It was said that so far only one man, a holder of a small number of shares of common stock, had declined to consent to the consolidation. He was quite satisfied with the old order of things, he wrote. When the Interborough-Metropolitan makes its answer to the Public Service Commission's complaint, it is understood, it will maintain that the new company will remain a holding company in every sense of the word and that the Public Service Commission has no jurisdiction over it. The opinions of lawyers will be cited in support of this stand.

New Haven Lines Gain.

New Haven lines, in March, increased their net operating earnings $522,000 and by continued economy they wiped out the $245,000 deficit of 1914 and substituted a surplus of $264,000 for the month. The story for the last nine months ended March 31 is also a comparatively cheerful one. While the gross earnings of $47,700,000 were nearly $3,500,000 below the gross earnings of 1914 for the corresponding period, the net earnings from operation increased by $1,700,000. It is a very effective commentary on better business to note that the 1914 deficit for the nine months was $870,000 whereas the 1915 report shows a surplus of $856,000. Even this is small compared with the 1913 surplus of $3,800,000, but there have been complications in New Haven affairs which must be taken into account.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The International Nickel Company has declared a dividend of 5 per cent. on the common stock, payable June 1 to shareholders of record May 14. Dividends for the fiscal year ended March 31 were 2½ per cent. quarterly.

More than two-thirds of the $6,100,000 City of Montreal three-year 5 per cent. bonds offered jointly by Harris, Forbes & Co. and Wood, Gundy & Co. were subscribed for on the first day of offering.

George H. Bowers, Edward M. Smith and Alfred Luery, formerly with the Audit Company of New York, have formed an accounting firm under the name of Bowers, Smith & Luery, 120 Broadway.

Jerome J. Danzig & Co., and C. B. Mitchell & Co. are offering $500,000 first mortgage 6 per cent. marine equipment bonds of the Luckenbach Company, Inc., New York, guaranteed principal and interest by Edgar F. Luckenbach individually, at par and accrued interest.

Sternberger, Sinn & Co., have opened their branch office at Sunset Avenue and Boardwalk, Asbury Park, N. J.

The Bankers' Trust Company is inviting proposals for the sale to it on July 1 of bonds secured by the mortgage of the Metropolitan Telephone & Telegraph Company, dated May 24, 1888, at a rate not exceeding 110. There is a fund on hand of more than $18,000 for redemption of these bonds.

Announcement was made yesterday that nearly $300,000 of the United Railways Investment Company collateral trust sinking fund 5 per cent. bonds of 1926 have been purchased by the Trustee for the sinking fund.

Horace P. Michaelis, formerly manager of Foster & Adams's Utica office, and late of the firm of Griffin, Kernan & Michaelis of Utica, has become associated with the bond department of W. C. Langley & Co.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Most of the day the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange was under heavy selling pressure. The day opened with a drive against the list, based upon the sinking of another American ship by the Germans, but, when United States Steel rallied for a time very sharply, the tone improved temporarily. On the recovery fresh supplies of stocks were encountered, with a decline to new low levels taking place in the afternoon. The greatest weakness was in the so-called "war order stocks," but virtually the entire list was included in the downward movement, which was accentuated by the reaching of stop-loss orders.

COTTON PRICES OFF 17 TO 20 POINTS NET

STOCK DECLINE A FACTOR

Recent Liquidation Shows There Is Remarkably Small Speculative Long Interest.

Cotton was weak and unsettled yesterday and prices experienced a further sharp reaction with a net loss at the close ranging from 17 to 20 points. The bear pressure noted recently was applied at times and this succeeded in dislodging considerable cotton held by Wall Street houses where sentiment was adversely affected by the decline in stocks. Bears naturally made a good deal of capital out of the sinking of the oil ship Gulflight, and Cotton Exchange experts on international politics were engaged in discussing the incident and its effect upon relations between this country and Germany.

Judging from the action of the market the decline is due largely, if not almost entirely, to technical considerations. The market efficiency of the various bull arguments apparently had been reduced by constant reiteration and the bear raids of the last week have disclosed a condition resulting from buyers either being timid or well supplied with contracts. The recent liquidation, however, has shown that a remarkably small speculative long interest exists, considering the extent of the advance. This at least is true locally where the speculative element have taken their profits in cotton and have turned to stocks on account of the activity in that market.

The weather in the South was more unsettled yesterday. The forecast called for cool weather in the Southwest and there appeared to be prospects of further showers in the Carolinas and Georgia. Texas advices state that the floods in the Brazos and Colorado Rivers are subsiding, although the lands along the lower ridge of these rivers are still inundated. Almost all the crops in the river bottoms probably will have to be replanted.

Exports yesterday amounted to about 68,000 bales, including 45,000 for Great Britain, and 15,000 to the Continent. The total is now less than 1,000,000 bales below last season and is far in excess of estimates current a few months ago for the entire year.

The final estimate of the cotton crop of India for last season shows an acreage of 24,632,000, or nearly 2 per cent. short of the previous figures for the season, with a yield of 5,232,000 bales of 400 pounds each, or 3 per cent. more than the yield of the season previous.

Reports on sales of cotton goods among local houses in April are said to be in excess of those for corresponding months last season. The increase on wash goods is estimated at 25 per cent. to 30 per cent. over last season.

Southern spot markets, as officially reported, were unchanged, 10 to 15 points lower. The local market for spot cotton was quiet, 20 points decline, 10.20, for middling upland. The range of contract prices, which closed easy, was as follows:

APPEALS ANTI-TRUST CASE.

Government to Press Shoe Machinery Company Prosecution.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Attorney General Gregory today decided to appeal to the Supreme Court the anti-trust suit against the United Shoe Machinery Company, recently dismissed by the Federal Court in Boston.

The appeal will be taken under the expediting act and the Attorney General will ask for a writ of error. Arguments will be made at the Fall term of court, if possible. Mr. Gregory regards this case as one of the most important now in the courts involving the Sherman Anti-Trust act.

The department is considering the advisability of bringing in the near future an additional proceeding against the Shoe Company under the Clayton Anti-Trust act, which forbids "tying contracts," such as the Government alleges this company has used in dealing with competitors.

B. & M. BILL PASSED.

BOSTON, May 3.—The Senate today passed the bill to permit reorganization of the Boston & Maine Railroad. The vote was 29 to 8. To the bill, as finally approved by the Public Service Commission, was added an amendment which provides that no Director of any other railroad corporation in this State, shall serve as a Director of the Boston & Maine and that the road shall not purchase materials or supplies from any member of its own board or the Director of any other railroad.

The bill will go before the House next week.

New Issue of Atlas Powder Offered.

Stockholders of the Atlas Powder Company having authorized $5,500,000 6 per cent. cumulative preferred stock for the stated purpose of taking care of any necessary financing, the Board of Directors is offering common shareholders of record April 30, the privilege of subscribing for 15,000 shares of the preferred and 6,000 of the common. For each 100 shares of common held fifty shares of the preferred may be purchased at par, and jointly therewith twenty shares of the common at 105, although the latter is selling in the market at about 160. Payment may be made in cash or in the 6 per cent. outstanding income bonds of the company at 102, or in both. The stock may be paid for in installments.

OPPOSE BERGEN BOND SALE.

HACKENSACK, N. J., May 3.—Justice Swayze of the Supreme Court today reconsidered his action of Saturday in dismissing a rule to show cause why a writ of certiorari should not be issued in connection with the sale of $742,000 in road bonds by the Bergen County Freeholders to R. M. Grant & Co. of New York at a private sale in December and signed an order granting to the City Club of Englewood, the plaintiff, the right to appear before the June term of the Supreme Court to continue its plea.

It was when representatives of the City Club asked Justice Swayze on Saturday for a continuance of two weeks in which to take additional testimony that he ruled the plaintiff had displayed too much delay in seeking the writ, the sale having been made Dec. 10 and the first application made April 12. Since the granting of the first rule, testimony in relation to the sale has been taken before Clarence Mabie of Hackensack as Commissioner.

As soon as the order was signed today President D. Fellows Platt of the City Club of Englewood sent out circulars to taxpayers of Bergen County asking financial aid in the fight to investigate the sale of the bonds at what representatives of the plaintiff regard as too low a figure. Mr. Platt explained tonight that the cause for the evident delay in the preparation of the case has been due to the lack of funds with which to conduct the investigation.

"These road bonds were sold by the Finance Committee of the County Freeholders at par," said Mr. Platt tonight. "They pay 5 per cent. interest and we regard 106 as a fair price. At any rate, we resent a private sale which brought such poor results."

Islip Bank Issues Statement.

ISLIP, L. I., May 3.—The First National Bank of this village, closed in December after H. Clayton Haff, who was cashier, disappeared, issued today the first statement since it was reopened in February. Announcement was made that obligations to the bank of the Roscoe Lumber Company, which were mentioned in connection with the $65,000 shortage, had been satisfactorily settled. The President, Eugene R. Smith, would not discuss the terms of settlement. The bank has not yet made an adjustment of the bonds of former Cashier Haff.

WHEAT.

The crop situation proved the dominating feature in the wheat market, and while at times the foreign situation caused sufficient buying to bring about good rallies, late in the session prices were at the low of the day and the close was ⅝@1⅜c below the final of Saturday. The visible supply in the United States showed a decrease of 3,713,000 bushels while bonded stocks increased 633,000. World's exports for the week were 13,317,000 bushels, against 15,666,000 last week and 9,248,000 last year. Receipts at interior points were large, but slightly under the clearances. Exporters were in the market for old crop wheat and sales for the day amounted to about 500,000 bushels. In the local cash market No. 2 red Winter wheat was quoted at 1.70 and No. 2 hard at 1.71, cost, insurance, and freight, track; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 1.64¾, and No. 1 Northern Manitoba, 1.64½, cost, insurance, and freight, Buffalo.

CORN.

Favorable weather for planting and preparing the ground for the new crop, as well as reports of more favorable weather in Argentina and larger receipts at primary points, caused quite general selling in the corn market and prices were lower, closing at a net decline of 1 to 1¼c. The visible supply in the United States showed a decrease of 1,762,000 bags, compared with a decrease of 4,134,000 bags last week and a decrease of 3,243,000 bags last year. In the local cash market, No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 87⅝c, prompt shipment. Exporters reported 200,000 bushels.

OATS.

The rains over the West were looked upon as very favorable for the new oat crop, and prices were easier, closing at 1⅛@1⅞c net lower. The visible supply showed a decrease of 1,730,000 bushels, compared with a decrease of 1,631,000 bushels last year. The local cash market was easy; standard quoted at 62½c; No. 2 white, 63c; No. 3 white, 62c; No. 4 white, 61¼c; fancy clipped, white, 63@64c; ordinary clipped, white, 61½@63½c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was quiet, and while prices rallied from an early decline the close was generally below the finals of Saturday. The big movement was liberal and the Western hog markets were lower. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 50,000; estimated for Tuesday, 16,000. Kansas City received 9,000 and Omaha 6,500.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 5,474 packages. At the opening there was a bare market and the fresh receipts were absorbed as fast as unloaded. Quite a firm feeling prevailed during the morning, but later receipts were on a somewhat larger scale, and the feeling was only steady at the close; prices without material change. Creamery, extras, (92 score,) 31c; higher scoring, 31¼@32c; firsts, 29@30½c; seconds, 27½@28½c; thirds, 25½@26½c; creamery, held, firsts, 26½@27½c; seconds, 25@26c; thirds, 23@24c; State, dairy, finest, 30c; good to prime, 28@29c; common to fair, 23@27c; renovated, extras, 23½@24c; firsts, 22@23c; lower grades, 20@21c; imitation creamery, firsts, 21½@22c; ladles, current make, firsts, 20½@21c; seconds, 20c; lower grades, 19@19½c; packing stock, current make, No. 2, 19c; lower grades, 18@18½c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 27,225 cases. Arrivals continue large, and the accumulations in warehouses are much greater than ever before recorded at this season. Advices from the interior indicate continued liberal supplies. The quality of the stock coming in is irregular and largely defective. Very high grades are rated about steady, but the market for medium and lower qualities is weak and unsettled, with strong pressure to sell and a wide range of values. High grades of dirties and checks are sustained, but much of the supply is below fine and offering at easy prices. Nearby white eggs continue in liberal supply, and much of the stock has to be sold in range of 22@23c; some ordinary lots lower. Fresh gathered, extras, per dozen, 22@22½c; storage packed, extra firsts, 21½c; storage packed, firsts, 20½@21c; regular packed, extra firsts, 20½@21c; regular packed, firsts, 19@20c; seconds, 18@18½c; thirds and poorer, 17½c; dirties, No. 1, 17@17½c; No. 2 and poorer, 15½@16½c; checks, good to prime, dry, 15½@16c; culls and poor checks, 10@15c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery whites, fine to fancy, 23@23½c; defective, 22@22½c; gathered whites, as to size and quality, 21½@22½c; Western, gathered whites, 21@22c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery browns, 21½@22½c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 20@21c; duck eggs, State and nearby, Indian runner, 25@27c; Baltimore, per dozen, 22@24c; Western, 20@23c; Tennessee and other southern, 19@22c.

FINANCIAL.

New Orleans, April 20th, 1915.

The City of New Orleans, acting under authority of Act 170 of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana for the year 1908, ratified by constitutional amendment, and now a part of the Constitution of the State of Louisiana, will receive sealed proposals at the office of the Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans up to twelve (12) o'clock noon, on the 26th day of May, 1915, for the purchase of $500,000.00 in face value of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans, authorized by and to be issued under and subject to the act aforementioned, and the constitutional bers, denominations and maturities of the amendment ratifying same, and of the authorized issue of $2,000,000, and in the form of and in accordance with the bond schedule of the maturities of the entire authorized issue as given and prescribed by an ordinance of the City of New Orleans, being Ordinance No. 8628, N. C. S., approved May 14, 1912, and Ordinance No. 2340, Commission Council Series, approved April 20th, 1915, of said city, authorizing the present offering.

Three hundred and fifty of said bonds are of the denomination of $1000 and three hundred of the denomination of $500, and bear interest at the rate of five per cent per annum, evidenced by coupons attached, payable semi-annually on the first days of January and July, respectively of each year.

Said bonds are the second issuance out of the total amount authorized by said act and constitutional amendment, and are of the numbers, amounts and maturities, as follows, to-wit:

Three hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($350,000) of said bonds shall be of the denomination of $1000 each, and one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000) of the denomination of $500 each, and of the numbers, amounts and maturities as follows, to-wit:

Said bonds are subject to call by the City of New Orleans on the first day of July, 1939, or on any interest day thereafter, at par and accrued interest on thirty (30) days notice of its intention to so redeem, published in the official newspaper of the City of New Orleans.

They are, by the aforesaid act and constitutional amendment, exempt from all State, Parish and Municipal taxes, and may be legally invested for the estates of minors and of interdicts, and are receivable by State, Parish and Municipal officers, where, by law, deposits of bonds are allowed or required to be made.

The payment of the principal and interest of said bonds is made a preferential charge upon the net revenues of the Public Belt Railroad of the City of New Orleans, and are and will be issued under and subject to the aforementioned statutes and ordinances, all of which are hereby referred to and made part of this advertisement for greater certainty and particularity.

Said proposals shall be received under and subject to the following conditions, to-wit:

Proposals must be in writing, sealed, and marked on the outside of the envelope "Proposals for the purchase of $500,000 of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans," and shall likewise be accompanied by a certified check on some chartered bank in the City of New Orleans, for an amount equal to one per cent. of the aggregate amount of the bid, which said check of the successful bidder or bidders shall be cashed and the proceeds retained by the City of New Orleans as a guarantee that the successful bidder or bidders will comply with its or their bids, and the said proceeds shall be applied to the payment of the bonds last delivered to the successful bidder or bidders, respectively. In case of the neglect or refusal to comply with any bid, the proceeds of said check shall be forfeited to the Public Belt Railroad Commission of the City of New Orleans.

No sale shall be made unless the aggregate of the bids received equals the full amount of the present offering of $500,000, in face value, and the adjudication shall be made to the highest bidder, provided, however, that no adjudication shall take place for less than par and accrued interest. All matured interest coupons shall be cut from said bonds and cancelled, and the successful bidder shall pay the interest which may have accrued on said bonds up to the date of delivery. The bonds shall be paid for in cash as fast as said bonds can be signed and delivered. All bonds will be delivered within thirty days from the opening of said bids. The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

Further particulars and information will be furnished on application to W. B. Thompson, Commissioner of Public Utilities, the Public Belt Railroad Commission, or to the undersigned. The final opinion of Wood & Oakley, lawyers, Chicago, Ill., as to the legality of this issue will be furnished to the successful bidder if so desired.

A. G. RICKS, Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans.

TELL HOW TO GET BETTER SANITATION

RESULTS OF AN INQUIRY

The States of West Virginia and Washington Allow Only $15,000 a Year to Health Boards.

"If you want better health, pay the price. Money spent in protecting the health and the lives of the people is the best of all investments. Don't be too eager to pass more health laws, but provide sufficient means to enforce those already on the statute books." This is in brief the message sent by the United States Public Health Service to two States separated by several thousand miles.

"It is a well-known axiom," says the writer, "that public health is within certain limits a purchasable commodity, and that each community practically fixes by its sanitary policy its sickness and death rates from such preventable diseases as typhoid fever, malaria, tuberculosis, smallpox, &c. The best indication of the adequacy or inadequacy with which a community is handling its health problems is shown in the ability of the existing health organization to lessen the prevalence of sickness.

"A great many States and cities have of late expressed a desire to be made familiar with their assets and deficiencies in this respect, and in compliance with requests from the proper authorities, the United States Public Health Service has been conducting a series of investigations of public administration and legislation. The most recent of these investigations have been made in the States of West Virginia and Washington, the reports of which have just been published.

"The studies in West Virginia were made at the direct request of Governor H. D. Hatfield, and in the State of Washington at the request of the State Board of Health. The reports cover in detail the requisites of efficient health organization and point out certain reforms which should be carried out in order to obtain the best results. In the interests of economy and efficiency, for instance, all sanitary work, be it child hygiene, industrial sanitation, school hygiene, milk control, &c., should be centralized and co-ordinated under properly equipped State Departments of Health. Local health administration must be strengthened by the employment of health officers, giving their entire time to their duty and fully responsible to the State Department of Health.

"While the meritorious work accomplished by the present authorities is recognized, it is stated that the adoption and enforcement of measures for the protection of the public health in these States have not kept pace with their growth in wealth and population. Neither of the two States has been sufficiently liberal in its appropriations for health work.

"For example, in 1914 both Washington, with a land area of 66,836 square miles and a population of about 1,200,000, and West Virginia, with an area of 24,022 square miles and a population of over 1,300,000, appropriated only $15,000 each for the use of the State Board of Health, while Maryland, with an area of 9,941 square miles and about the same population as West Virginia, appropriated $145,000, and Florida, with a much smaller area and population than Washington, appropriated over $80,000 for the same purpose."

The Public Health Service holds that at least 2 per cent. of the public revenue should be spent for sanitary work, since from no other expenditure is so much profit ultimately derived.

DECK OFFICERS ASK MORE.

Pay Demands Affect 318 American Steamers—Six Lines Give In.

The deck officers of 318 American steamships, belonging to thirty-eight companies operating under the American flag out of the Port of New York, have demanded increases of pay averaging $25 a month. Six of the principal lines agreed to grant the increase and others are taking the matter under consideration.

Robert H. Cowan, Secretary of the Neptune Association, the officers' organization, said yesterday that the steamship companies had been notified on April 1 of the demands of its members for more pay. He said that some of the lines had taken deck officers who had retired from sea duty rather than pay the increase asked for.

Officials of some of the steamship companies said yesterday that they were willing to talk with the officers in their employ regarding the wage scale, but they declined to recognize the Neptune Association as being empowered to deal with the matter. A few officers left their ships when their demands were not complied with, but the departure of the vessels was not delayed by their action, as the companies had made preparations to deal with the situation.

REFEREES' NOTICES.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action and bearing date the 26th day of March, 1915, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the Exchange Salesroom, Nos. 14-16 Vesey Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 5th day of May, 1915, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Joseph P. Day, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold and therein described as follows:

All that certain plot, piece or parcel of land, with the building and improvements thereon erected, situate, lying and being in the Borough of Manhattan of the City of New York, in the County and State of New York, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at the corner formed by the intersection of the easterly side of Riverside Drive and the southerly side of 119th Street; running thence easterly along the southerly side of 119th Street one hundred (100) feet; thence southerly parallel with Riverside Drive one hundred (100) feet; thence westerly parallel with 119th Street one hundred (100) feet to the easterly side of Riverside Drive, and thence northerly along the easterly side of Riverside Drive one hundred (100) feet to the point or place of beginning.

PHOENIX INGRAHAM, Referee.

The approximate amount of the lien or charge to satisfy which the above-described property is to be sold is twenty-one thousand ($21,000.00) dollars, with interest thereon from the 15th day of March, 1915, together with costs and allowance amounting to four hundred and fifteen and 80-100 ($415.80) dollars, with interest from March 26th, 1915, together with the expenses of the sale. The approximate amount of the taxes, assessments and water rates, or other liens, which are to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money, or paid by the referee, is twelve thousand ($12,000.00) dollars and interest.

Said premises will be sold subject to a first mortgage of $325,000, with interest at 5 per cent., which mortgage is now past due; also subject to a second mortgage of $30,000 with interest at 6 per cent., which mortgage is now also past due.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—A general rise in pressure over the greater portion of the West has been attended by fair weather, except in the Northwest, and by a considerable fall in temperature in the Plains States, although farther northward temperatures have risen generally and substantially. Over the eastern half of the country pressure has been low, with general showers, except in the East Gulf States and the south portion of the South Atlantic district, where the weather was fair with moderately high temperatures.

There will be showers Tuesday in the lake region and the Upper Ohio Valley and from North Carolina northeastward, continuing Wednesday to New York and New England. Over the remainder of the country generally fair weather will prevail Tuesday and Wednesday.

It will be cooler Tuesday in the Mississippi and Ohio Valleys and Tennessee and warmer in the plateau region. It will be warmer Wednesday between the Mississippi River and the Rocky Mountains.

Warnings of freezing temperature have been issued from the Western Dakotas and Nebraska into the extreme northwestern portions of Texas and Oklahoma.

Winds for Tuesday and Wednesday along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate, mostly north and northeast; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate, mostly east; south Atlantic Coast, moderate south and southwest.

FORECASTS: TODAY AND WEDNESDAY.

Eastern New York and New England—Unsettled Tuesday and Wednesday, with occasional showers.

New Jersey—Showers Tuesday and probably Wednesday.

Western New York—Showers Tuesday; Wednesday cloudy.

Eastern Pennsylvania—Showers Tuesday; Wednesday partly cloudy.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

3 A. M.	50	53	4 P. M.	66	63
6 A. M.	49	50	6 P. M.	65	53
9 A. M.	50	52	9 P. M.	61	49

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 56; for the corresponding date last year it was 60; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 55.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 52; at 8 P. M. it was 49. Maximum temperature, 63 degrees at 4 P. M.; minimum, 49 degrees at 7 A. M. Humidity, 59 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 68 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 29.83 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 29.70 inches.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Forty-fifth Street Houses Near Times Square in Bronx Trade—Miss Grace Dodge's Home Sold—Fifth Avenue Leasehold Bought — $450,000 Columbus Avenue Corner as Gift—Active Bronx Market.

The realty market opened the week yesterday with considerable activity. Among the features of interest were a deal in Forty-fifth Street, in the Times Square locality, the purchase, as revealed by the transfer of title in the Register's office of the late Miss Grace H. Dodge's home at 262 Madison Avenue, southwest corner of Thirty-ninth Street, and the stable in the rear by George F. Baker and his daughter, Mrs. W. Goadby Loew, and the sale of the Columbia leasehold at 612 Fifth Avenue, the former residence of Frederick S. Flower, which will now be altered for business.

The Times Square deal involved the sale by the Red Shield Realty Company, of which F. W. Rothschild is President, of the three five-story houses at 124 to 128 West Forty-fifth Street, between Broadway and Sixth Avenue. The frontage is 61.8 by 100.5. The buyer was the Sykes Realty Corporation, of which Charles A. Sykes is President, and in payment the latter gave the McCrory Building in the Bronx, on the northwest corner of Prospect Avenue and 160th Street, a plot 77.2 by 125, leased for a long term to the J. G. McCrory Company, which operates a chain of five and ten-cent stores.

Buy Fifth Avenue Leasehold.

The leasehold of the residence at 612 Fifth Avenue, formerly occupied by Frederick S. Flower, nephew of the late Governor Flower, has been sold by Bryan L. Kennelly for a client of Fernando Wood as attorney. The house is on Columbia leasehold land, being forty-seven feet north of the northwest corner of Forty-ninth Street, a plot 23 by 125. The buyers, represented by Nelson, Lee & Green, have taken the ten years' lease on the property with a renewal privilege of ten years and will alter the house for business. The sale was made by Frederick Werner as assignee for the brokerage firm of Flower & Co.

East 61st Street Residence Sale.

The four-story dwelling at 151 East Sixty-first Street, on a plot 21 by 100, has been sold by Pease & Elliman for the estate of Hester B. Payton. It will be altered for occupancy.

Warren Street Loft Deal.

The five-story loft structure at 18 Warren Street, on plot 25 by 100, between Broadway and Church Street, has been purchased by the wholesale drug firm of M. Weiss from the Neal & Brinker Company, wholesale hardware dealers. The building is a Trinity leasehold, with one year to run, and the new owner has also taken over the ten-year renewal privilege. The Neal & Brinker Company has taken back a lease on the store floor and basement. The Duross Company was the broker.

Greene Street Sale.

The six-story loft at 44 to 48 West Houston Street, northwest corner of Greene Street, has been purchased by an investor from T. H. Roth. The plot is 20 by 79. Kurz & Uren were the brokers.

Harlem Residence Buyers.

The Antler Realty Company has purchased the dwelling at 2,014 Fifth Avenue, 16.8 by 85, and will alter it for business. William A. White & Sons were the brokers. They have also sold to the same buyer the dwelling at 3 West 121st Street, 20 by 100.11, and 7 West 120th Street, 21 by 100.11.

The three-story house at 254 West 113th Street, 17 by 100.11, has been sold by Mrs. Harriet A. Hartman.

Upper Manhattan Deal.

The five-story flat at 507 West 160th Street, on plot 25 by 100, near the northwest corner of Amsterdam Avenue, has been sold by George F. Denhard for Theodore Bertsch to an investor.

Builders Buy Choice Dyckman Corner.

A plot of seven lots, forming the southwest corner of Broadway and 207th Street, in the Dyckman section, has been purchased from J. Allen Townsend by the Seaman Construction Company, composed of T. G. Galardi and Max Just. The plot is 125 by 100 and will be improved with two apartment houses. Hall J. How & Co. were the brokers.

La Rochelle Transferred as Gift.

The transfer as a gift was recorded yesterday from Julia Robert of London to Arthur R. Robert of London to the La Rochelle apartment hotel, on the northeast corner of Columbus Avenue and Seventy-fifth Street, 102.2 by 112. The property was assessed in 1914 for $450,000. It is subject to a mortgage of $300,000.

Takes Title to Old Calumet Club.

Frank V. Burton took title yesterday from the Frances A. Lawrence estate to the old Calumet Club site, northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street, 49.5 by 100, giving back a mortgage of $400,000 to run for fifteen years at 4 per cent. An eleven-story building will be erected there for occupancy by the wholesale cotton goods firm of Barton Brothers.

Bronx Borough.

A large plot on the southeast corner of Clinton Avenue and Jefferson Place, 111 by 100, has been purhased by the Esther Realty Company from Emma A. Oesting. The buyers will erect two five-story apartments. The brokers in the deal were E. Loewenthal & Son.

The five-story apartment house at 2,065 Southern Boulevard, on lot 37.6 by 100, has been sold by Paul Bultmann for Robert Moorehead to an investor.

A plot 104.6 by 116.6 and irregular at the northwest corner of Stebbins Avenue and 163d Street has been sold by Alexander Selkin for Lowenfeld & Prager to the Peerless Holding Company. It will be improved with two five-story apartment houses.

The five-story new-law flat at 1,015 East 178th Street, on plot 43.6 by 100 has been purhased by Napoleon L. Levy from a client of A. Blumenthal. Mr. Levy gave in part payment a plot 46 by 85 on the northeast corner of Webster Avenue and Claremont Parkway.

The Roseff Realty Corporation, Samuel Roseff President, has purchased a plot 50 by 96 at 1,385 Fulton Avenue from the Zeltner estate. It will be improved with a five-story apartment.

Lewine & Kempner has sold to Bernard Dresher for investment a plot 50 by 100 on Southern Boulevard, adjoining the southeast corner of Longwood Avenue. It is part of the plot of 75 by 100, purchased a short time ago from James F. Meehan, the sellers retaining the taxpayer on the corner lot where will be the Longwood Avenue station of the new Lexington Avenue subway. Louis B. Chanler was the broker.

Brooklyn.

Frank A. Seaver & Co. have sold six lots on the northwest corner of Twelfth Avenue and Seventy-ninth Street for the Gibraltar Construction Company to a builder for improvement with one-family houses.

The Bulkley & Horton Company have sold the two frame houses at 241 and 248 Adelphi Street, on plot 50 by 125 feet, to the G. & M. mprovement Company, for improvement with an apartment house to be finished about Sept. 1.

FORECLOSURE SALES.

Notice of Foreclosure Sale.

Notice is hereby given that pursuant to decrees of foreclosure and sale made and entered in the above entitled cause on the 20th day of February, 1915, by the District Court of the United States for the District of Maine, and on the 26th day of February, 1915, by the District Court of the United States for the District of New Hampshire in a cause between the same parties ancillary to the said cause in the District Court of the United States for the District of Maine, the undersigned, Special Master, being thereto duly authorized by said decrees, will sell as one parcel or unit and without appraisement or valuation by public auction to the highest bidder at twelve o'clock noon on TUESDAY, the 11th day of May, 1915, at the principal entrance of the office building facing the mill upon the premises of the said Colonial Paper Company in the city of Portsmouth in the County of Rockingham and State of New Hampshire, all the properties covered by the first mortgage of said defendant, Colonial Paper Company, and described in said decrees of foreclosure and sale, and owned by said Colonial Paper Company at the date of the said decrees, except cash then in the hands of the receiver and in the hands of the said Old Colony Trust Company as Trustee. For a more particular description of the property to be sold reference is hereby made to the bill of complaint, to the copy of said first mortgage annexed thereto, to the said decrees of foreclosure and sale and to the receiver's inventories heretofore filed in the above entitled cause, but attention is called to the fact that certain ground wood pulp mentioned in the receiver's inventory has been sold by the receiver and that by fire on or about the 8th day of March, 1915, a barn with its contents and a two story double frame dwelling were totally destroyed, and a single frame dwelling partially destroyed, on the premises of the Colonial Paper Company at Freeman's Point, Portsmouth, New Hampshire.

The following is a description of the real estate and a brief general description of the personal property thus decreed to be sold and which will be sold as aforesaid:

All the real estate, manufacturing plants and machinery owned by said Colonial Paper Company, the same being more particularly described as follows:

I.—All that certain tract of land upon Freeman's Point, so called, in the City of Portsmouth, in the County of Rockingham and State of New Hampshire, containing one hundred and fourteen (114) acres, more or less, and being a part of the old 'Peyton R. Freeman Farm,' so called, bounded and described as follows, viz., Beginning at the westerly corner of the tract, at the track of the Portsmouth & Dover branch of the Boston & Maine Railroad, at the southerly corner of land belonging to the devisees of Mark H. Wentworth, deceased; thence running northeasterly, 1,325 feet, more or less, by said land of said devisees of said Wentworth, to the Piscataqua River; thence turning and running in an irregular curved line southeasterly, southerly, southwesterly and westerly by said River and Creek leading into said River, to said Portsmouth & Dover branch of said Boston & Maine Railroad; and thence running northwesterly by said Railroad to said land of the said devisees of Wentworth, at the point of beginning, together with the flats of said River and Creek appurtenant to said premises. Also all buildings upon and all rights, privileges and appurtenances connected with said premises, being the same premises conveyed to the White Mountain Paper Company, in the following described deeds: Quitclaim deed from John H. Bartlett, dated April 5, 1902, recorded in Volume 591, page 53, Rockingham Registry of Deeds; quitclaim deed from John H. Bartlett, dated April 25, 1902, recorded in Volume 586, page 211, of said Rockingham Registry of Deeds; quitclaim deed from Helen C. Green and Henry L. Green, dated February 18, 1902, recorded in Volume 583, page 493, of said Rockingham Registry of Deeds; warranty deed from Joseph W. Marden and Lydia D. Marden, dated February 26, 1902, and recorded in Volume 587, page 315, of said Rockingham Registry of Deeds; warranty deed from Frank Jones, dated March 29, 1902, recorded in Volume 590, page 365, of said Rockingham Registry of Deeds. Said premises comprising sundry parcels of land formerly belonging to the following owners: Frank Jones; Olive M. Beane; Joseph W. Marden; George F. Hough; Jennie Bell Fernald; William C. Fernald; Francis R. Johnson; Ernest S. Johnson; Rebecca J. Raitt; Edith N. Smart and Helen C. Green, who, directly or by mesne conveyance, conveyed their respective parcels to said White Mountain Paper Company. Said premises also comprise the following highways, heretofore called Cushing and Cutts Streets which have been discontinued.

Together with all the boilers, engines, tanks, machinery, equipment, fittings, fixtures, tools and supplies, and all personal property owned by the said Colonial Paper Company and located in the buildings upon said premises and on or about the foregoing described lands and premises, being the same premises and property described in and conveyed to Messrs. McCutcheon, Martin and Murray by the Publishers' Paper Company, by deed dated the 24th day of February, 1910, and by said Messrs. McCutcheon, Martin and Murray to the Colonial Paper Company by deed dated the 4th day of March, 1910.

II.—Also all that other certain piece, portion, tract or parcel of land, described as follows: All the land, tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances formerly belonging to the Publishers' Paper Company, so called, situated in South Berwick, in the County of York and State of Maine, and also in Rollinsford, in the County of Strafford and State of New Hampshire; together with all the water rights and water powers incident thereto and connected therewith. Meaning and intending to include herein all the real estate formerly of the said Publishers' Paper Company situated in said South Berwick and said Rollinsford, including the dam and water power therewith connected and the tenement houses, buildings and land formerly of the said Publishers' Paper Company, however bounded and described, and all machinery now on said property, not hereinafter reserved and excepted, that was conveyed to the United Gas and Electric Company by the Berwick Power Company, by its deed dated May 23, 1898, and recorded in Volume 317, page 81 of the Strafford Registry of Deeds, and in York County Registry of Deeds, Volume 489, page 67, and by the United Gas and Electric Company to Charles E. Locke and George B. James, by its warranty deed dated the 17th day of December, 1901, and recorded in the Strafford County Registry of Deeds, in Volume 333, page 161, and in the York County Registry of Deeds, Volume 529, page 313, and by said Locke and James to the White Mountain Paper Company by their quitclaim deed dated the 16th day of April, 1903, and recorded in the said Strafford County Registry of Deeds, Volume 333, page 169, and in said York County Registry of Deeds, Volume 529, page 320. Together with any additions and improvements made since the date of the said first mentioned deed.

Reference is hereby made for more particulars of description to the above described deeds and the records thereof. Excepting and reserving, however, all the electrical apparatus, down to the bolts, which were on said premises on the 17th day of December, 1901, and all the property belonging to the South Berwick Electric Light Company now upon said premises. Also meaning and intending to include all the right, title and interest of the Colonial Paper Company in and to said above described property, by and from or under any and all contracts, agreements, deeds or other forms of conveyance, in and to which it may have any right, title or interest.

Being the same premises and property described in and conveyed to Robert H. McCutcheon, Lilbern Martin and Samuel J. Murray by the Publishers' Paper Company by deed dated the 24th day of February, 1910; and by said McCutcheon, Martin and Murray conveyed to the Colonial Paper Company by deed dated the 4th day of March, 1910.

III.—Also all that certain tract of land situated at Bar Mills, in the County of York and State of Maine bounded as follows: Commencing on the westerly side of the Saco River at a point on the line of land now or formerly owned by one Palmer, eight rods distant from said river; thence southerly on a line parallel with and eight rods distant from said river to the centre of the main road crossing said river at said Bar Mills; thence by the centre of said road to a point where a line parallel with the easterly side of the foundation of the post office building there situate would strike the centre of said road; thence southerly by said line and the easterly foundation of said post office building to the row of willow trees upon the westerly bank of the mill pond; thence southerly by said row of trees and from the end thereof to land now or formerly belonging to the heirs of Ellis B. Usher; thence southerly by said land now or formerly belonging to said Usher heirs and across the highway, and by land now or formerly belonging to Hannah Woodman, to land now or formerly belonging to the heirs of Doctor Bacon; thence easterly to the centre of said Saco River; thence northerly by the thread of said river, to the northerly line of the tract herein described; thence westerly by said land and by said Palmer land to the point of beginning; together with all the water rights, powers and privileges appurtenant thereto, and with all the buildings upon said land, including a building used as an office on the first floor and a dwelling above said office, the double house which is situated on the Hollis side of the river, and all the buildings upon the island which forms a part of said premises and was conveyed to said Colonial Paper Company therewith; said tract of land being subject to the use of the highways now upon the same.

There is also herein included the island in said Saco River above the railroad bridge at said Bar Mills, to which the main boom is now or was formerly attached; also all rights of said defendant, Colonial Paper Company in said main boom, in the Larrup Boom, so called, the Hiram Falls Boom, and the Bog Pond Boom in Fryeburg; or in any privileges to erect or repair booms at the points above mentioned, whether there are booms existing at the points at the present time or not, and all the rights of said defendant in all booms, water powers, flowage rights, piers and pier rights, shore rights and all water rights upon or in the Saco River northerly of the southerly line of the land above described and southerly of the dam of the Portland Electric Company at West Buxton, Maine, together with all the said defendant's rights of way over land now or formerly belonging to Hiram W. Davis and all said defendant's rights and interests in and to the railroad running to said premises on the westerly side of said Saco River. Being the same premises, rights and privileges conveyed to the White Mountain Paper Company by Charles W. McKenney by his warranty deed dated the 26th day of March, A. D. 1902, and recorded in the York County Registry of Deeds, Volume 522, page 289, together with the Pulp Mill and all other buildings situated on said described land and all machinery, equipment, fixtures and tools belonging to and in use in and about said Pulp Mill, being the same premises and property described in and conveyed to Robert H. McCutcheon, Lilbern Martin and Samuel J. Murray by the Publishers' Paper Company, by deed dated the 4th day of March, 1910, and by said McCutcheon, Martin and Murray conveyed to the Colonial Paper Company by deed dated the 4th day of March, 1910.

IV.—Also all the rights, privileges, title, interest and property of the said Colonial Paper Company in and to certain premises lying between South Berwick in the State of Maine, and premises upon Freeman's Point in the City of Portsmouth, State of New Hampshire, from and under certain deeds, conveyances, contracts and agreements with divers persons and heretofore acquired by the Publishers' Paper Company for the purpose of laying a pipe line or aqueduct and acquiring a right-of-way over and upon the said lands described in said several deeds, agreements or writings; said property, rights and privileges and the source of title thereof, being more particularly described in a certain conveyance from the Publishers' Paper Company to Robert H. McCutcheon, Lilbern Martin and Samuel J. Murray, dated the 24th day of February, 1910; said rights and privileges having been by them conveyed to the said Colonial Paper Company by deed dated the 4th day of March, 1910, containing a general description of said rights and privileges by reference to a former deed.

Together with all and singular the easements, rights and appurtenances thereunto belonging or appertaining and also all franchises of the Company and all reversions, remainders, rents, issues and profits thereof, and all the estate, right, title and interest whatsoever, as well in law as in equity of the Company, or, in and to the same, and any and every part thereof, with the appurtenances thereunto belonging.

And also all other real estate and property, real, personal and mixed, of whatever description, owned by the said Colonial Paper Company at the date of the execution and delivery of the said First Mortgage, or thereafter acquired by the said Company, together with all easements, rights, appurtenances and franchises thereunto belonging or used in connection therewith, which shall include, without restricting the generality of the foregoing description, all and singular the machinery, materials, warehouses, plants, shops, docks, wharves, railroad tracks, cars and railroad equipment, offices, buildings, structures, supplies, coal, wood in process of manufacture or otherwise, paper and other movable or personal property, moneys, securities or shares of stock in other corporations, contracts, choses in action, accounts and notes.

The said property will be sold with and subject to all rights and appurtenances in, to, over, affecting or appertaining to the same, as more fully set forth in the deeds above mentioned, to which reference is hereby made, and subject to all unpaid taxes and assessments.

Any of the parties to the above entitled cause and any of the holders of any of the bonds secured by the said first mortgage and any of the stockholders of the Colonial Paper Company, and any other person or persons may bid at the said sale.

The Special Master will accept no bid of less than one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000), and will accept no bid unless the bidder shall place in the hands of the Special Master at the time of bidding, as a part of his bid, and as a pledge to make the same good if the same shall be accepted and the sale confirmed, the sum of ten thousand dollars ($10,000) in cash, certified check or certificate of deposit approved by the Special Master, which sum shall be forfeited in case the bidder, if successful, shall fail to make good his bid and comply with the terms of the said decrees and any orders hereafter made as to future payments or otherwise; but said sum shall be applied on the purchase price in case of such compliance, or returned in case the bid is not successful, or the sale shall not be confirmed by the Court. The purchaser shall also upon due confirmation of such sale and from time to time thereafter pay such further portions of said bid and purchase price in cash as the Court may direct, in order to meet the expenses of foreclosure and sale, and to provide for the payment of the distributive share due upon all bonds and coupons not deposited in payment of the purchase price as hereinafter permitted. The Court reserves the right to reject any bid and further reserves the right to resell the property or any part thereof upon failure of the purchaser to comply with any order of the Court as to the payment of the remainder of the purchase price or any part thereof.

The purchaser may pay the remainder of the purchase price either in cash or by turning in to the Special Master bonds and matured and unpaid coupons secured by said First Mortgage with the interest due thereon in order that there may be credited as paid thereon the sums payable out of the net proceeds of such sale if the total purchase price were paid in cash and of any other funds available for distribution to the holder of such bonds and coupons as his ratable share of such net proceeds and other funds, after allowing for the portion of the total purchase price required to be paid in cash to pay the cost and expenses of the sale, allowances and other cash requirements of any kind or nature, and such purchaser so turning in bonds or coupons will be credited on account of the purchase price of the property purchased with the sum payable to such purchaser on the bonds and coupons so turned in out of such net proceeds and other funds. All such bonds and coupons used to make such payment on such bid shall be surrendered to the complainant and canceled by the Special Master if the whole amount due thereon is necessarily applied to the purchase price, but if less than such whole amount due on such bonds and coupons is so applied on such payment, the specific amount so applied will be stamped or written upon such bonds and coupons by the Special Master, and such bonds and coupons will be returned with such credit to the holders. All taxes and assessments upon the property sold, where the purchaser produces proof that he has paid the same or advanced money for the payment thereof will be allowed for out of the purchase money. If any bid shall be accepted by the Court and the person making the same shall fail to comply with all conditions of said decrees and all orders of the Court in respect thereof, the sum deposited by the bidder shall be forfeited by him and shall be applied as the Court shall direct. Upon confirmation of the sale, the Special Master will convey and transfer to the purchaser or his assigns all and singular the property, rights and franchises so sold by good and sufficient deed or deeds or other instruments and the form of the said deed or deeds or other instruments and the mode of execution thereof will be settled and approved by the Special Master or by the Courts, if any question shall arise as to the form or sufficiency thereof. The purchaser is required to become and remain subject to the jurisdiction of the said Courts so far as necessary to enforce the provisions of said decrees of foreclosure and sale or of any future orders or decrees made in said causes. The defendant, Colonial Paper Company, upon such sale being made and confirmed, is required by said decrees, if requested by the purchaser, to join with the Special Master in the deed or deeds or other instruments to be made by him as aforesaid, or to otherwise make, execute and deliver to the purchaser or his assigns good and sufficient deed, deeds of conveyance or instruments of transfer of all property of the said defendant, or to which it has in any manner title, right or ownership. The purchaser at such sale, and his successors and assigns, shall have the right, within one year after the completion of the sale and delivery of the deed or deeds or other instruments as herein provided, to elect whether or not to accept, assume or adopt any contract, lease, license or privilege sold with the property herein decreed to be sold, and the purchaser, his successors or assigns, shall not be held to have accepted, assumed or adopted any of the said contracts, leases, licenses or privileges which he or they shall so elect not to accept, assume or adopt.

For further particulars and more detailed statement of the terms and conditions upon which said sale will be made, reference is hereby made to the above mentioned decrees of foreclosure and sale.

THEODORE W. LAW,
April 12, 1915. Special Master.

Forest Hills Gardens

A Forward Movement in Suburban Development

Successfully meeting a growing demand for a community in which design, engineering and stability of construction are the cardinal principles.

Ample capital to adequately work out its problems; protective restrictions, completed improvements, and property marketed on a fair basis, is the security offered to an investor at Forest Hills Gardens.

Obviously it is unwise to invest in a site or a home before having seen this property, and investigated the qualifications that determine Forest Hills Gardens' pre-eminence in suburban development. Houses nearing completion and plots of varying dimensions are offered for sale.

If desired, upon a small initial investment, convenient terms for the unpaid balance can be arranged, whereby the payments are extended over a period of years, approximating what would otherwise be rent.

Transportation, booklet, or any desired information may be secured by addressing Department S, Sage Foundation Homes Company, 47 West 34th Street, New York; or—

FIGHT ON OPIUM AN OLD HERITAGE

TRACED THROUGH THE AGES

First Mentioned in the Old Testament, Its Abuse Has Spread Throughout the World.

The enactment of the Harrison law, the Federal measure designed to restrict and safeguard the sale of dangerous and habit-forming drugs, which went into effect on March 1, recalls the fact that in all probability the fight against the abuse of opium has been going on for several thousand years.

The medical properties of poppy juice date from a remote period. Recalling the highly developed culture of the ancient Egyptians one is inclined to imagine that the narcotic properties of opium were known to them, but the investigations of Unger (1857) have failed to trace any acquaintance with opium in ancient Egypt, and Dr. Ember of the semitic department of Johns Hopkins University knows of no reference to it in Egyptian literature.

According to some Hebrew scholars, there is a reference to poppy juice in the Bible. In several passages in the Old Testament the word rosh is mentioned. Professor Haupt is convinced that rosh means the poppy, and so also is Professor Post. In the Talmud we have one reference to opium, under the name ophion, but that word was clearly borrowed from the Greek. In the classical Hindu literature there is found no reference to it. From the time of the Mogul conquest on there appears a word, khash-khash, which means poppy seed, and khash-khasharasa, juice of the poppy.

The original home of the poppy was in Asia Minor. From there it was carried to Greece at a later period. It is not at all certain whether Hippocrates was acquainted with the juice of the poppy. According to Wootton, he refers to a substance called mecon, to which he attributes a purgative as well as narcotic action. Some think that it was opium; others believe that he was referring to another plant. In any case, he made but very little use of the drug.

The first authentic reference to the milky juice of the poppy we find by Theophrastus at the beginning of the third century B. C., when he speaks of it as meconion. Scribonius Largus, in his "Compositiones Medicamentorum," about the year 40 of the present era, describes the method of procuring opium from the capsules of the poppy, and about the year 77 of the same century Dioscorides makes a distinction between the juice of the capsules and the extract of the whole plant. He describes the method of incising the capsules, and refers to adulterations of the drug with the milky juice of other plants, so that it is evident that the collection of opium was quite an industry in Asia Minor at that time.

Pliny devotes some space to a description of opium and its medicinal use, and the drug is mentioned repeatedly by Celsus in the first century and by numerous other Latin writers. Galen spoke enthusiastically of the virtues of opium confections, and the drug was soon so popular in Rome that it fell into the hands of shopkeepers and itinerant quacks.

The introduction of the drug to the natives of the East was through the Arabs, and in the first instance to Persia. Its introduction into India seems to have been connected with the spread of Mahommedanism. The Arabic physicians used opium very extensively, and even wrote special treatises on some of its preparations. The earliest mention of opium as a product of India is by the traveler Barbosa, in 1511. A Portuguese historian, Fyres, in a letter to Manuel, King of Portugal, in 1516, speaks of the opium of Egypt and Bengal.

Opium is supposed to have been brought to China first by the Arabs, who are known to have traded with the southern parts of the empire as early as the ninth century.

"Later," says The Journal of the American Medical Association, "the Chinese began to import the drug in their junks from India. It was not before the second half of the eighteenth century that the importation of opium began to increase rapidly through the hands of the Portuguese, and a little later through the famous East India Company. In 1770 the English established an opium depot in Lark's Bay, south of Macao, and the traffic rapidly increased, so that very soon the Chinese authorities began to complain, and in 1820 an edict was issued forbidding any vessel having opium on board to enter the Canton River.

A system of contraband followed, then political friction between England and China, and the so-called opium war, which culminated in the Treaty of Nanking (1842), by which five ports of China were opened to foreign trade, and in 1858 opium was admitted as a legal article of commerce. By that time the vice of opium smoking had spread like a plague over the gigantic empire, and became so deeply rooted that, in spite of innumerable edicts and decrees, all efforts to check its growth have been powerless."

HOSPITAL WORKERS DINE.

Chaplains and Superintendents Guests of Mission Society.

The New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society held its first dinner last night at the Hotel Breslin for the Superintendents of the city hospitals and the nurses' training schools. It is to be an annual affair. The society has charge of all the Protestant work in these institutions, as in the city prisons, and its chaplains from the hospitals were also present at the dinner. A similar affair for the prison chaplains has been held for the last three years.

The Chairman of last night's dinner was Lincoln Cromwell, and the speakers were Bishop Frederick Courtney, Dr. Charles Hitchcock of the society's board, the Rev. A. M. Hildebrand, ex-Congressman William S. Bennet, and Dr. Walter H. Conley, Superintendent of the Metropolitan Hospital.

CONEY ISLAND BILL VETOED.

Mayor Disapproves Measure for Widening of the Creek.

Before leaving for his holiday in the West, Mayor Mitchel vetoed the bill for the widening of Coney Island Creek. He explained that the bill did not provide any means for the payment of the cost of the construction of the proposed ship canal between Gravesend and Sheepshead Bays, which would be the result of the work projected. The city just now could not undertake so expensive a piece of work, and the property-owners along the route had not expressed any willingness to pay for it.

The Mayor signed the bill empowering the Board of Assessors to award damages to property owners near the Brooklyn terminal of the Manhattan Bridge, who had been injured by the change of grade on the approaches.

AUTO HITS HENRY R. TOWNE.

Elderly Man Was Crossing Avenue —Will Prosecute Chauffeur.

As he was crossing Fifth Avenue at Twenty-seventh Street yesterday morning, Henry R. Towne, President of the Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company, who lives at 121 Madison Avenue, was knocked down by an automobile owned, according to the chauffeur, by Edward Korfoll of 707 Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn. Although Mr. Towne is 78 years old, he jumped so quickly when he saw the car almost upon him that he was struck only a glancing blow and escaped practically uninjured. He charged the chauffeur with reckless driving, however, and said that he would appear against him in court. The chauffeur was served with a summons.

"I was crossing Fifth Avenue from east to west," Mr. Towne said, "and, as is my custom, I walked beside a vehicle to the south of me going in the same direction so that I might be protected from north bound traffic. As I neared the middle of the avenue the vehicle, which was horse-drawn, went ahead suddenly and I was left exposed to the automobile, which came upon me very rapidly. It should not have been going so fast, nor should it have been so close upon the vehicle going west.

"Also, the chauffeur, instead of applying his brakes as soon as he saw me, steered a zigzag course that made it the more difficult for me to dodge the automobile. I was able, however, to jump so far to one side that I was tripped, rather than knocked down by the car. I am glad to say that I was not hurt at all, and continued on my way to my office after the accident. But I think that the chauffeur was very reckless and I shall so testify in court tomorrow."

In the automobile were three women and a girl, whose names the police did not learn. Mr. Towne said that no negligence on the part of the traffic policeman at the corner was responsible for the accident.

MRS. CAMPBELL ON STAND.

Widow of Financier Testifies That Mrs. Burkham Is Her Daughter.

ST. LOUIS, May 3.—Mrs. Florence Campbell took the stand today in the trial of the suit attempting to break the $16,000,000 will of her husband, James Campbell, the railroad man. She testified that Lois Campbell Burkham was born to her in the Grand Union Hotel, New York, on March 17, 1893. Her husband and her aunt, Mrs. Mary Gilroy, were present, she said. Her impression was that the nurse did not come until later in the evening or next morning.

Before Mrs. Campbell took the stand A. J. Lubbe, a newspaper reporter, testified that Mrs. Edith Blair, who testified a few days ago that her stepdaughter was the mother of Lois Campbell Burkham, and that the stepdaughter now was the wife of an English Duke, told him that her stepdaughter was dead. This testimony was introduced by attorneys for Mrs. Campbell in rebuttal of testimony given by Mrs. Blair in behalf of those who are seeking to have the Campbell will set aside.

MRS. BASSHOR TO LIVE HERE

Mother of Mrs. A. G. Vanderbilt Sells Her Maryland Estate.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, May 3.—Mrs. Emily Basshor, widow of C. Hazeltine Basshor, who accidently shot and killed herself about eight months ago, and mother of Mrs. Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt, has sold her country home, "Algonquin Manor," once the home of Senator Isador Rayner, near Cambridge, Dorchester County, and announced tonight that she would move to New York. Mrs. Sasshor recently returned from Newport.

"I have already leased an apartment few weeks to make my permanent home, in New York,' said Mrs. Basshor, "and expect to move there within the next few weeks to make my permanent home."

Mrs. Basshor has bene leader in Baltimore society for years. As the wife of Capt. Isaac E. Emerson, she gave many brilliant receptions at their home.

Fatally Hurt by Father's Train.

CLIFTON, N. J., May 3.—Six-year-old Alfred Scherbner of 147 Grace Street, waiting for his father to come from business in Manhattan on an Erie train, ran too close to the edge of the platform, was struck by the piston rod of the engine, and thrown several feet, landing on his head. Passengers alighting from the train rushed to the spot. Among them was the father. He called up an ambulance from the General Hospital at Passaic and the boy was rushed there. The child's skull was fractured and there is little hope of his recovery.

IN NEW JERSEY.

NEWARK.—T. P. Howell & Co., tanners and manufacturers of leather of this city, have just won a contract from the United States Government to furnish hand-buffed upholstery leather to be used in reupholstering the Senate Chamber in the Capitol, and also the Marble Room in the Capitol Building. The leather is of the highest grade and quality that can be made, and the colors will be dark green and dark maroon.

NEWARK.—Robert Forest, 35 years old, of 257 Twenty-second Street, Irvington, a carpenter working at the new Federal League baseball park in Harrison, fell from the roof of the new grand stand into the seats yesterday and was probably fatally injured.

NEWARK.—Antonio Melle and Frank Bruno of West Orange, N. J., were placed on trial yesterday in Newark before Judge Osborne and a jury in the Court of Oyer and Terminer on a charge of conspiring in connection with the wrecking of the Roseville Trust Company of Newark. The indictment alleges that the accused men, beginning Jan. 9, 1913, until the bank collapsed in August, 1913, "procured the embezzlement" of $28,221.12.

HACKENSACK.—Pink eye has afflicted the Newman School at Hackensack, and among the students confined in the school's private isolation hospital are six members of the baseball team. The epidemic is likely to interfere with the baseball schedule.

PATERSON.—Jacob Singer, 90 years old, of 81 Warren Street, is dying from injuries received when he was kicked by a horse last night in the stable of his son, a liveryman. The aged man, who but for his extremely rugged condition would have been killed, is in the Miriam Barnert Hospital with a fractured skull, a broken right arm and leg, and a fractured right jaw. No hope is held out for his recovery.

ROSELLE.—The residence of Alfred C. Banta in St. George Avenue was almost totally destroyed by fire yesterday morning. Several large pine trees surround the dwelling and it is believed that a spark from the chimney fell on the roof, which was covered with dry pine needles. The loss is about $3,000.

PHILLIPSBURG.—Running into the street last night to call her playmates to see some chicks her brother had just brought home, Elizabeth Cook, 7 years old, was killed by an automobile that struck her as she darted from behind a trolley car. The accident occurred within a few feet from the home of the child's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Cook, at 158 Summit Avenue.

ANCIENT IRON MINES IN THE CITY LIMITS

WERE GIVEN UP ABOUT 1869

Unknown and abandoned, but well within the limits of New York City, lie New York's iron mines, once the scene of bustling activity, but now deserted except for the occasional visit of a college geology class or the chance arrival of some person who pauses to wonder at the peculiar brown earth or the pitted surface of the Staten Island hills.

Nestled among the trees which still cover parts of the island are the deserted pits. No trace of machinery, if any ever existed there, is now left; no fresh marks of excavation are to be seen, but the sides of the diggings still show the rich brown ore upon which in the last half century no vegetation has been able to take root except a few stunted birches which find scanty nourishment in their bed of almost pure iron oxide.

And yet from these very pits came much of the iron used in the early history of New York City, if the estimates of the output can be credited, while if one wishes to trust in rumor some of the Staten Island iron even found its way into the making of the cannon which helped in the defense of the newly-born republic in the days of the Revolution.

Though the fact that iron was ever found in commercial quantities within the city limits probably will be news to the majority of New Yorkers, the history of the Staten Island deposits, which are estimated to have yielded nearly 300,000 tons of ore, goes back to the days when the Indians roamed freely over the Borough of Richmond and the language of Holland was the only tongue spoken in the city. So important was the iron deposit on Todt Hill thought to be in 1645 that the Dutch Government considered the sending of experts from Amsterdam to investigate its value, with the probable end in view of exporting the ore to Europe. Only a little later, in a patent to an early settler, John Palmer, which was executed by Governor Dongan, specific reference was made to the "iron mine," as the slight eminence was then called.

That the ore, which occurs in small granules and which is surprisingly pure, was well thought of many years ago is evidently from the laudatory, though somewhat inaccurate, account of the mineral wealth of the island which appeared in The American Journal of Science in 1818. After stating that the ore was a brown hematite, (the common name for limonite,) of which 80 per cent. was iron, the author, James Pierce of New York City, said:

"A granular oxide, called by miners 'shot ore,' from its being composed principally of spherical grains of various sizes, was often noticed, and appears in some places in extensive beds. It is easily fused and affords a large percentage of good iron for casting."

The author referred particularly to the glacial drift by which covers the island as gravel and sand beds, though he offered no explanation for their presence.

How the iron got to the tops of the slight hills which appear throughout Staten Island is a geologic problem which finds its answer in the fact that the highest parts of the island must have been, in ages long gone by, the top of a huge plain.

Mention is made of four mines on the island, but where they were is hard to determine from the various histories of the city. As the iron ore was near the surface the ore itself was probably dug out by hand. One of the easiest mines to reach can be arrived at by taking the Richmond trolley and getting off at Little Clove Road. After a short walk up hill the reddish brown of the iron ore becomes apparent, and a walk from the road of little more than a couple of hundred feet brings one to the abandoned pits. Here, though the top soil has had a chance to again become covered with a mantle of grass, specimens of the "shot ore" can be had for the picking up.

James Pierce, nearly a hundred years ago, wrote that as Staten Island seemed to abound in the presence of magnesium salts, especially the carbonate, he thought that the location might be found perfectly suitable to the manufacture of Epsom salts!

As late as 1889 there is mention of the mines in the bulletin of the New York State Museum of Natural History, the ore being described as between 38 per cent. to 55 per cent. iron, while the output was roughly estimated as at least 250,000 tons. Though the mines had then been shut down for about ten years, four were mentioned, these being the New Dorp, the Towle, the Cooper and Hewitt, and Tyson's. It seems that the mines were worked last about 1869.

JAPANESE LEAVING PEKING

Their Reservists Called to the Colors—Chinese Despair of Defending Their Country as a Whole.

Chinese Still Hope War Will Be Averted.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, May 5.—The Secretary of the Chinese Legation, interviewed by a Daily News representative last night in regard to the Japanese ultimatum, said:

"We had been anticipating that something would happen, but we did not expect this. We do not think there will be war between China and Japan, but there may be if the ultimatum is worded in a certain way. In that case it would have a very serious bearing on the European war. China has no desire to go to war."

PEKING, Wednesday, May 5.—In anticipation of the receipt from Tokio of the ultimatum reported to have been decided upon by the Japanese Government as a result of the failure of the Chinese Republic to accede to Group V., the most vital of the Japanese demands, military preparations are being made for the defense of Peking.

According to Chinese officials, whose statements have been corroborated in other circles, the Government is making no preparations elsewhere than at the capital for defense, considering that the Chinese will be unable to oppose the Japanese should they make an attack.

It is asserted in high quarters that 100,000 troops have been concentrated in the environs of Peking, but with sufficient ammunition for only a brief resistance. Special police and military precautions have been taken throughout the city, especially around the Winter palace, where President Yuan Shi-Kai resides. The officials declare that they are suspicious that the Japanese may attempt a repetition of the Koren coup d'etat.

Japanese Leaving Peking.

The Japanese Legation, it is said, notified its Nationals yesterday to prepare to leave Peking, and many women and children are getting ready to depart. Many of the Japanese men probably will take refuge in the Legation quarter if hostilities ensue.

The situation is considered awkward for some of the foreign legations, especially those whose countries sympathize with the Chinese, but none of them could oppose the entry of the Japanese into Peking.

Telegrams received here from Mukden say that the Japanese Bank and Post Office there have suspended business; that the Japanese reservists have been called to the colors, and that other civilians are concentrating in the railway zone.

Dr. Paul S. Reinsch, the United tSates Minister here, expresses the opinion that the missionaries and other Americans in the interior are in no danger whatever. He says the Chinese Government will preserve order in the regions over which the Chinese have control.

In spite of the belief which had prevailed in China for many years that Japan coveted control of the country, considerable surprise was caused by the report that Japan intended to issue an ultimatum to the Government as an outgrowth of China's refusal to concede all of Japan's demands. It is contended that the Chinese have conceded virtually all the articles contained in the eleven demands made upon them and enumerated to the powers, and a high official said yesterday that it was not believed that Japan would dare to enforce those contained in Group V., which, he said, Japan had informed Great Britain, as well as the other power, were merely regarded as desirable.

Yuan's Purposes Suspected.

Whether President Yuan Shi-Kai eventually will concede all these points seems to be an open question. Chinese officials whose views are seriously considered in Yuan Shi-Kai's councils express opposite opinions concerning this matter. Some of the officials express the fear that the Japanese military party, which they profess to believe welcomes the present crisis, will increase the Japanese demands should a successful campaign follow.

On the other hand it is considered here that Yuan Shih-kai faces calamitous consequences in China if he yields to the Japanese. High members of his own Government are said already to have voiced the suspicion that he may accept an alleged offer from Japan of military support and protection for himself against foreign nations and his own people in return for conceding control of the country in fact, although not nominally, to Japan.

Shanghai Still Hopeful.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SHANGHAI, May 4, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—In some circles here it is believed that Japan actually will present an ultimatum to China and that the Japanese Minister, Dr. Hioki, will leave Peking. There are reports, however, that Sir John Jordan, the British Minister, will offer to mediate the difficulty, and I feel confident that a peaceful solution will be found.

CABINET VOTES ULTIMATUM.

FIRST WIRELESS CALL FOR A STRIKE GOES OUT

Neptune Association Warns Incoming Mates Not to Sign for Next Trip.

The wireless telegraph was used for the first time to call a strike yesterday when officers of the Neptune Association, made up of steamship mates, sent messages to incoming steamers to notify the officers that the association had declared a strike. The wireless was used to notify the men before they signed up for the next trip.

More than a dozen such messages were sent, according to Manager Cowan of the association, but most of them were held up on the steamers, he said, so that the mates did not receive them. Captains of steamers have the right to read and censor all messages and are strict in exercising this right, especially in wartime.

Because the attempt to call the strike by wireless had been blocked by captains in some instances, Manager Cowan of the Neptune Association said that launches would be sent to meet incoming steamers today and would throw on bundles for the officers which would contain notices of the strike.

The demand for higher wages has been granted, Mr. Cown said, on ninety steamers of the Standard Oil Company, the A. H. Bull Company, the Texas Company, the Gulf Oil Company, the Luckenbach Company, the Dimon, Seaboard and Gulf Company, and the Panama Railroad Company. Under the new schedule, he said, first officers, who formerly received $60, $80, and $100 a month, now receive $85, $105, and $125, and second officers, who formerly received $60, $70, and $90 a month, would now receive $85, $95, and $115.

"The strike has tied up three steamers of the Clyde Line," Manager Cowan said, "three of the Ward Line, one of the Porto Rico Line, three of the Mallory Line and one of the Red D. Line.

"Mediators Michael J. Reagan and John J. Bealin of the State Board of Arbitration and Mediation offered their services yesterday for the settlement of the strike."

PRESIDENT HOLDS LETTER.

Will Not Give Industrial Commission One Gov. Ammons Sent Him.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—In the name of President Wilson, Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the President, has reclined to furnish to the United States Commission on Industrial Relations t letter to the President from Governor Ammons of Colorado, concerning the Colorado miners' strike. Basil M. Manley, a field agent of the commission, wrote to the President asking for the letter, and in his response Mr. Tumulty said that the President did not regard the reasons advanced by Mr. Manley as wanting the letter as sufficient to justify compliance with his request.

The Industrial Commission is anxious to obtain the original of this letter for use in connection with the forthcoming examination of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., as a witness before the commission which will reopen its inquiry into that subject at hearings now on in Washington. It has been charged by Chairman Walsh of the commission that Gov. Ammons's letter was prepared by Mr. Rockefeller, or one of his employes. This has been denied by Mr. Rockefeller.

The reason given by Mr. Manley for asking for the letter has not been disclosed, but it is said that the President did not feel justified in taking part in a publicity campaign concerning Mr. Rockefeller's part in the Colorado strike.

DECIDE AGAINST UNIONS.

Law Preventing Discharge of Their Men Held Unconstitutional.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, May 4.—The Ohio Supreme Court today decided that the law preventing the discharge of an employe for belonging to a labor union is unconstitutional and void. The point raised was whether or not this law conflicted with the Federal Constitution. The United tSates Supreme Court in a similar case had already decided that it did.

Chief Justice Nichols and Judges Jones, Newman, and aMtthias concurred in the majority opinion, holding the law unconstitutional, saying in effect that the Ohio courts' hands were tied since the Federal Supreme Court had already passed on the point. Judges Wanamaker and Donahue dissented in the face of the Federal court decision, holding the decision unjust to labor unions.

BALTIMORE DEMOCRATIC.

Mayor Preston Re-elected and Carries His Whole Ticket with Him.

BALTIMORE, May 4.—Mayor James H. Preston, Democrat, was re-elected at the municipal election today by an estimated majority of about 15,000 over his Republican opponent, Charles H. Heintzeman The remainder of the ticket was carreid by the Democratic candidates by about the same majorities, and both brfanches of the City Council will be overwhelmingly Democratic.

ELECT C. W. BRYAN MAYOR.

CONNECT BARNES WITH CONTRACTS

COLONEL AGAIN ON STAND

Corrects Errors in Previous Testimony and Will Be Examined Further Today.

F. D. ROOSEVELT TESTIFIES

Grady Told Him Barnes Had Agreed to Help Murphy Try to Elect Sheehan Senator.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 4.—Political ghosts walked again today in the Barnes-Roosevelt libel trial. Out of the musty letter files of the late Senator Thomas C. Platt, once the "easy boss" of the Republican Party in New York State, evidence was produced by Colonel Roosevelt's counsel against William Barnes, just as the same files were combed last week by Mr. Barnes's counsel to get evidence against Colonel Roosevelt.

More letters are yet to come. William M. Ivins, leader of the Barnes legal forces, will try to put a big bundle of them into the record tomorrow to show Roosevelt's relations with Platt after Roosevelt became President. These letters were not produced before because Mr. Platt's son and executor, Edward T. Platt, could not find them when Mr. Ivins first subpoenaed them.

The Platt letters, interesting as they were, proved to be merely part in a series of revelations which made the day's developments profitable for the Roosevelt case. Near the close of the session the Colonel was recalled to the stand, under the ruling of Justice William S. Andrews yesterday that matters tending to show mitigation of the alleged libel, and which were not set forth in the Roosevelt pleadings, could be admitted. The Colonel did not get any further, however, than to correct some minor errors of phraseology in his previous testimony. He will be on the stand tomorrow, and his leading counsel, John M. Bowers, expects to bring out some highly important evidence.

Printing Evidence Linked.

One of the most effective points scored by Mr. Bowers today was the linking together of much of the evidence regarding the Albany printing, and Mr. Barnes's connection with it, matters which hitherto had been before the jury only in fragmentary form. The Roosevelt counsel was able to show that the J. B. Lyon Printing Company of Albany, in which Mr. Barnes held a large block of stock, obtained nearly $8,000,000 of State printing contracts during the last fifteen years, although several other printing concerns got the contracts first by bidding lower than the Lyon concern. The Lyon Company generally put in a bid at a high figure and when the contract went somewhere else, usually to what was practically a dummy concern, so it was made to appear, it was turned over to the Lyons company.

The Roosevelt counsel also produced evidence to show, first, by the letters Barnes wrote to Platt, that Barnes was fighting hard for the State printing sixteen years ago—and even before that—and that he wanted Platt to intercede with State officials to get him the work; and, again, through Platt's former private secretary, Thomas F. Huff, that Barnes had appealed to Platt to use his influence to have the State printing turned over to the Lyons concern.

Relieving the monotony of the printing evidence, Mr. Bowers called Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, who testified to a conversation he had with Senator Grady, who was head of the Tammany contingent in the State Senate during the fight over the United States Senatorship in 1911, and also to a conversation he had with Barnes. The witness said he told Barnes that Senator Grady had told him that the Senatorial deadlock was likely to continue for a long time because Barnes had an agreement with the Tammany leader, Charles F. Murphy, that the Republicans should hold out for Chauncey M. Depew for Senator and thus give the Democrats a better chance to elect William F. Sheehan. He said he asked Barnes if the deadlock could not be ended, and Barnes replied: "No, we can't do it now."

The ever-watchful Ivins scored a point against the witness, however, by forcing him to admit that, although he was one of the so-called independent Democrats in the Senate, he had finally voted, after the deadlock was broken, for Tammany's candidate, James A. O'Gorman.

The New Platt Letters.

The Barnes-Platt correspondence furnished some of the most interesting developments of the day. Mr. Bowers had searched through the voluminous letter files which Edward T. Platt had brought here under subpoena and had found half a dozen letters that bore upon the matter of the State printing—a matter considered vital because the printing evidence is being used by the Roosevelt forces in an effort to show that the Colonel was justified in accusing Mr. Barnes of being in an alliance between crooked business and crooked politics.

The letters brought Lemuel Ely Quigg into the limelight again. They showed that, back in 1899, Barnes, as head of The Albany Journal, was on the outside so far as the State printing contracts were concerned, and that he was fighting hard to get in. He accused Quigg, whom he termed "insolent and insufferable," of working with Barnes's political enemies against him, and the plaintively appealed to Platt for protection. Platt did not take the Barnes viewpoint, and, in a reproving letter to Barnes, who was even then the Albany County leader and prominent among Republican politicians in the State, he said he did not think Barnes's attitude toward Quigg was justifiable. Notwithstanding the old enmities, Quigg worked with Barnes last Fall for the

REPULSE IS ADMITTED

LONDON, Wednesday, May 5.—The German and Austrian reports on the victory attained in West Galicia state that about 3,000 Russians were captured and that 22 cannon and 64 machine guns were taken. There was no mention, however, of any towns, such as Gorlice and Tarnow, which were close to the front, being captured, which leads the British military critics to the conclusion that, while the Germanic allies have won important local successes, they have not driven the Russians very far back.

Should they succeed in doing this, however, it is asserted that a general retreat of the Russians would be imperative and that the whole Carpathian offensive, on which the Muscovites have spent so much time and so many lives, would be completely nullified.

The Germans say they have made further progress with their raid into the Baltic provinces of Russia and that they have defeated the Russians there, as well as along the east Prussian frontier.

Admits the Dunajec Was Forced.

PETROGRAD, May 4.—An official communication issued this evening admits that the Austro-German forces have crossed to the right bank of the Dunajec River into Galicia.

It says, however, that desperate fighting continues.

PETROGRAD, May 4, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—As was anticipated some time ago, the Germans are now developing an attack on a front of fifty to sixty miles in West Galicia, from the lower reaches of the Nida, where it flows into the upper Vistula, right away to the Carpathians. Fighting is now in progress, and the left wing of the enemy's advancing line is being pushed with exceptional vigor, while the situation elsewhere is mainly artillery preparation or a series of disconnected assaults.

The left wing, advancing along the left bank of the Vistula, delivered in the early hours of Sunday before dawn no fewer than six attacks. The enemy displayed such determination in this section that it is practically certain the attacking force consisted of Germans. The attacks have all been repulsed.

The artillery fire was strongest in the neighborhood of Tarnow and south of that point, but the attacks delivered here lacked the cohesion of a general plan, presumably being entrusted to Austrians, whose leading in the field is by no means equal to that of the German officers. It is also possible that the usual antagonism between Austrians and Germans when working together, which has been increasingly noticeable for months past, may account for the difference between the character of the attacks along this fifty-odd miles of front.

The object of the attack is to relieve the pressure upon the forces defending the plains of Hungary fro mthe main line of the Russian advance across the Carpathians.

RIGA, Russia, (via London, May 4.)—Three German officers and thirty-nine men, with one gun and two machine guns and accompanied by two guides, were brought here today. They evidently are a part of the German force which has raided the Baltic provinces.

VICTORY WELL PREPARED.

VIENNA, May 4, (via London.)—Thirty thousand Russian soldiers, 22 cannon, and 64 machine guns were captured in the battle of West Galicia, according to an official statement given out in Vienna this afternoon. The statement follows:

German and Austro-Hungarian troops, in true comradeship of arms, gained a new victory. During the retreat of the Russians after our victorious battle at Limanova, Western Galicia, we captured the strongly fortified front of the enemy between the Vistula and the main ridge of the Carpathians.

In a continued attack the Allied troops, under the eyes of Commander-in-Chief Archduke Frederick, gained new successes yesterday, and advancing irresistibly in an easterly direction forced the Russians to make a hasty retreat.

The importance of the total success cannot yet be approximately estimated. The number of prisoners taken so far is 30,000. It is increasing hourly. A great quantity of war material has been captured in the numerous Russian positions, including twenty-two cannon and sixty-four machine guns.

On the remainder of the front the situation is generally unchanged.

According to the bulletins issued by the Austrian and German Army Headquarters, a large Austro-German Army has been steadily concentrating before Cracow for the last three weeks with the idea of making a new offensive movement. All available Austro-Hungarian troops have been quietly transferred during this time to the Dunajec front, and for a fortnight past an unbroken stream of troop trains has been pouring eastward from Frankfort, Berlin, and other German railroad centres.

Thus was warning given that big events were impending in the east. Newspaper correspondents were permitted to telegraph that a new offensive on the Russian front was in preparation, and even to intimate that the blow would fall neither in the Masurian Lake regions nor in the Carpathians. Closer indications, of course, were out of the question.

Final plans for this movement were approved at a conference held in Berlin April 23, between General von Falkenhayn, Chief of the German Staff, and Field Marshal Conrad von Hoetzendorf, Chief of the Austrian Staff. General Mackensen, Commander of the German Ninth Army, who came from the front

GERMANS GAIN TOWARD YPRES

Berlin Announces Taking of Three Villages—London Admits the Loss of Zonnebeke.

FORCED TO 'READJUST' LINE

Argonne Fighting Is Resumed and Both Sides Make Claims of Success.

LONDON, May 4.—Further gains of ground in the Ypes district are announced from Berlin which states that three villages to the northeast of the Flanders town have been taken from the British. In the list is Zennebeck, about four miles from Ypres and two miles southeast of St. Julien. In a bulletin given out by the British War Office this evening the statement is made that in the "readjustment of our line in front of Ypres," it now runs west of Zonnebeke.

The German bulletin makes these statements concerning operations on the western front:

In Flanders yesterday we pursued our attacks from the northeast with great success. This morning we captured Zevecote, Zonnebeke, Westhoek, the Forest of Polygonous and Nonnebosschen. These positions have been hotly contested for many months past. The retreating enemy was under the flank of the fire of our batteries to the northeast of Ypres.

In the Argonne district an attempt made by French trops north of Four de Paris to recapture the trench which we occupied May 1 reaulted in failure.

Artillery exchanges in the country between the Meuse and the Mosella also were continued yesterday.

The British comunication is as follows:

The loss of ground, which resulted from the unexpected use of asphyxiating gases by the enemy last week, necessitated a readjustment of our line in front of Ypres.

This readjustment, which has been in progress in the last few days, was successfully completed last night. The new line runs to the west of Zonnebeke.

During the last 24 hours the situation has been normal along the whole front with the exception of the [illegible] ing is now in progress, and the left wing of the enemy's advancing [illegible] being pushed with exceptional vigor, while the situation elsewhere is mainly artillery preparation or a series of disconnected assaults.

The left wing, advancing along the left bank of the Vistula, delivered in the early hours of Sunday before dawn no fewer than six attacks. The enemy displayed such determination in this section that it is practically certain the attacking force consisted of Germans. The attacks have all been repulsed.

The artillery fire was strongest in the neighborhood of Tarnow and south of that point, but the attacks delivered here lacked the cohesion of a general plan, presumably being entrusted to Austrians, whose leading in the field is by no means equal to that of the German officers. It is also possible that the usual antagonism between Austrians and Germans when working together, which has been increasingly noticeable for months past, may account for the difference between the character of the attacks along this fifty-odd miles of front.

The object of the attack is to relieve the pressure upon the forces defending the plains of Hungary fro mthe main line of the Russian advance across the Carpathians.

RIGA, Russia, (via London, May 4.)—Three German officers and thirty-nine men, with one gun and two machine guns and accompanied by two guides, were brought here today. They evidently are a part of the German force which has raided the Baltic provinces.

VICTORY WELL PREPARED.

CALAIS TO DOVER EASY SHOT.

Turpin Says Guns with Even Greater Range Has Long Been Possible.

PARIS, May 4.—"Theoretically, there is no limit to the range of big guns," said Henry Turpin, the inventor of melinite and of the new explosive, "Turpinite," to a representative of the Petit Parisien in discussing the bombardment of Dunkirk.

"When I was attached to the technical artillery section of the Ministry of War, General André, the Minister, asked me to make special experiments to see if it was possible to produce a gun and a projectile with a range equivalent to the distance from Calais to Dover. My first experiments and calculations showed it was possible to attain a much greater range than that."

It was while connected with the Ministry of War that M. Turpin invented the aerial torpedo, which the Germans appear to be using on both fronts, and the inventor is unable to [illegible] how they earned the secret.

READY TO ANNEX [illegible]

Germans Banked on Taking Paris —Were Starting Press Campaign.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, May 5.—The Morning Post's Amsterdam correspondent quotes the Echo Belge as stating that in expectation of being able to pierce the Allies' lines near Ypres the Germans decided to proclaim formally the annexation of Belgium.

With this view several Antwerp journalists, connected with the papers which were still allowed to appear under German censorship, were summoned to the German headquarters, where they were told that they must prepare Belgian public opinion for the approaching announcement.

Despite the almost menacing tone of the commandant's secretary the journalists left without committing themselves in any way, and the next day the commandant learned the German troops had made no appreciable progress.

Whereupon, it is said, all idea of a campaign for annexation was abandoned.

GIVES FRANCE'S TERMS OF PEACE

Gen. Malleterre, Cabling to The Times, Advises America Not to Offer Mediation.

MUST CONFINE GERMANY

Rhine for Western Barrier and the Oder and Reconstituted Poland for the Eastern.

TO OUST HOHENZOLLERNS

Freed from Prussian Rule, Germany, He Urges, Will Hold High Place in Peaceful Europe.

By GENERAL MALLETERRE.

General Malleterre distinguished himself as a division commander in the Battle of the Marne, where he was wounded. Being thus incapacited for service in the field, he was made Commandant of the Hôtel des Invalides, Paris, the famous hospital for aged and infirm soldiers, founded by Louis XIV. The following article, cabled by him to The New York Times through its Paris correspondent, derives especial authority as a representation of the views of the French Government, civil and military, from its having been passed by the censorship and from the fact that General Malleterre is the only man in the French Army authorized by General Joffre to write about the war. The title General Malleterre gives to his article is "The Only Possible Peace."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 4.—Amid the battle's tumult words of peace have recently begun to echo.

It is not the Allies who are raising the peace cry, nor even the neutrals, who are suffering the consequences of war—though the Pope, isolated in the Vatican, has done his Christian duty in addressing an appeal to the world.

The German press have taken the initiative about peace, naturally voicing their desire in terms agreeable to Germany. American newspapers in which German "truths" have free expression have followed [illegible]

The German terms are greatly modified [illegible] bastic demands. Dr. Dernburg, the Germanism's apostle in America, favors a return to the status quo ante with the retention of the Belgian protectorate and the restitution of the German colonies and freedom of the seas for all. His words are vain, representing the German's anxiety to escape from the disaster threatening them.

The Allies speak more definitely. They will fight until Germany is utterly crushed, to save future generations from a similar unprovoked war. Any voice proposing easier compromise would be stilled, not by the force of authority, but by national indignation.

Why should the Allies yield? Time works for them. Their union is unbreakable. The certainty of victory has passed from the Germans to those fighting for universal liberty.

The war has now reached the stage of "wearing down" our adversary, as all realise save the German nation, blinded by the lies of its leaders. Even it already feels the tightening grip, a prelude to worse agonies.

Who but Germany or her exhausted allies should speak of peace?

Not France, who sees herself on the eve of regaining Alsace-Lorraine, and who demands vengeance for her ruined fields and ravished homes.

Not martyred Belgium.

Not Russia, strong in inexhaustible reserves, who sees the realisation of Peter the Great's dream of Constantinople.

Not Serbia, who first decisively beat Austria, and who hearkens to the oppressed Slavs' appeals.

Not England, fighting for honor, to defend violated rights; who today considers herself Germany's most implacable foe, and who knows what fate Germany intended for her if victorious over France and Russia.

England will hold fast with her usual tenacity. The British say the war will last three years, which period is required to set going their full strength.

They needed fifteen years to crush Napoleon. Will any one dare to compare the Kaiser with Napoleon or the Germany of "Kultur" with the France of the First Empire.

Says Allies Must Dictate.

The only possible peace is one dictated by the Allies. That is their unflinching determination, unmistakably expressed.

What the terms will be they do not say, but it is certain that the Allies have already secretly made a preliminary agreement on the general nature of the conditions. But not until the peace congress will these be known.

Political leaders and writers, having authority, have already discussed in the magazines their views on the best possible peace. We may, therefore, consider the maximum and minimum terms likely to be demanded from the central empires.

The war has been a crime of madness, of German megalomania. Mad nations cannot be locked up in asylums or straitjackets like mad individuals, but they can be shut within barriers strong enough to resist their power of inflicting harm or spreading their malignant genius.

To confine Germany once more within normal frontiers; to reduce to fair proportions her expansive force and economic ambitions; to rid her finally of the Prussianism that has intoxicated her; to teach her to realise her true destiny in the midst of peaceful Europe—such

ROOSEVELT CALLS IT AN ACT OF PIRACY

Attack on an American Ship by German Submarine Is That, Pure and Simple, He Says.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 4.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt, in commenting today on the torpedoing of the American ship Gulflight, said he considered it an act of piracy, pure and simple.

The Colonel admitted that he had not followed the events relating to the attack on the ship very closely, but from what he had read about it, he said he saw no reason to change the opinion he had expressed in a magazine article at the time the Germans established their war zone. In that article the Colonel said that if the Germans should sink an American ship within that zone it would be pure piracy. Having at last torpedoed an American ship within the zone, the Colonel said today, he could not see why it wasn't an act of piracy.

Mr. Roosevelt wouldnot discuss what effect, if any, the incident would have upon this Government's relations with Germany.

GERMAN AIRMAN SINKS BRITISH SUBMARINE

Berlin Reports Odd Engagement in North Sea in Which Airship Was Victorious.

BERLIN, May 4, (via London.)—The following official communication was issued tonight:

"On May 3 a German naval airship had an engagement with several British submarines in the North Sea. Several bombs were dropped from the airship, one of them hitting and sinking one of the submarines.

"The airship was bombarded by the guns of the submarines without being hit. It returned safely."

GREY QUESTIONED ON OUR ARMS SALES

LONDON, May 4.—"The United States Government has not at any time in the present war supplied any war material to the British Government," said Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Secretary, in the House of Commons today in reply to a question asked by Sir Arthur H. Markham, Liberal member for Nottingham, [illegible] whether the Hague Convention was being strictly adhered to in this respect.

The Foreign Secretary added that it was entirely consistent for individual manufacturers of neutral States to supply material to belligerents, and "they no doubt are being supplied in this way now."

BRITAIN TAKES OVER MEAT FROM COLONIES

Will Feed Army and Sell to Civilians—Canada Guards Exports From Enemies

LONDON, May 4.—Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, announced in the House of Commons this evening that the British Government had requisitioned the entire supplies of meat from Australia and New Zealand.

The supplies that were not needed for the army, Mr. Runciman added, would be marketed for the benefit of the civil population, in order to prevent such increase in price as would arise from a shortage of supplies.

OTTAWA, May 4.—The shipment of wheat, flour and a large number of other agricultural products and commodities to the United States has been prohibited. It was officially announced today, however, that such shipments are intended solely for domestic consumption in the United States and not for reshipment abroad.

Exportation of Canadian wheat and other farm products to certain foreign countries, through the United States, is allowed upon permits to be obtained in each individual case from the Dominion authorities here. These permits must be delivered to customs officers at ports of exit, it is announced, before the shipment may be sent out of the country.

Another detail of the new restrictions is that all such products shipped out of the Dominion must be consigned to specific firms or individuals, and that bills of lading must state that the products are for consumption in the United States.

The embargo was declared at the suggestion of the British authorities in London. Not only are wheat and farm products affected, but various sorts of provisions have been added to the list.

There are said to be only 7,000,000 bushels of wheat available for export in Canada at the present time. The prohibition was made discretionary with the Dominion authorities rather than absolute in the case of American importers wanting wheat for export. If such importers can furnish the Dominion Government with satisfactory assurance that none of the wheat will reach Germany, Austria, or Turkey, it was said, permits for the exportation of such shipments could be issued.

UPHOLDS MORGAN TERMS.

LONDON, May 4.—Premier Asquith paid the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co. a compliment in the House of Commons this afternoon by saying that the British Government "have no reason to doubt the value of the services" of this firm.

The appointment of the Morgan Company as the sole agents in the United States for British Admiralty and War Office requirements, the Premier said, was made on Jan. 15 after full consideration.

John J. Mooney, a Nationalist member for Newry, Ireland, pressed Mr. Asquith for a disclosure of the rate of the commission received by the Morgan firm, and he asked for a reconsideration of the terms under which the banking house purchased the supplies, but he got no satisfaction.

Timothy Healy, Irish Nationalist member from the Northeast Division of Cork County, suggested that Great Britain owed an "unpealable obligation" to the firm, and the Prime Minister sealed the suggestion with the compliment given.

NOT TO HURRY GULFLIGHT ACTION

President Wants to be Sure of Facts About Attack on American Ship.

ORDERS CAREFUL INQUIRY

Possibility Seen That Germany May Deny Ship Was Hit by Submarine's Torpedo.

COMPANY FILES A REPORT

Chief Officer Says "Gulflight Submarined," but More Details Are Wanted—New Theories.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—No formal diplomatic action will be taken by the United States Government in the case of the American oil tank steamer Gulflight, whose crew say she was torpedoed on Saturday off the Scilly Islands by a German submarine, until all the facts have been ascertained and a determination reached, if possible, where the responsibility for the damage to the vessel should be placed. Inquiries are now being made in England and Germany to get the details of the affair.

Whether the Government appreciates the grave results which might come from the Gulflight case can only be surmised, as the attitude of officials is extremely cautious, and there is a very general disposition on their part to avoid any comment. The care with which the inquiries are being made indicates that there is every intention to make no moke until all possible data has been obtained.

The most significant course adopted by the State Department is in instructing James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador at Berlin, to inquire into the circumstances of the explosion. This implies that the Government has taken cognisance of the statements that the vessel was torpedoed by a German submarine. But whether Mr. Gerard will ask the German Government the point-blank question naturally resulting from these statements has not been disclosed.

So far as the State Department knows officially, the accusation that the Gulflight was struck by a torpedo fired with deliberate intent by a German submarine is based mainly on the testimony of men of the Gulflight that a submarine, which submerged immediately, was sighted about twenty-five minutes before the explosion against the bow of the American oil steamer. It is to clear up this point that the inquiry is being made by Ambassador Gerard, but it is not known how he will go about ascertaining what is so necessary to further proceedings. The fact is not overlooked here that there may be some delicacy in asking the German Government if one of its vessels torpedoed an American ship, when the only basis for such an inquiry is the evidence that an unidentified submarine was seen from the Gulflight shortly before the explosion occurred and the obvious assumption that no British or French vessel would have attacked a neutral ship bound for a French port and accompanied by two British patrol vessels.

It is regarded as within the bounds of probability that the German Government will disclaim all knowledge of how the Gulflight was injured. In that event the affair would cease to be in any way critical unless the United States felt that the evidence it had collected justified it in setting up the claim that a German submarine was responsible. It is also suggested here that Germany might contend that the injury was due to a British submarine mine and point as evidence to sustain that allegation that the Gulflight was accompanied by two British patrol ships which presumably were guiding her through a mine field. The understanding here has been, however, that the waters in the vicinity of the Scilly Islands are not mined.

One view expressed here today was that if Germany admitted that a German submarine had attacked the Gulflight, the admission might be coupled with the contention that the Gulflight was mistaken for a British patrol vessel, or that the torpedo which struck the Gulflight was intended to be fired at one of the enemy patrol ships accompanying her. However, all these suggestions are theoretical, and are mentioned merely to indicate the possibilities involved in the case and one of the reasons for the extreme caution that is being shown by the United States Government in looking into the circumstances of the incident.

President Moves Cautiously.

President Wilson said today that he did not think it was wise to discuss the Gulflight case until the Government knew exactly what the circumstances were. He said that the State Department was seeking a report from Berlin, and from some source in England, probably the American Consul at Plymouth, who was the nearest American official to the Scilly Islands. Beyond that the President would not go. A further conference on the Gulflight case took place this morning between the President and Secretary Bryan, but nothing was disclosed as to what pased between them.

The additional information received by the State Department today was very largely confirmatory of what Consul Stephens had sent from Plymouth yesterday, and there is nothing in the data before the department that definitely places responsibility for the affair. Consul General Skinner at London, sent a message, received this morning, stating that the second officer of the Gulflight had reported that the officers of the tankship had observed a submarine several miles ahead, and that twenty-five minutes elapsed before the vessel was struck by a torpedo, and that three lives had been lost.

The State Department today received from the Gulf Refining Company, owner of the Gulflight, a long message, dated New York, May 5, which formally brought the case to the Government's attention. The message from the Gulf Refining Company read:

"A cable has been received from Chief Officer Smith of steamship Gulflight dated Scilly, May 2, reading as follows:

"Gulflight submarined Saturday. Patrol boats standing by, will probably salve. Operator Short, Seaman Chapenta drowned; Captain died today, heart failure, body landed Scilly. American Consul protecting interests."

A further cable has been received dated Scilly, May 2, from the American Consul, reading:

"Gulflight towed into Scilly."

A further cable has been received about midnight today from Chief Officer Smith reading as follows:

"Advise immediately disposal Captain's remains; crew gone Penzance. Butterworth, Chief Engineer, is standing by anchored; Scilly tugs will tow to English port, naval authorities charge."

This steamer is the property of the Gulf Refining Company, a Texas corporation having business offices in Pittsburgh, Penn. She was bound on a voyage from Port Arthur, Texas, to Rouen, France, with a cargo of gasoline consigned to the Compagnie Industrielle des Petroles, at Rouen, France. The company has no knowledge or information indicating that the gasoline was intended for other than private consumption.

The Gulflight was built by the New York Shipbuilding Company at Camden, N. J., and put into service Aug. 30, 1914. The steamer is of 5,118 gross tons, American register, and her present sound value is about $700,000. Her pending freight was $88,550.67. Captain Alfred Gunter, who died in consequence of the accident, was an American citizen, resident at Bayonne, N. J., and is survived by his widow. Short, the wireless operator, who was drowned, was an American citizen, resident in Chicago, and gave his mother, who resides in Chicago, as his next of kin. Chapenta, seaman, who was drowned, hailed from Port Arthur, Texas. Inquiries are being made as to his nationality.

Possible German Explanation.

The declaration of Chief Officer Smith that the Gulflight was "submarined," and the submission of this statement by his employers to the State Department, put this phase of the matter formally before the Wilson Administration for consideration and action. The full statement from Chief Officer Smith is being eagerly awaited.

Officials here, while refusing to comment for publication, paid particular attention today to the detailed news account given by Second Officer Bower. According to his statement he saw "a submarine" two and a half miles ahead of the Gulflight about twenty-five minutes before the attack occurred. The submarine," he said, "had not reappeared on the surface before discharging the torpedo." Experts were today asked about this phase of the matter. They all agreed that it would have been necessary for the submarine to come to the surface a second time to fire the torpedo, for the reason that when the submarine's periscope is submerged it is like a blind man. It is possible, they admit, for a submarine to take bearings, submerge itself, and then fire, taking a chance on hitting the vessel, but it is not customary. Though the officers of the Gulflight say they did not see the submarine after it was once submerged, the belief of experts here is that if this submarine fired a torpedo after submerging it must have gone down only a short distance, leaving the periscope partly above the water.

Experts differ as to how easily a ship's flag may be distinguished through the periscope. The eye of the periscope is about 8 inches in diameter, but the eyepiece is smaller, and the flag appears not much larger than a speck. Some officers contend that it is very difficult, if not impossible, by means of a periscope to tell the colors and nationality of a flag.

According to Second Officer Bower's statement the Gulflight was accompanied by two British patrol vessels, one on either side. This would make a group of three vessels traveling side by side, the central vessel flying the American flag, the two outer vessels flying the British naval colors. The American flag would be displayed from the stern, while the submarine the second officer says he saw was two and one-half miles ahead. The commander of the submarine might assert that he saw no American flag, and it was admitted by some experts that under the circumstances described it might be impossible for him to see that flag, on account of the patrol vessel that traveled on the starboard side of the Gulflight. It would be easier to see the British flag on the patrol vessel, if the flags could be discerned at all.

It was pointed out that the submarine's commander might make the excuse that he thought all three of the vessels were British ships, or since the central ship was being convoyed, therefore it was being handled as a British Government vessel for some naval purposes.

The answer to the suggestions, from the Wilson Administration standpoint, has been that "if the commanders of German vessels of war should act upon the presumption that the flag of the United States was not being used in good faith and should destroy on the high seas an American vessel or the lives of American citizens, it would be difficult for the Government of the United States to view the act in any other light than as an indefensible violation of neutral rights, which it would be very hard indeed to reconcile, with the friendly relations now so happily subsisting between the two Governments."

INQUIRY IS STARTED.

American Embassy to Lose No Time in Reporting to Washington.

LONDON, May 4.—The American Embassy began today an investigation of the torpedoing of the American steamer Gulflight. An examination of the ship, as well as of the crew, will be made. It is probable taht the inquiry will be carried on principally at Plymouth, where the crew landed.

The investigation will be conducted as expeditiously as possible so that no time may be lost in transmitting the report to Washington.

The London afternon newspapers comment only in the briefest manner on the Gulflight incident. The Westminster Gazette asks whether President Wilson "will make god his words of February" and hold the German Government to strict accountability.

CRITICISES OUR ATTITUDE.

Under the caption "The Torpedoing of the Gulflight," The Staats-Zeitung said yesterday:

"In the State Department at Washington it was said yesterday that no reports that could be regarded as official had ye been received about the torpedoing of the American oil steamer Gulflight, and that all facts must be ascertained first before the Goverment would make up its mind concerning the steps that must be taken. All that is in the meantime published in the newspepers about the case must therefore be accepted with the necessaray caution. It could naturally not be surprising that the local press should utilize the regrettable occurrence to the full. Why wait till all the facts have been ascertained?

"n American steamer was torpedoed in the so-called war zone, whereby the Captain of the vessel and two sailors met death. Therefore it could only be a case of an intentional attack by a German submarine, an insult perpetrated upon the United States, a new violation of international law. And thereby the fact is quite overlooked that England almost daily treads international law under foot without paying the least attention to the protests of neutrals.

"When Dr. Dernburg a short time ago spoke of the freedom of the seas, he was attacked most vehemently by the very newspapers that now once more pounce upon the 'German pirates.' It is to be assumed that in view of the lamentable loss of human lives in the torpedoing of the steamer Gulflight, an energetic tone will be adopted in Washington. It is still more to be deplored that our Government did not from the beginning take an energetic attitude toward all belligerents in the safeguarding of the rights of all neutrals."

BRITISH STEAMER SUNK.

Another Victim of the German Submarines Off Scilly Islands.

LONDON, May 4.—The British steamer Minterne, from Cardiff for the River Platte, with 6,000 tons of coal, was torpedoed off the Scilly Islands on Monday. Two firemen were killed, and thesecond engineer was injured. The wounded man and the remainder of the crew have been landed at Penzance.

The striking of the torpedo was the first intimation that a submarine was in the neighborhood. The force of the explosion hurled the engineer through the aperture made in the ship's deck, and saved his life. The crew took to their boats and finally were rescued by fishing vessels.

The Minterne was of 1,905 tons net, and was 330 feet long. She was built in 1903 and owned in London.

The Norwegian steamer America, which was torpedoed in the North Sea last Saturday by a German submarine, going to the bottom in two hours, had been detained at Kirkwall, where the meat products in her cargo had been seized and bought by Great Britain. After this she had been allowed to proceed with the balance of her American cargo undisturbed.

Seven members of the crew of the trawler named Cruiser, of which four were wounded by the shell fire of a German submarine, have been landed at Aberdeen by a collier. They say that the Cruiser was approaching Aberdeen Harbor, laden with fish, when the submarine appeared and opened fire. One shell struck the trawler's bridge, instantly killing four members of the crew.

The survivors assert that the remaining seven hands took to their boat and were rowing away when the submarine fired again, wounding four of the men and causing the boat to capsize. The men thrown into the water were rescued from drawning by the collier.

WOMEN TO KEEP ON THEIR WORK FOR PEACE

Meet Tonight in Amsterdam—Jane Addams Says Congress Was a Success.

By JANE ADDAMS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, May 4.—A large public peace meeting is to be held in Amsterdam tomorrow evening at which the officers of the International Congress of Women are to speak. Since the close of the Congress, three days ago, requests for meetings have been pouring in from other Dutch cities as well as from England, Germany, Hungary, Switzerland, and other European countries.

The public is enthusiastically realizing the great outstanding fact that the solidarity of women in the midst of the world catastrophe was held and that the great international meeting came to a successful close without any serious disagreement or ruction. This is the more remarkable, taken in connection with the fact that all the great international organizations of science, labor, religion, and social economy deemed it impossible to meet this year lest something be said or done that might endanger the neutrality of the small States or increase the bitterness between the parties to the conflict.

The women who took part in the solemn deliberations which have just ended, many of whom had personally experienced the effect of war in the loss of their relatives, in the nursing of wounded, and in the disorganization of all normal living, throughout treated their sisters from the warring countries in a spirit of understanding and comradeship, and their protest was turned against war itself without any attempt to assess the blame.

The congress was never without its emotional background, all the more impressive because so carefully restrained. At moments one was reminded of the women of the Greek tragedy, who mourned not for their personal sorrows but for the great wrongs of the world. The modern woman, however, with her trained mind, not only cried out against the present system of force but was able to hold her mind upon the devising of ways and means for substituting reason and law, conciliation and arbitration for the prevailing system.

HERE FROM THE WAR ZONE.

Travelers Tell of Conditions in Several Countries.

Edward Borcea, a mining engineer from Bucharest, who arrived on the steamship Transylvania yesterday to purchase supplies for the Rumanian Government, said the general opinion in Eastern Europe was that Italy would not enter the war because she was making too much money by keeping out of it. He believed that Rumania would be forced into the conflict by Bulgaria, but the people were not in favor of war.

Howard Glazbrook of La Junta, Col., who was a passenger on the Transylvania, said that Scotland was full of soldiers, and that Edinburgh was protected by trenches. In addition there are several platforms with solid concrete foundations for mounting heavy guns in case of a siege. The city is in darkness every night, h said, on account of the possibility of a Zeppelin attack.

B. Low, a mining engineer of 42 Broadway, who has spent three years in Russia, returned on the Transylvania to see his relatives.

He said that while Petrograd was exceptionally quiet and its inhabitants were taking the war very seriously, the German capital on the other hand was full of life and gaiety.

Count Ward, who is on his way to San Francisco to see the fair, said that London was becoming normal and the people had become used to the darkened streets. He added that the people were not wearing much mourning, chiefly armlets of crêpe, instead of the customary black of normal times.

CHECK PEARSON SUIT.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 4.—The hearing sought by General Samuel Pearson under the "discovery" statute against the Allis-Chalmers Company and others in connection with the alleged manufacture of shrapnel shells for the Allies has been temporarily stayed by an order, issued today by Circuit Judge Turner requiring General Pearson to show cause on May 18 why proceedings for the examination of Otto H. Falk, President of the Allis-Chalmers Company, should not permanently be stayed and the suit dismissed.

Max Babb, attorney for the corporation, said today that Pearson was not a stockholder and had no right to inquire into the company's affairs and that the company would not permit him to do so.

RUSHING NIXON'S PLANT.

Will Start in Ten Days to Make War Materials for Europe.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, May 4.—Operations in Millville, a hamlet between here and Bonhamtown, have assumed such proportions that the unemployed of many parts of the county are turning toward that place for work.

Within six weeks the Nixon Nitration Company has built three large structures for the manufacture of gun powder and other war materials, beside seven smaller buildings. Within ten days the buildings will be enclosed, and nitration will be commenced.

That contracts have been made, whose execution will require at least three years, was stated by Lewis Nixon, under whose direction work is being carried on.

Already 500 men are employed at the works, and as it is understood that three times as many buildings will be constructed as have been put up already, it is likely that the number of employed will reach almost to 2,000. It is the intention to establish three shifts a day. That the purpose of the works is to supply some of the warring nations in Europe with war materials is generally known.

Down on the north bank of the Raritan River in Millville a large tract of land has been secured by Mr. Nixon for a big water works plant. Alongside a long row of store houses there has been built a railroad siding, over which about thirty cars daily transport machinery and building materials to the works. Many cars of acid and of cotton have already been received. Rows of acid tanks on concrete foundations have been built.

The Public Service Commission has run special lines of electric cables to the works, and has built a large power house of substantial character at the entrance to the works.

BRITISH WAR BUDGET IS $5,000,000,000

Estimated Cost of Carrying on Conflict to April 1, 1916—For Six Months, $3,952,290,000.

$10,500,000 FOR ONE DAY

Cost of First Eight Months, Lloyd George Puts at $1,535,000,000 —Duration Still in Doubt.

LONDON, May 4.—In one of the shortest budget speeches on record, lasting a little more than an hour, David Lloyd George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, today gave the British public further insight into what the war is costing the nation.

The expenditure in six months, Mr. Lloyd George said, would be £2,100,000 ($10,500,000) daily, and he added that if the war continued for a year longer Great Britain's bill would be upward of £1,000,000,000, (about $5,000,000,000.) The debt of the country, according to Mr. Lloyd George, already had been almost doubled and stood well over the $5,000,000,000 mark.

The Chancellor declined to predict the length of the war. He introduced no measures calling for new taxes, although he hinted that such a step likely would have to be taken. There was little discussion of the budget itself, and the usual income tax resolutions were passed before the House adjourned.

Mr. Lloyd George said he was able to report that the revenue of the country had exceeded the estimates and that the surtax and income tax papers were sending in their money with unusual celerity.

Mr. Lloyd George's exact estimate, if the war lasted during the whole of the fiscal year (to April 7, 1916,) was £1,136,434,000 ($5,682,170,000,) as the cost to Great Britain.

Mr. Lloyd George said that if the war should last six months instead of a year, Great Britain's estimated expenditures would be £790,458,000 ($3,952,290,000.) He estimated that the total revenue for the year 1915-1916 would be £270,182,000 ($1,350,910,000.) This is an increase of £43,638,000 ($218,190,000) over the total of last year.

Cost of War Rising.

On the basis of a six months' war, the Chancellor continued, expenditures for war, apart from advances to the Allies of Great Britain, would rise to £2,100,000 daily, and the net deficit would be £514,346,000. On the basis of a twelve months' war the net deficit would be £862,332,000.

"That is the sum the country will have to raise in addition to the Government's revenue during the course of the present year," he said.

The Chancellor gave an indication of the colossal expenditure he had to provide for in his opening sentence. "Up to the end of the financial year," he said, "the net cost of the war has been over £307,000,000 ($1,535,000,000.")

He said he thought a review of the financial situation would help the public to understand the immensity of the task undertaken. "The ultimate issue of the war is not in doubt; only its duration," said the Chancellor, and this it was which rendered his task difficult.

Next Months to Show.

Much depended, the Chancellor continued, upon the operations of the next two or three months. Experts gave various predictions as to the duration of the war, but the best of them could not tell how long it would last. The operations of the Summer alone would give the Government a dependable opinion.

"The first eight months of the war cost net £307,000,000," he said. "The cost is a progressive one, greater during the first four months than the second period."

As a result of the year's operations, the Chancellor said, the national debt was now £1,165,738,000.

Mr. Lloyd George did not consider that the time had arrived to frame the final policy for the whole year, as the character of the budget must depend upon the view of the Government whether the war probably would last six months or throughout the financial year.

Dealing with the revenue for the coming year, the Chancellor estimated the £270,332,000. He said that the fixed death charge for the year would be something like £50,000,000. The expenditure for the army would be £400,000,000 or £800,000,000, according to whether the war lasted six months or a year. On this same basis the expenditures for the navy would be £100,000,000 or £146,000,000. He placed loans to Great britain's allies at £200,000,000.

Comparing the financial problems of Great Britain and Germany, Mr. Lloyd-George remarked that while British imports had increased enormously and exports had decreased considerably, both the exports and imports of Germany had been cut off by the British navy.

From the point of view of a War Minister, Mr. Lloyd George added, this made Great Britain better off. But from the point of view of a Finance Minister her position was more difficult. In the ordinary year, the Chancellor continued, British imports ranged £190,000,000 ($950,000,000) above exports, but this year they would be £448,000,000 ($2,240,000,000), exclusive of Government purchases.

Change in Recruiting Policy.

Referring to the question of discrimination in recruiting, the Chancellor said he thought the Allies ought to determine the part Great Britain should play in the combination and the best service she could render. She could, he declared, keep command of the sea, and that was a valuable service she had rendered the Allies, which was essential to their ultiamte success, especially if the war were prolonged. She could maintain a great army on a Continental scale, he continued, and a third service was one she had rendered in the Napoleonic days—bearing the main burden of financing the Allies.

Great Britain, said Mr. Lloyd George, could do the first and third of these things, but the second she could do only within certain limits. She had raised an enormous army, but the time had come for discriminating in recruiting within suggested limits. However, there was a great boom for recruiting.

The Chancellor thought the time had come when measures should be taken of such a nature that recruiting would not interfere with the work of providing food supplies and munitions of war, and would interfere as little as possible with the output of commodities which Great Britain exports and which enable her to purchase munitions for herself and her allies. The only straightforward course to pursue in finishing the war was to depend more largely on the income of the country and the savings of the community as a whole.

Liquor Question Open.

The plan adopted for regulation of the liquor traffic was not entirely satisfactory, the Chancellor himself admitted. He announced that he was to have a conference tomorrow with the brewers and distillers in regard to his new taxes on spirits, wines, and beer, and that he was very anxious to come to an agreement with the trade.

The Chancellor said he was not wedded to his own proposals, and if any one had better ones to offer he would accept them. He did ask, however, that the House give the Government at once control of the liquor trade in areas in which munitions of war are produced.

During the debate which followed the budget speech Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition, and John Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, declared their opposition to the new taxes on liquors, but promised to facilitate the passage of that portion of the bill giving the Government control over the sale of alcoholic liquors in areas where munitions of war are being manufactured.

Arthur Henderson, for the Labor Party, protested against the charges that had been made with regard to the habits of the workingmen, and declared that unless some method were found to have the workingmen's side of the case stated it might be difficult for the Labor Party to give the Government the solid support which they had rendered it during the war.

Mr. Lloyd-George, in replying, said he coud not encourage the idea that the proposed taxation would be dropped, but declared he would consider the suggestion of discrimination between raw and mature whisky. He denied that the case that had been made out for interference with the liquor traffic was a charge against the workers of the country.

The resolution imposing an income tax having passed, the House adjourned.

are the general conditions of possible peace.

Rhine as Western Frontier.

First, let us consider the frontiers. They are the Rhine in the west and Poland, resurrected, in the east. Germany's imperialistic policy has urged her far beyond these in the attempt to enslave weaker or buffer States. German school maps put before her people's greedy eyes a vision of a "Greater Germany" from the North Sea to the Adriatic, from the Rhone and the Meuse to the Niemen and the Dniester. But France has never accepted this theory of might's supremacy. Is France dedecadent, as Germany thought, just because she is Europe's oldest State, constituted ten centuries before Germany?

France throughout her history has always regarded the Rhine and the Alps as her natural eastern frontier. The Rhine, which Caesar's finger marked as Gaul's fittest boundary, has been France's steadfast frontier aim, whether Royalist, Imperial, or Republican.

This condition is absolute. Germany must be limited by the Rhine, prevented from future aggression by our occupation of the strongholds of Cologne,, Coblentz, Mavence, Mannheim, and Strassburg. When France has once received as her due Alsace-Lorraine, then it is the task of the Peace Congress to arrange for the distribution of the other Rhine provinces.

Eastward, Russia has already announced her intention of restoring Polish autonomy. Poland, which was split at the close of the eighteenth century between Russia, Austria, and Germany, must be permitted to reintegrate her ancient territories. Galicia is already reconquered and East Prussia belongs by racial ties to Poland. The present war will free East Prussia from German domination, ever increasing since the mediaeval invasion by Teutonic knights.

Russian Poland, Galicia, and East Prussia must form a new Polish kingdom, together with Posen and the greater part of Silesia.

If the Oder is too slanting to make a frontier like the Rhine, let the fortresses of Breslau, Glogau, Posen, and Danzig be the wall of steel that shuts in Germany.

Thus enclosed between Poland and the Rhine, Germany will be restricted, but big enough. She can rebuild her prosperity, if she has the wisdom to fashion her political and economic existence in accordance with the qualities of her race and soil.

Hohenzollerns Must Go.

Now comes the second condition of peace, which is an indispensable complement of the first. German mentality has been diverted into wrong channels, owing to the supremacy of the military caste, filled with the spirit of universal tyranny. This caste is typified by the Hohenzollern dynasty—once a clan of robber barons, who have found admirable supporters among the descendants of the Teutonic Knights, the colonizers of Eastern Prussia.

Kaiser Wilhelm has inherited all the vices and ambitions of this predatory dynasty. Defeat must produce the downfall and disappearance of this murderous family, with which will vanish its barbarous militarism, its tyranny of bodies and souls, and its monstrous conception of Pan-Germanism.

Then, freed from the Hohenzollern infection, Germany will perhaps become once more what she was before the Prussian hegemony, and will still hold a high rank in peaceful, prosperous Europe.

We have not spoken about Austria, at once the accomplice and the victim of Germany, who is dragging her to destruction.

The Peace Congress, in redrawing definitely the political map of Europe, will have a hard and solemn task. The fate of Berlin, Vienna, and Constantinople will be decided before this tribunal, inspired solely by the right and justice for whose those composing it have fought.

As the Allies have declared the fighters alone (including those who entered the conflict at the eleventh hour) shall have a decisive voice in the final council. But they will allow the neutral powers to be represented and will take into due account their views and interests.

No Mediation, He Says.

This is the idea to which France's great sister republic should accustom herself. Any mediation proposal would be inopportune and misplaced. The Allies know what they want.

We can appreciate America's desire for a speedy peace, but her loyalty and spirit of justice will save her from being duped by our enemies' treacherous manoeuvres.

To America I have set forth France's conception of the truth. Let America compare it with Germany's.

Perhaps during the course of the war America, flooded by German contradictions and lies, may have hesitated. Americans may have asked whether it was not better to end this shocking conflict, unduly prolonged, without a decisive result. They may have thought, perhaps, that the Allies might hearken to the first proposals of peace, no matter whence they came

Perhaps, too, America thought herself our mediator. She is suffering from the present conditions.

Furthermore, America, conscious of her own strength, considers war an anachronism. But today it should be realised that none is completely safe from an enemy whose mad ambition is unlimited. Even England, invioiate in her isle, is threatened. Who might not be the next victim of German aggression? Then Americans would learn too late that war was no anachronism, and that only those merit approval who respect treaties and conventions that limit the horrors of war.

The facts are plain. None can contradict them. Belgium's martyrdom, the bombardment of cathedrals and unfortified towns, the wanton destruction of monuments, the use of methods, repugnant to right and humanity, a whole policy based on lies—Americans see all these clearly now.

Will America hesitate to accept the conditions I set forth of the only possible peace?

in Poland, also was present at the Berlin conference. He left for the front to take command of the new army that same night, after receiving his final instructions. So far as is known Field Marshal von Hindenburg did not attend the Berlin council of war, although he visited German headquarters with General Mackenson shortly previous to this.

It is too early as yet to discuss the full military effect of this victory in Galicia, but it is the opinion of Austrian observers that the German and the Austrian strategists "got the jump" on the offensive, which the Russians were believed to be planning and which their campaign in the Carpathians was thought to have been preliminary.

A significant feature of the reports of this victory is the reference to the piercing of the front of the Russian Army. The Russian commanders up to the present time usually have been able to avoid a breach in their line by falling back before the line broke.

The political value of the victory of the first magnitude is regarded here as quite as great as the military. It comes in the midst of the Austro-Italian negotiations and on the eve of the meeting of the Italian Parliament, and it coincides with the announcement of new Austro-Hungarian loans, the success of which would be materially affected by a victory at this time.

Russians Held Strong Positions.

A correspondent of the Neue Freie Presse of Vienna, in the theatre of the war, has sent in the following dispatch concerning the battle:

"The Austro-Hungarian offensive succeeded with surprising rapidity. The Russians occupied naturally strong positions on the Dunajec and the Biala, which had been strengthened with every imaginable method of fortifications. They felt themselves absolutely secure.

"After a searching artillery preparation, exceeding in intensity anything which has occurred on the northeastern frontier, the Austrians and the Hungarians advanced Sunday on the southern wing. They stormed at the first attempt the Russian positions along a front of more than forty kilometers (twenty-four miles) stretching from the Biala River through Gorlice and far into the Carpathian Mountains.

"Their assault was so fierce that the Russian line broke immediately. Many thousands of prisoners were taken, as well as an inestimable quantity of equipment, supplies, cannon, and machine guns.

"At the same time on the northern wing another successful advance was carried out. At this point Austrian and Hungarian troops crossed the Dunajec in spite of terrific opposition, stormed the Russeian positions, and took over 1,000 prisoners.

"Other brilliant successes also are reported from the Carpathians."

BERLIN, May 4, (via London.)—A school holiday was ordered today in Germany in celebration of the victory in West Galicia.

German military critics emphasize the importance of the Austro-German success, particularly in its connection with the advance of German forces to the eastward of Memel through the Baltic provinces.

BERLIN, (via Sayville,) May 4.—The following report was issued today by the German General Staff:

In the eastern arena of the war, the number of Russians captured during the pursuit of the retreating enemy in the direction of Mitau has been increased to more than 4,000. A renewed Russian attack to the southwest of Kalwarya, north of Suwalki, in Russian Poland, has been repulsed. We took 170 prisoners. Russian attacks to the southeast of Augustowa resulted in failures, with heavy losses to the enemy. In addition to four officers killed, the Russians in this engagement lost two machine guns, and 420 men were captured by us.

In the southeastern arena of the war: The offensive movement between the wooded slopes of the Carpathians and the upper Vistula is progressing well. The booty of the first day was 1,500 prisoners, sixteen pieces of artillery, forty-seven machine guns, and a quantity of war material of all kinds the exact amount of which has not yet been ascertained.

SAY 82,000 SURRENDERED.

Russian Captives Since War Started Who Gave Themselves Up.

GENEVA, May 4.—The Tribune de Geneve publishes statistics to the effect that a total of 82,000 officers and men of the Austro-Hungarian Army have surrendered to the Russians and to the Serbians since the beginning of hostilities, without firing a single shot. The newspaper declares that all of these men were fully equipped.

Archduke Eugene had a conference in Vienna yesterday with the Austro-Hungarian Minister of War, according to this same newspaper, concerning a new campaign against Serbia in case Italy continues her neutrality.

Austrians Build Two Lines of Defenses Around Bukowina Capital.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUCHAREST, May 4, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—Twelve thousand men are working on the construction of two lines of fortifications around Czernowitz. There are said to be 16,000 Austrians within the walls of the Bukowina capital.

Artillery duels have recommenced in the neighborhood of Bojan.

Near Mamaliga, in Bessarabia, two Austrian aeroplanes threw incendiary bombs, setting several houses on fire. Aeroplanes have also flown over Czernowitz, dropping leaflets setting forth the situation as regards the belligerents and the war generally.

Fighting continues north of Bukowina.

NEW RUSSIAN WAR LOAN.

$100,000,000 of 5 Per Cent. Treasury Bills for Foreign Markets.

PETROGRAD, May 4.—An imperial ukase published today directs the issue on foreign markets of 5 per cent. rubles ($100,000,000).

A dispatch received in London yesterday said that another Russian internal loan of $500,000,000, the success of which was assured, would be issued within a fortnight.

SHELL RUSSIAN NAVY BASE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, May 5.—The Daily News receives from Copenhagen, under Monday's date, the following dispatch:

"Private Stockholm advices state that German warships are busy in the northern part of the Gulf of Bothnia, especially in the Aland Sea. Today a Swedish ship arrived and reported that the military lighthouse at Langskaeron, Aland Islands, was set on fire yesterday morning by shells from a warship.

"This is the first direct German attack on the important Russian naval yard at Aland. It is expected that a general naval offensive will begin shortly in northern Gulf of Bothnia."

84 Melinite Victims.

PETROGRAD, May 4, (Dispatch to the London Morning Post.)—Investigation into the case of the explosion of melinite at the Okhta factory, in the neighborhood of Petrograd, has been completed so far as the loss of life incurred is concerned. Official figures put the killed and those who very shortly after died of the injuries they had received at 84.

Sixty-three of the injured are in hospital, and to this number must be added 34 persons not belonging to the factory.

Of the number entered as killed 89 are missing; that is to say, no trace will ever be found of their bodies.

ALLIES OFFERED GREECE ASIA MINOR TERRITORY

Special Correspondence of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 22.—It is reported here that among the inducements offered by the Entente Powers to Greece to go to the aid of Servia, was the promise of a stretch of Asia Minor territory 140,000 square kilometres in extent. It was this offer, with other considerations set forth in his memorandum to the King, just made public, which rendered M. Venizelos, the former Premier, so eager to align Greece with France and England in the war.

M. Venizelos, it appears, advised the King in order to obtain the entrance into the conflict of Bulgaria also, to agree to a frontier rectification whereby Bulgaria would gain about a thousand square kilometres of territory.

In an effort to overcome the Greek General Staff's fear of Bulgaria Sir Edward Grey promised to send a division o British troops to Macedonia, but even this guarantee was deemed insufficient.

Verification of the promise of territory by the Entente Powers is found in M. Venizelos's memorandum to the King, in which he said:

"Up til today our policy has consisted of the maintenance of neutrality as long as our obligations as allies of Serbia did not demand that we depart from it; but now we are requested to enter into war, not only to fulfill our simple moral obligations, but for concessions which, if released, would create a great and powerful Greece, such as even the most optimistic would not have imagined a few years ago."

ASQUITH PRAISES NATION'S RESPONSE

Confident of Success if the People Go on in the Same Way and Same Temper.

LONDON, May 4.—Premier Asquith, addressing a meeting of a committee formed to encourage recruiting among employes in the wholesale and retail distributing trades of the country, today said that out of 790,000 clerks, commercial travelers, and other workers in these trades 430,000 had joined the army.

The Premier stated that inquiries were being made with regard to recruiting in the cotton trade, biscuit manufacturers, hotels, and other branches of industry, with a view to making a further appeal.

Mr. Asquith proceeded to point out what women have done to release men for the army. Up to April 24 more than 30,000 women had enrolled on the war register initiated by the Board of Trade. In one of the largest engineering works in Newcastle, in the department devoted to the manufacture of shells, he saw three or four thousand women at work. If that could be done in an occupation so far removed from the normal activities of women it ought to be a far easier task in other trades.

The Premier recognized that the people recognized the gravity of the war and did not have to be flogged or goaded by rhetorical incitements before they could be induced to obey the call of duty.

"Never in the history of any nation has that recognition been more clear and universal, or that obedience more prompt and more unselfish," he said. "We have made a magnificent beginning. We have stemmed the tide of aggression and the men have shown a spirit worthy of the best traditions of the race. I would say to the nation: Proceed in the same way and in the same temper.

"Every breach in our first line has been made good, but there are still in reserve unused, and, to the enemy, unsuspected resources, which you must mobilize and organize to the full. I am not the least ashamed to call myself an optimist; not that I underrate the prowess of the enemy, the gravity of the struggle, the imperious need for the unsleeping exercise of our national qualities of patience, constancy, resolution, and fortitude. I am an optimist because I believe in the righteousness of our cause, and because I am confident that by personal and corporate effort and self-sacrifice there is nothing that we shall leave undone to bring that cause—bethe struggle short or long—to a decisive and glorious issue."

FINDS HOSPITAL IN NEED.

LONDON, May 4.—William Potter, President of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, returned here today from France, where he inspected the American military hospital preparatory to sending there a unit of Philadelphia physicians. President Potter will leave shortly for America, where he will devote his efforts to raising money for the American hospital. He says that the hospital is well equipped, but is greatly in need of funds to care for the 800 soldier patients.

—"And you must take Sanatogen regularly for several weeks"

THERE is a reason for this urgent advice. Physicians know that Sanatogen supplies the real needs of a starved, overwrought nervous system—that it is a scientific combination of albumen and organic phosphorus eagerly absorbed by the hungry tissues and possessing unique tonic and reconstructive qualities.

They also know from their own observation its revivifying action upon persons whose nervous strength had been undermined by overwork, worry or disease—how it has infused renewed energy, life and elasticity into starved nerves—how it has regenerated the appetite, digestion and helped revitalize the whole system.

But no less impressive than the commendatory letters from 21,000 physicians, is the enthusiastic testimony of the men and women in the forefront of human endeavor, statesmen, prelates, authors, lawyers, who have written above their own signatures of the wonderful benefits received from Sanatogen. That is why we ask you earnestly to get acquainted with Sanatogen.

Sanatogen is sold in three sizes, from $1.00 up.

Prof. C. A. Ewald, of Berlin University, Doctor honoris causa University of Maryland, states in his contribution on "Typhus abdominalis":

"I can say that I have used Sanatogen in a great number of cases (that is, in those disturbances of metabolism which were mainly of a nervous or neurasthenic origin) and have obtained excellent results."

Prof. Thomas B. Stillman, M.S., Ph.D., the well-known research chemist of Stevens Institute, writes:

"The chemical union of the constituents of Sanatogen is a true one, representative of the highest skill in the formation of a product containing phosphorus in the organic phosphate condition, and so combined that digestion and assimilation of Sanatogen are rendered complete with the greatest ease."

Prof. C. Von Noorden, of Vienna University, writes:

"Sanatogen is of especial value in various forms of anaemia and general debility. It is an excellent albuminous preparation."

Dr. Ernest Ott, Late King Edward's physician, Marienbad, writes:

"I have been using Sanatogen for a number of years in my practice with excellent results. These results have been notably good in the case of elderly people when it was desirable to build up the strength, to stimulate bodily functions, and to improve the circulation of the blood."

Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P., the eminent novelist-statesman, writes from London:

"Sanatogen is to my mind a true food-tonic, feeding the nerves, increasing the energy, and giving fresh vigor to the overworked body and mind."

AUSTRIA OFFERS MORE TO ITALY

GERMANS DISDAIN EX-ALLY

ROME, May 4.—The decision of King Victor Emmanuel and the members of the Ministry not to take part in the ceremony of the unveiling of the Garibaldi monument at Quarto Sant' Elena is being commented upon today as a step of very great significance.

The presence of his Majesty at the unveiling had come to be regarded as virtually tantamount to a declaration of war. Now the change in the King's plans is regarded as meaning that the participation of Italy in the European conflict again has been postponed. It should be borne in mind that the character of the celebration at Quarto Sant' Elena is eminently anti-Austrian. The presence of the King could only be considered by Austria as in the nature of an unfriendly act.

The hope is being entertained by the pacifists that the efforts of Italy to arrange a peaceful solution of her problems may ultimately be successful. It seems to be a fact that on Saturday Prince von Bülow, the German Ambassador to Italy, was able to announce further important concessions from Austria. At the same time he said he feared the presence of King Victor Emmanuel at Quarto Sant' Elena might bring about some incident that would render the rupture of negotiations inevitable. Consequently the Ministry decided, together with the King, not to go to Quarto Sant' Elena.

It would be an exaggeration to say that the participation of Italy in the war has been averted. Nevertheless it is the opinion of careful students of the situation that war today is not so near as it was on Saturday.

The press is unanimous in declaring the abandonment of the King's trip to Quarto has in no way altered the Government's decisions. It is recalled that when committees arranging for the dedication of the monument called upon his Majesty to invite him to be present at the ceremonies he answered: "I shall go if reasons of State do not prevent me."

An official of the Foreign Office is reported to have stated that the Government's decision was due entirely to the situation in Tripoli, where "Italy might be forced to extreme measures to protect our colony, where German agents are fomenting rebellion."

BERLIN, May 4, (via London.)—The newspapers of Berlin, which have been leaving the Italian situation severely alone, today make a number of comments on the Rome report that the Ministerial Council felt it necessary that no member of the Government should leave Rome. The Kreuz Zeitung says:

"The announcement at first makes an alarming impression, and, as a fact, the situation is critical. On the other side it is to be considered that the Garibaldi celebration will be held, with its presumably pro-intervention address of d'Annunzio, and that the decision of the council will keep the Ministers from attending it."

Count Ernest von Reventlow, in a double-leaded article in the Tageszeitung, asks, among other things, whether "the excited and fanatical population" will be able to estimate correctly the political meaning of the latest victory in Galicia. To his own question he replies: "We don't believe it." He declares that the decision of the leading Italian statesmen is of secondary interest, the main thing being that Germany and Austria-Hungary can await the decisions of their former allies, Italy and Rumania, with confidence. The article concludes:

"However, the Garibaldi celebration will show whether the King and the Government will attend or not, and whether the misled people of Italy and Rumania will trample on every consideration of statesmanship and military expediency. We and our Austro-Hungarian allies leave it to our former allies to enter the ranks of our opponents and attack us. They do it at their own reckoning and danger."

The Tageblatt says the announcement that no member of the Government is to leave Rome may be taken in different ways. It seems to speak for the importance of the political situation, as to which there is no doubt, but it may also mean that the Italian Government prefers not to send any member to the Garibaldi celebration.

BRITISH WOMEN RELEASED.

Allowed to Leave Belgium, Where They Had Been Detained.

ROZENDAAL, Netherlands, (via London,) May 4.—A large party of British women were today brought out of Belgium, where they had been detained since the beginning of hostilities. The American authorities in Belgium arranged for their departure and accompanied them to the frontier, where they were handed over to a member of the British Legation staff.

The party comprised 33 nuns and 45 other women and infants, besides 15 children under 16 years of age and an elderly man. All of them belong to the better classes.

They did not complain of the treatment they had received at the hands of the German authorities. They said the German soldiers were jubilant over the reported Russian reverse in the East and waved in the faces of the departing Britishers bulletins reporting the German victory.

'SPIRIT OF DOOM' HANGS OVER TURKS

Observer Feels It Despite Gigantic Preparations to Meet Attack of the Allies.

BULGARIA THE CHIEF FEAR

Dardanelles Expected to Hold Out Against Any Force of Less Than 300,000.

ALLIES MAKE NEW ADVANCE

British War Office Announces Defeat of All Attacks and Progress Into Interior of Peninsula.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CONSTANTINOPLE, via Bucharest, April 28 (Despatch to the London Daily Chronicle).—An observer in Constantinople cannot but be struck by the widespread unpopularity of the war. Against the Russians there is naturally a certain historical animus; toward the British there is at most indifference, but for the French there is a warm and sincere affection. The sympathies of the Greek portions of the population are openly for the Allies, while the Armenians express the same sentiments more cautiously.

But the most curious feature is the attitude of the Jews, who are in many ways the intellectuals. Ever since the revolution, Jewish influence has been enormous in Turkey, and it has been said their Zionist aims had seriously undermined the loyalty of the Arabs. Apparently, however, Enver Pasha has decided Arab support is worth a great deal more than that of the Jews, and various steps have been taken to force the Jews into a Turkish mould. Jewish disaffection is no slight matter, and it is more significant as Jewish influence had hitherto worked powerfully for Germany.

To these elements, Greek, Armenian, and Jewish, must be added the anti-Enver section of Young Turks led by the Heir Apparent. With this movement are associated many Turkish business men and minor officials, who have been hard hit by the war. It is no exaggeration to say that barely 5 per cent. of the population of the empire is enthusiastic for the war, while over 50 per cent. are frankly or covertly hostile.

But it would be a great miscalculation to reckon on this as an immediate factor. Hostility to the war is purely passive. The only domestic event which might lead to Turkey's climbing down is the removal of Enver Pasha. The terror of this decoratively dominating figure causes criticism to sink to timid whispers in secluded corners. Even neutrals have their life made unbearable by a plague of spies and agents provocateurs, though I personally met with nothing but courtesy from Turkish officials.

German Influence Grows.

Every day tightens the German grip on Turkey. All circumstantial stories of von der Goltz proposing a separate peace at the war council are idle chatter. Germany holds grimly on to Turkey both for her own sake and as a lever to separate Great Britain and Russia. The Government is preparing for every eventuality. Eski Shehir has been chosen as the new capital if Constantinople falls. I have visited this town in the swampy upland valley high among hills in the heart of Asia Minor, 80 miles from the Bosporous on the Anatolean Railway. It occupies an excellent strategic position.

I found work feverishly proceeding to improve the streets and sanitary conditions. Over 200 houses have been commandeered for official use, and thither the families of high officials were sent in February and still remain there, owing to the dread of a Bulgarian attack on Constantinople.

The Turkish Ministry of War places the total figure of men under the colors at 1,322,000, but probably this is an overstatement. I should estimate the actual number at 900,000, including 200,000 Christians, who are being used for building trenches, railways, roads, and bridges. The rest are divided into five armies:

The first, commanded by Field Marshal von der Goltz, about 100,000 strong, is encamped at the Adrianople-Tchataldja lines and Constantinople. The second, with 150,000, under Djemal Pasha, threatens Egypt, while the third, 50,000 strong, operates from Bagdad. The fourth, about 18,000, is the Caucasus army. The fifth, under General Von Sanders, composed of picked drafts, consists of about 70,000 at the Dardanelles, with 35,000 at Smyrna. The headquarters are at Gallipoli. In addition there is a detached force of 20,000 at the disposal of Admiral Suchon for the defense of the Bosphorus.

New batches of reservists are arriving daily at the depots, but arms and uniforms are insufficient or inefficient for future formations. It is noticeable many redif infantrymen wear a bandolier of soft-nosed bullets quite openly. The question of ammunition despite official assurances is causing anxiety. The order was issued last week commanding the coast artillery to enjoin strict economy of fire, but as large quantities are still available there is no immediate shortage.

Around Constantinople are first-class troops splendidly equipped and trained. The capital is surrounded with a ring, admirably devised, of entrenchments of a stiff resistance. A battery has been placed in position below St. Siphia, and the idea is that the Allies will hesitate to answer its fire for fear of damaging the church. The fear is prevalent and seemingly it is not unfounded that extremists may, if the occasion arises, attempt a repetition of the evacuation of Moscow.

Dardanelles Preparation.

The Dardanelles have been further strengthened. Since March obstacles have been placed in the way of submarine navigation, and the whole British Navy could not force the straits in their present condition by a simple naval action.

It is the current opinion here that landing less than 300,000 men offers little chance of success, and the Turks are confident the Allies have no such force available. Their nervousness is due solely to fear of Bulgarian co-operation with the Allies. Fort Hamilieh only is manned mostly by Germans; the others are garrisoned by Turkish officers and men with a sprinkling of Germans.

The campaign in the Caucasus is almost at a standstill owing to typhus. On the average, 150 men succumb daily, and vigorous measures have been taken to counteract the epidemic, which is raging under indescribibly awful conditions. Every available doctor is being sent, and three of them have already died. The commander is contemplating in consequence withdrawing into the fortified region of Erzerum, there to await the advance of the Russians through the infected region.

Meanwhile the Egyptian expedition is more and more absorbing the energies and hopes of the Turks. No doubt the next attempt in about two months' time will be of a much more formidable character than the last. A light gauge railway is being constructed branching off the Hedjas line, northeast of Akaba, and will be finished six weeks from now. Howitzers have been sent with German gunners for transport over this line.

I made a careful inquiry into the relations of Turks and Germans in the army. There has been some friction between German and Turkish officers due to Teutonic tactlessness, but the rank and file do not resent anything. Under the stern compulsion of his new taskmasters, the Turk is acquiring a magnificent machine-like efficiency. It would be foolish to belittle the admirable work done by the Germans in Turkey or underestimate the resultant vitality in resources and strength of the Ottoman Empire.

Yet it is true that iver this land a stranger feels hovering a spirit of doom. The Turks and Germans are tangoing to ruin. The dance will be a short one if the Allies give proper guarantees to Bulgaria. The key to the Dardanelles is in Sofia.

LAND ATTACK ON SMYRNA.

ATHENS, May 4, (via London.)—The bombardment of the Turkish forts on the Gulf of Smyrna has been resumed, according to messages reaching here from Mitylene, and the warships of the Allies continue their lively shelling of the forts on the Dardanelles.

LONDON, May 4.—In a dispatch from Athens received by the Exchange Telegraph Company the declaration is made that the Vali of Smyrna has entered into fresh negotiations with the Allies for the surrender of the town.

Warships of the Allies bombarded the Turkish port of Smyrna, on the eastern shores of the Aegean Sea, and south of the entrance to the Dardanelles, in the early part of March. These activities were repeated again on the 13th and 14th of March, and on March 15 dispatches were received saying that the city had been badly damaged. The place was attacked again on the 5th of April, and again on the 27th.

It has been related that after the engagement of May 15 the British Admiral opened negotiations with the Vali, or Governor, of Smyrna for the surrender of the city, but this proposal was rejected by the Governor. It was said at this time that the Vali followed these negotiations by threatening to massacre the foreign residents of the city.

ALLIES PENETRATE WELL INTO GALLIPOLI

All Turkish Attacks Repulsed With Heavy Losses, British Officials Announce.

LONDON, May 4.—The rumors concerning theoperations against the Dardanelles were confirmed tonight when the British War Office and Admiralty issued reports stating that after beating off Turkish attacks the Allied forces had taken the offensive on the Gallipoli Peninsula and now were advancing into the interior.

The Turks, on their side, continue to report the defeat of landing parties and damage done to Allied warships, which are keeping upa lively bombardment of the Turkish forts, both in the Dardanelles Straits and at Smyrna. It was reported today that the Vali of Smyrna was negotiating with the Allies for the surrender of his territory. No confirmation of this report has been received.

During the night of the 1st-2d of May and the night of the 2d-3d the enemy launched strong and determined attacks in mass against our positions, constantly bringing up fresh troops.

Not only did the Allies repulse every attack, inflicting enormous losses on the enemy, but we assumed the offensive, drove the enemy out of their positions and are now advancing into the interior of the Peninsula.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 4, (via London.)—The following statement was issued today at the War Office here:

In order to increase the limited extent of ground he held near Avburnu, the enemy yesterday attempted a new advance on his left wing, but as a consequence of the counter-attacks he was in the first place driven back with heavy losses into very rocky valleys, and afterward repulsed to the coast.

In the meantime our artillery caused a fire on board one of the transports, after which other transports quickly retired.

The British warship Agamemnon, which attempted to shell Bulair, was struck yesterday by four shells and oblized to retire, being no longer able to fire.

In an engagement between our gendarmes and seven armed sailors who landed with officers from a submarine on the uninhabited island of Biarat, in the Aegean Sea, the latter were killed.

TELLS OF SERBIAN MISERY.

Soldiers and Prisoners Dying in Great Numbers, Says Missionary.

A letter in which the suffering in Serbia is indicated was made public yesterday by the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. The letter was from the Rev. Dr. William P. Clarke, head of the educational and evangelistic work of the board at Monastir. The letter, in part, read:

What is nearest to us these weeks is the great amount of sickness among the soldiers (wounded and others) and among the prisoners of war. Forty or more a day is the number of deaths. One day last week forty soldiers and thirty of the prisoners died. Hamals carrying two or three coffins are often to be met on the streets.

Within a week five doctors have died, most of them of typhus, a comparatively new disease here. It was brought here first, I believe, by the Turkish soldiers, and one of our best doctors died of it. I hear that the death roll in Nish is between 200 and 300 daily.

BRITISH LEARNING THE GERMANS' GAME

"Eyewitness" Says They Are Even Beating Them at It, Being Now Well Equipped.

CONFIDENCE VERY STRONG

Neuve Chapelle Fight Not Only Helped Army's Spirits, but Also Cut Sick Rate.

LONDON, April 20, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The British Army in France has increased immensely in numbers and perfection of equipment, according to a general review of the situation, written by the "eyewitness" attached to headquarters in France.

After telling of unimportant operations which followed those described in a previous report, the "Eyewitness" says:

"Though we have by no means been inactive, as the fighting on the 17th and 18th shows, comparative quiet has now prevailed along our front for a considerable period, and the moment is, therefore, opportune for a survey of our general condition.

"First, as regards the material side of the situation, it is a matter of common knowledge that our army in France has increased immensely in numbers and perfection of equipment and armament. The fruits of this improvement are now beginning to be seen.

"The reports from all parts show that we are now generally in no way inferior and in many places superior to the enemy in the very form of warfare for which we were originally least prepared, tha tis, in siege operations, which imply mining, sharpshooting, and the throwing of explosives at short range. In this the Germans have until recently enjoyed a great advantage, for they had ready to hand the necessary troops, such as numerous units trained in mining, the handling of high explosives, and searchlight work, and special bodies of sharpshooters, provided with rifles having telescopic sights.

"They had ready, also, all the technical equipment, such as Minenwerfer and various ballistic engines, throwing every kind of missile, electric and other light projectors, rockets, flares, incendiary shell and pumps for spurting blazing oil or pitch, which were the outcome of careful and elaborate experiments, made in peace in anticipation of the war for which they have for years been making ready. Means of disseminating poisonous gases are apparently an afterthought improvised since the commencement of hostilities.

"But even with the aid of these advantages, they have failed to crush the Allies; and the great factor of time has been on the side of the latter. This applies especially to us, and in spite of our initial handicaps, we are now in many ways beating the Germans at their own game.

"At some points we have obtained the mastery in sniping to such an extent that our men are able to walk about outside their trenches in comparative safety even within short range of the hostile line; and generally we are now in a position to harass the Germans and give them as little rest as possible by means of shelling, bomb throwing or sniping.

Growing Feeling of Strength.

"As regards the moral side, a consciousness of the general increase in power, and the feeling that we are growing stronger every day, while the Germans are becoming less strong, is the chief factor responsible for the undoubtedly excellent state of the spirit of our forces, which is even better than it has ever been.

"The outcome of the fight at Neuve Chapelle again, as has been pointed out, had a most encouraging effect on the troops, who are inspired by confidence as to the accomplishment of the task ahead of us, however formidable it may be. The beneficial influence of this offensive action, indeed, has been shown indirectly by a fact which would at first sight seem to be totally unconnected with it—an immediate and marked drop in the sick rate took place after the battle, which is only attributable to the success gained.

"Among other things contributing to the general cheerfulness, also, is the good news which is continually received of the progress of our allies and the improvement in the weather. The cumulative effect of all this has been to inspire our men with a sense of superiority over the enemy. They are now animated with only one desire—to get on.

"There are also minor and less obvious factors, beyond the general sense of growing strength and the consciousness of efficiency, derived from small local successes, which have assisted toward building up the condition of a 'healthy mind in a healthy body' which is so marked in the British troops at the present stage of the campaign. Every advantage has been taken of advantitious aids to counteract the depressing influence of the monotony and hardship of the trench warfare through the long-drawn Winter and to ameliorate the results of the continuous strain to which all ranks have been subjected.

Recreation for Troops.

"Of these perhaps the provision of the bathing establishments and rest depots already described has been the most important. But the immense value of any sort of entertainment, which can change the current of thought and divert the man's mind even temporarily roundings has played an important part.

"To this end concerts, cinematograph shows, variety entertainments, boxing and football matches have been organized wherever circumstances have allowed. The psychological value of music to which allusion has already been made, is no new thing. Its effects can at present be witnessed at some of the villages behind our front line, where regimental bands perform, to the delight of the inhabitants, as well as of the soldiers, and also on the roads, where the pipes of certain Scotch Territorial units, the penny whistle and the mouth organ instil fresh life into tired legs. Some thousands of the whistles and mouth organs now have reached the front and been distributed.

"An account has already been given of the British front, showing how the various localities differ; but stronger and perhaps more interesting contrasts are presented by the area to the north of us, near the coast.

"This country is of three different kinds. There is the district immediately north of Ypres, then the inundated region extending to Nieuport, and finally the belt of sand dunes close to the sea. The flooded area varies in width, but is in general 2½ to 3 miles across, except in the neighborhood of Dixmude, now held by the Germans.

"South of it the Belgian line runs along the canalized portion of the river; to the north it follows the line of the railway to Nieuport.

Belgians Still Unvanquished.

"When the story of the past few months is recalled and the actual situation of the Belgian Nation is borne in mind, the aspect of this part of the line is strangely impressive. Here, in its entrenchments looking out over the country, once the richest soil in Flanders, but now willingly surrendered to the sea, is the Belgian Army, still unvanquished after eight months of war. Behind it stretches only a narrow strip, some ten miles in extent, of Belgian soil left to defend, and even in that strip there are few villages or towns which have escaped the enemy's fire.

"A visitor, approaching the Belgian trenches from the west, passes through one battered village after another and sees here and there among the ruins a few women and children still clinging to what is left of their homes.

"In front of the lines is a waste of water, melting into the sky, and the further bank is obscured by mist. The gray expanse is here and there intersected by a road running for some distance on an embankment, and broken by a few trees and hedgerows or the remains of a farm rising up out of the flood, on which islands the advanced posts of each side are established. The corpses of long-dead German soldiers and the swollen carasses of cattle and sheep with legs sticking stiffly in the air drift aimlessly about, while large flocks of wild fowl give the one visible touch of life to the desolate scene.

"The rifle shots ringing out from the front, the occasional reports of distant guns, and the noise of the shells rumbling overhead and bursting with a dull thud far behind accentuate the prevailing silence.

"Nothing could present a stronger contrast to this comparative inaction than the nature of the fighting in progress along the sand dunes farther to the north. Here a desperate struggle at short range continues from day to day, the opposing trenches being situated within a few yards of one another. Here, instead of mud and water, the troops have to endure the wind, which blows the sand dust in stinging clouds so trying to the eyes as to necesitate the wearing of motor goggles. Under the restless, drifting sand, the configuration of the landscape is continually altering, fresh dunes being formed at one point, while they melt away at another. Perhaps the best description of this area of soft-looking shapdess white mounds is that given by a French oficer who compared it to a land of whipped cream."

GERMANS REPORT NAVAL FIGHT

Sank Two British Ships and Lost Two, It Is Admitted.

BERLIN, May 4, (by Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—The German Admiralty has issued an announcement setting forth that on May 1, at noon, a German submarine sunk the British torpedo boat destroyer Recruit in the nighborhood of the Galloper Lightship.

On the same day near th North Hinder Lightship there was an ngagement between two German patrol boats and several armed English steam trawlers. One trawler was destroyed. A division of British destroyers thereupon entered the action, and the German patrol boats were lost. The British Admiralty declares that a majority of th crew was saved.

BRITISH MAY EMPLOY GAS IN RETALIATION

Official Tells Parliament the Use of "Similar Experients" Is Being Considered.

FRENCH TELLS OF EFFECTS

Where Gas Does Not Kill It May Make Victims Life Invalids—Sure Germans Will Continue Use.

LONDON, May 4.—Speaking in the House of Commons this afternon, H. J. Tennant, Parliamentary Secretary of the War Office, said that Great Britain had under consideration the question of "employing similar expedients" to offet the use by German troops of asphyxiating gases.

The speaker admitted that as far back as April 6 the officer who is writing from the British front under the pen name of "Eyewitness," had said that the Germans were preparing for this method of attack, but notwithstanding such rumors the British authorities found it hard to believe that any signatory of The Hague convention would violate its fundamental principles and adopt methods which might have such a far-reaching effect in modern warfare.

A report on the use of asphyxiating gases by the Germans, from Sir John French, Commander of the British Expeditionary Force on the Continent, was given out today. It read:

"The gases, employed by the Germans, have been ejected from pipes laid inta trenches. Gases have been produced also by the explosion of sheils, especially manufactured for this purpose. German troops, who attacked under cover of these gases, were provided with especially designed respirators, which were issued in sealed packages to all points on the line. This shows methodical preparation on a large scale.

Germans Accused British.

"A week before the Germans first used this method they announced in their reports that we were making use of asphyxiating bases. At that time there appeared to be no reason for this astounding falsehood. Now it is obvious that it was part of a scheme, and it is further proof of the deliberate nature of the introduction by the Germans of this new and illegal weapon. It shows that they recognized its illegality, and that they were anxious to forestall neutral and possibly domestic criticisms.

"Since the enemy first made use of this method of covering his advance with a cloud of poisoner air, he has repeated it both in offense and defense, whenever the wind has been favorable.

"The effect of this poison is not merely disabling or painlessly fatal, as has been suggested in the German press. Those victims who do not succumb on the field and can be brought into hospitals, suffer acutely and a large proportion of the cases die a painful and lingering death. Those who survive are in little better shap, as the injury to their lungs appears to be of a permanent character and reduces them to a condition which points to their being invalids for life. These effects must have benn well known to the German scientists who devised this new weapon, and to the military authorities who sanctioned its use.

Thinks Protests Useless.

"I am of the opinion that the enemy has definitely decided to use these gases as a normal procedure, and that protests will be useless."

FRENCH TO USE GAS TO COMBAT GERMANS

New Bomb Releases Fumes That Cause a Violent Smarting of Eyes and Nose.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY, CHALONS-SUR-MARNE, May 1, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—The Germans succeeded a few days ago in scoring to a certain extent by the use of asphyxiating bombs. The French have not been long in finding a reply to these weapons.

If the Germans mean to use poisonous gases in warfare, the French are ready to retaliiate with a weapon which should prove very effective, though it in no way contravenes the rules accepted by civilized nations. This consists of a hand grenade filled wiht certain chamicals, which, when released, produce a gas that has no deadly effects, but is powerful enough to paralyze a man for several minutes.

As an experiment two of these grenades were thrown into a narrow lane between two walls that might fairly be taken to represent a trench. When the gases had been released a company of infantry were ordered to advance up the lane. When the first ranks came within the zone of the fumes they stopped suddenly and beat a hasty retreat, fighting their way through the men behind them, absolutely blinded by the tears running down their cheeks. The smell of the fumes is not unpleasant. It produces such a violent smarting of the eyes and nose that it would be hopeless to try and use a weapon while under its influence.

These bombs have not yet been used and will only be employed if the Germans make any further asphyxiating gas.

Besides the newly invented gas bombs the French have various forms of bombs and bomb throwers for use in trenches.

CAN'T GET AID TO POLES.

Travelers from Warsaw Say Conditions in War Area Are Desperate.

Stanslas B. Meyer and Jean de Drozlovski of Warsaw, who arrived yesterday on the Transylvania, accompanied by their wives, say that conditions in that part of Poland which has been swept over by the German and Russian armies are desperate.

"It has been impossible to send aid into the suffering districts from Warsaw," said Mr. Meyer at the Waldorf yesterday, "and on the other hand, it has been equally impossible to get aid in through Germany. The armies hold all approaches from either directions, and the roads have been kept for purely military puposes.

"It has been shown that during the Winter the greatest suffering has come from the lack of coal. I do not believe it will be possible to get aid to the sufferers unless Americans undertake the task of distribution. There is no work going on, factories have had to shut down, and no words could exaggerate the situation of the unfortunate people."

Mr. Meyer said that he and Mr. Drozlovski had come over on private business, and expected to remain about six weeks.

Won't Nominate Casement.

DUBLIN, May 4.—Investigation shows that there is no foundation for the report that the Sinn Fein Party might nominate Sir Roger Casement for the seat in Parliament made vacant by the death of Joseph Patrick Nannetti, member for the College Green Division of Dublin.

The miracle of digestion

Digestion is the mysterious process by which food-stuffs are changed into blood, and then into living tissues—from which follow vitality, good health, efficiency. Poor digestion results in auto-intoxication, which in turn causes ill health, and the loss of much that makes life worth living. Auto-intoxication is caused by harmful fermentation in the lower digestive tract produced by poisonous bacteria thriving there.

The research work of the famous scientists of the Institute Pasteur, Paris, has determined beyond doubt that the elimination of these harmful microbes by the ingredients contained in tends to accomplish a return of youthful vitality, the avoidance of nervous disorders, liver and stomach troubles and exemption from premature senility, constant ill health and the petty ailments of advancing years. Intesti-Fermin Tablets offer in palatable and scientific form a high concentration of the active principle which has been scientifically proven largely responsible for the extreme age attained by the Bulgarians—frequently 125 years.

They contain a double culture of the Bacillus Bulgaricus and the sustaining element Glyco-Bakter—the Bacilli of Long Life—and if persistently taken, will purify the whole system and remove the cause of inorganic ill health, add zest to your life and efficiency to your work. Broadway Saks & Company 34th Street

It has required the intensive application of many studious years to make

Saks Clothing for Men

what it is today—the foremost men's ready-for-wear apparel in the City.

Saks' Clothing for men is an evolution, the influence of which is City-wide. It required long years to perfect a business machine such as the Saks Tailoring Organization. The result, however, was worth the effort, for now,

A man has only to decide what he will pay for a Suit; come to Saks and wear one away, which, in every point of style, quality, and tailoring, gives complete satisfaction and is to the tiniest detail correct.

The correctness of a Saks Suit does not depend upon its price. No matter which of the several standard prices you pay, correctness of style is assured. Higher prices command more costly and finer fabric, linings and trimmings, but the style is always authentic, reflecting the smartest creations of the best designers.

Saks Suits at $17.50 to $45.00

are produced by the Saks Tailoring Organization, which has the distinction of being unexcelled in this country. Every detail is under our direct supervision, from the smallest purchase of material or trimming, to the designing, cutting, trimming and finishing.

The Saks label in a Suit is the hall-mark of supreme excellence, the assurance of satisfaction, the guarantee of quality and the warrant of correctness.

WHAT WILL IT COST TO VISIT THE PANAMA EXPOSITIONS?

This is the question which is interesting many people as the annual vacation season approaches. There are doubtless thousands of persons in New York and elsewhere, both men and women, who desire to visit the Expositions at San Francisco and San Diego and see something of the scenic beauties en route to and from California, and whose time and money are limited.

The cost of a Rock Island Circle Scenic Tour may not be large. For a surprisingly small sum one can make the trip in fifteen days, going first class all the way with fairly liberal allowance for side trips to points of interest, admission to the Expositions, etc.

You have the choice of several famous trains, including the "Golden State Limited," "Rocky Mountain Limited," "Californian," Colorado-California Express." Automatic block signals. Finest modern all-steel equipment. Superb dining car service.

Our representatives are travel experts. They will be glad to furnish you with authentic literature from which you can readily estimate the cost of a trip. GERMAN TRADE FINDS LUEBECK AN OUTLET

WAR TRANSFORMS CITY

LUEBECK, Germany, April 20, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—From a city of relatively small importance on the Baltic Sea, Luebeck has become almost as if by magic one of the empire's chief ports, through which supplies by the ton are entering Germany.

He who believes Germany is suffering from a lack of food would be interested in a visit to Luebeck, and in the sight of dozens of ships that lie at anchor along its narrow harbor, discharging tremendous cargoes.

Luebeck, one of the three "Hansa cities," has frequently suffered from jealousy of the other two—Hamburg and Bremen—ports through which so much trade has entered that that of Luebeck was dwarfed. The old-time jealousy is now forgotten, for, while shipping in Hamburg and Bremen is at a standstill, it never in history was so brisk in Luebeck, and business in the city never was so good as now. With Stettin it shares the reputation of being the busiest city in Germany.

Germany's export trade is popularly supposed to be dead at present. That, however, is an illusion that would be shattered by a visit to Luebeck, or that could be shattered by American business firms should they see fit to admit that they are still importing chemicals and other necessities from Germany.

Beef forms a large part of the import trade in Luebeck. In lesser quantity, but perhaps of more importance, is the grain that filters in.

Luebeck lies back from the ocean on the Trave. This stream, however, has been dredged to a depth of about twenty-five feet, and admits vessels of large capacity. The Trave today is full of ships which are unloaded with all possible haste to enable them to go out and make room for others.

The city's largest commercial enterprise is a machine shop where ordinarily only dredges, boilers, and ship machinery are made. They are all manufactured now, but in addition there are being made in quantity, the "goulasch kanonen," as the German's field kitchens are called.

Ammunition, too, is being manufactured, or at least the outer casings of the five-inch shells, which are sent to another city to be filled with explosive. The sight of these partly completed is now common in every factory in Germany equipped with the requisite machinery for their manufacture.

There is a popular impression that there exists a shortage of tin in Germany—or that it did exist until very recently. There is no evidence of it, however, at Luebeck's big factory, where cans are made from sardines to shoe blacking are being turned out by the thousand. Not only do those in charge of the factory assert that work is proceeding on full time, but the shops have that appearance, with every machine running. A few of the machines, however, are making the inevitable ammunition.

One gets just an inkling of the fact that German trade with America is not entirely dead by watching the output of one big stamping machine. In this machine the plates of tin are stamped with the words and trade marks they are to bear when finally made into boxes. And one machine is busy turning out tin bearing English words. The manufacturers admit that nothing is going to England.

From great scows, some of which have come through the canal from the Elbe River and Hamburg, there are loaded on Norwegian and Swedish steamships cargoes of chemicals.

On arriving in Luebeck the first native one meets asks if there are any indications that Germany is being starved out, and then leads the way to the great refrigeration plant that is one of the show places of the city. In it is stored, at the present time, enough beef, mutton, lamb, and other meats to supply Luebeck for five or six months.

Approximately the same quantity that is put in storage each week is taken out and forwarded to the armies at the front. The building is filled nearly to capacity and the incoming supply has to be regulated by the amount taken out.

Luebeck lies on one of the few bodies of water where ships of Germany's enemies cannot interfere with commerce, and the neutral nations to the northward are taking advantage of the fact. Both by rail and by water the city is connected with the heart of Germany. To how great an extent the rest of the country is using Luebeck is shown by cars from Saxony and southern Germany in the Luebeck railroad yards.

Luebeck and Stettin have become the channels through which the supplies are imported that have ceased to reach Bremen and Hamburg. The harbors of both Hamburg and Luebeck are choked with shipping—but in the latter the ships fly foreign flags, and are coming and going all the time.

PUNISH DANISH SMUGGLERS.

Imprisonment for Captains in Copper Shipping Plot.

LONDON, May 4.—Reuter's correspondent at Copenhagen telegraphs that an attempt to smuggle a shipload of copper into Germany from Denmark has been discovered by the police. The dispatch says that the attempt was made by two Danish skippers, brothers named Christensen, who were sentenced to imprisonment of three years each in the House of Correction and the cancellation of their skippers' certificates.

AMSTERDAM, Holland, April 23, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The Dutch Government has refused to allow potatoes, copper and other articles much needed in Germany to be employed in payment for German manufactured products.

Holland some time ago reached an agreement with Great Britain in the matter of contraband, by which all articles were permitted to enter Holland freely on the assurance of the Dutch Government that their export to Germany would be prohibited.

When Germany first decided to conserve its copper, an order was published that an equivalent in weight for all copper used should be exported to Germany in the case of machinery exported. Most of Holland's steam, gas and electric engines and machinery are made in Germany, so this arrangement would have enabled German machine works to fulfil foreign orders without diminishing the national supply of copper.

This order was hardly cold, however, before Germany demanded that the full value of the manufactured article should be paid in any material that the German Government should specify at the market rate of the country from which it came. If a piece of machinery exported from Germany contained two tons of copper, it might have to be paid for by fifty tons of copper, or a clear addition of forty-eight tons to Germany's copper supply. Moreover, the raw material had to be paid for in advance, so that the German manufacturer could well afford to break his contract and sell the copper to the Government at a profit and then write an apologetic letter to the Dutch buyer, explaining that the copper had been commandeered, and offering to reimburse him at the current price of copper in Holland.

Recently, a Dutch shipbuilding firm was notified by a German firm that if certain steel plates were to be delivered, they would have to be paid for in advance by a specified number of tons of potatoes. This the firm could not agree to carry out, so the plates were not delivered.

German factories are so busy with Government orders that outside contracts would hardly be worth attending to unless as a means to bring in raw materials. In high grade optical instruments, including field glasses and periscopes, Germany holds almost the monopoly. If these were paid for in copper and food, the shortage would be easily made up.

HELMET TO STOP SHRAPNEL.

Proposed Headpiece for French Weighs 28 Ounces.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

NORTH OF FRANCE, May 4, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—It has been noticed for some time that the French soldier's kepi did not protect him from small splinters of shrapnel. A conservative spirit has so far prevented those in authority from changing anything in the historic headpiece.

In this war, however, sentiment must give way to utility, and an effort has been made to find a suitable helmet. One just proposed to the military authorities is made all in one piece, so as to protect the head, back of the neck and temples. The whole thing weighs 800 grammes, (about 28 ounces,) which seems at first sight much too heavy.

PRISONERS TREATED WELL BY GERMANY

CONDITIONS FOR RELEASE

Will Be Treated Like Ordinary Prisoners When Submarine Crews Are So Treated by England.

LONDON, May 4.—A British official announcement issued today says Germany is arranging, through the American Ambassador, to accord exactly similar treatment to the British officers who have been especially confined in Germany as that given by Great Britain to German submarine prisoners.

W. H. Page, the American Ambassador here, today communicated to the Foreign Office a telegram from James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador in Berlin, on the treatment of British officers under arrest in Germany as a reprisal measure for the treatment of German submarine prisoners by Great Britain, the text of which is as follows:

"Pursuant to the general arrangement regarding the visiting of prisoners which is still in force here, I personally visited each of the thirty-nine officers. I arrived at Burg and Magdeburg April 27. Each officer is in a clean cell and is allowed baths, books, and packages. They are permitted to smoke, and have one hour of exercise in the morning and another hour of exercise in the evening in the prison yard. During these exercises they can talk together. Their food is good. They have no complaints to make except that they are so arrested. The German Government will follow exactly the treatment given its submarines crews. These officers will again be treated like ordinary prisoners of war the instant I report that the submarine crews are so treated in England.

"The treatment accorded these officers now is that usual for German officers in arrest, and it is given pending a definite report on the treatment of the submarine crews in England."

Ambassador Page inclosed to the Foreign Office with the above a report made by E. G. Lowry of the American Embassy in London, who visited the German submarine prisoners last Saturday. Mr. Lowry confirms the statement made in the House of Commons last week by T. J. Macnamara, Parliamentary Secretary of the Admiralty, that the only difference between the treatment of these men and that accorded other prisoners is that they are separated. He adds that the only complaint of the German submarine officers is that they are being held in detention barracks instead of in officers' camps.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—The State Department has received only a brief summary of the report on the condition of German submarine officers and crews prisoners in England. A full report was transmitted directly by Ambassador Page to Ambassador Gerard for presentation to the German Foreign Office, a copy also being sent by mail to Washington.

In line with its policy of keeping secret the correspondence between the belligerents for which the United States acts as an intermediary, officials here would not comment on the report; but it was understood that the investigator concluded that the German prisoners were not being mistreated.

THANKS OF THE KAISERIN.

Grateful to American Red Cross for Aid to Germany.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—The German Empress has expressed her appreciation of the American Red Cross work in behalf of Germany through Count von Bernstorff, German Ambassador, who today said in a letter to Miss Mabel T. Boardman, at Red Cross headquarters here:

"I have been commanded by her Majesty the Empress, and have the honor to convey to you and to the American Red Cross Society, her Majesty's most heartfelt thanks for your continued and generous activity in forwarding charitable gifts to Germany and for the services rendered by the American delegation of five doctors and twenty-two nurses, who are doing splendid work in Silesia."

QUALITY AND SPEED

The great feature of Thompson-Starrett service consists in the fact that it reconciles two elements which, in less efficient hands, would be inimical to each other—Quality and Speed.

We have proven to the satisfaction of the entire building industry, as well as to the most important property owners of this country, that we can build quickly and well at the same time, and that quality need not be a tortoise, but can also develop the speed of the hare.

The Roosevelt counsel jumped into the printing evidence when court opened this morning. William Lyon, Secretary of the J. B. Lyon Company, was put through an examination by Stewart F. Hancock regarding the missing minute records of the Lyon Company—the minutes from 1902 to 1905. Mr. Lyon could not tell what had happened to the book for those years, but he admitted that there was no record of stockholders' or Directors' meeting during that period.

Charles M. Winchester recalled produced the cost book of the Lyon concern. Mr. Bowers had hard work to make head or tail out of it, and tried to pin the witness down as to the cost of various pieces of printing. One of these was a work on the devastation by insects of park and woodland trees, printed in 1907. Mr. Winchester said the cost sheets were at his hotel, and he was told to get them.

Lyon Methods Disclosed.

Fred C. Foster, Secretary of the State Printing Board, recalled, was asked about the contracts awarded to the J. B. Lyon Company for legislative printing when that company's bid was not the lowest. Mr. Hancock offered the recapitulation of bids for legislative printing in June, 1909, when the contract was awarded to the low bidder, Oliver A. Quayle. The witness, once in the employ of Quayle, testified that there was no printing plant in Quayle's establishment in Albany.

Mr. Hancock offered in evidence an assignment of the 1909 contract from Quayle to the J. B. Lyon Company. Charles M. Winchester had power of attorney to act for Quayle in the matter.

"Was ever any order entered in the minutes of the State Printing Board approving such transfer?" Mr. Hancock asked. Mr. Foster couldn't find any in the books.

Mr. Hancock offered in evidence various assignments of contracts from the successful bidder on State printing to The Argus Company or the J. B. Lyon Company. Mr. Foster said he had in his custody official records showing the amounts approved for payment for departmental printing from 1899 down to the present. Mr. Hancock read amounts approved by the board for the time from June 1, 1899, to Oct. 1, 1914. The figures aggregated $7,832,083.32. In each of these years the J. B. Lyon Company got the contract for legislative and departmental printing, either through original bid or assignment.

Edward T. Platt, recalled, said he had had brought with him 134 letters that had passed between Mr. Barnes and his father from 1890 to 1910. Mr. Platt said that a great part of his father's correspondence had been destroyed and that some of the missing letters might have borne upon State printing matters. Mr. Bowers asked that the jury be directed to pay special attention to that fact. William H. Van Benschoten then read the letters to the jury.

The first letter Mr. Van Benschoten read was the one from Barnes to Platt in 1899, in which Barnes made a plea for more printing and accused Quigg of being insolent and working against him. The McCarthy referred to in the letter was the proprietor of The Albany Press and Knickerbocker, who was getting the printing that Barnes wanted. This is the letter:

Nantucket, Mass., July 14, 1899.

Dear Senator: Today I received the inclosed characteristically insolent and insufferable dispatch from Mr. Quigg.

Mr. McCarthy, hwo is the bidder of record, backed by Mr. Quigg, is an inParty and the Republican organization. He daily assails you generally and me specifically. The acceptance of his bid means a fierce local fight for me, in which I am incined to believe Mr. Quigg woud not hesitate to join.

For six years men assumed to be friendly to you have systematically prevented me from getting anything in the printing line in Albany. I beg to submit the records of Mr. Dady and Mr. Quigg in comparison with my own and let my case rest with your recollection of the past.

I am sincerely yours.
WILLIAM BARNES, Jr.

Senator Platt replied that he had communicated with Quigg and said that he believed Barnes's attack on him was unjustifiable. He wrote:

July 25, 1899.

My Dear Barnes: I recently received from you a letter regarding the State printing contract in which you bitterly criticised and denounced Mr. Quigg, and referred to a telegram from him which you failed to inclose, and I, of course, have not seen that document. But I considered this matter of so much consequence that, as soon as possible, I had a personal interview with Mr. Quigg and referred your letter to him. Yesterday I received an explanatory letter from Mr. Quigg, a copy of which I inclose.

It would seem to me that your strictures were not well founded, if Mr. Quigg's statements of facts is true, and that your letter was unjustifiable. I sincerely hope that this matter can be adjusted without appeal to the courts, and it is for that reason that I interfered when I last saw you and asked you to call on Mr. Quigg. Yours truly,

Mr. Barnes sent this answer, in which he complained again of not being able to get printing contracts:

Balked on Printng Contracts.

Dear Senator: I am in receipt of your letter of the 25th, with inclosure.

The dispatch sent me by Mr. Quigg, which I intended to incluse in my letter to you, was sent to the Attorney General by mistake, to whom I wrote at the same time I wrote you. It stated that you desired me to get Mr. Brandow to withdraw his legal proceedings against the State Board, which awarded the extra printing contract to John A. McCarthy, the proprietor of The Albany Press and Knickerbocker, an independent which has been for years personally abusive to me. I wrote you because I did not believe that you desired me to interfere with Mr. Brandow in the interest of an open and avowed enemy. I called Mr. Quigg's proposition because he suggested that I do so.

Now, as to Mr. Quigg's letter to you: First, he erred when he said I did not communicate with the Controller or Attorney General. I was in almost daily conference with Mr. Dady and tried several times to seek Colonel Morgan, but failed.

Sscondly, he refers to Mr. Dady as the practical owner of the McCarthy bid. This does not appear, and I am quite sure that unless Mr. McCarthy has given a written agreement Mr. Dady will be out. I have no quarrel with Mr. Dady, and am willing to take his contract, if he has one, off his hands at the price agreed upon between Mr. McCarthy and James B. Lyon.

What I don't want is the establishment of another printing plant in Albany. Already the business has been practically ruined by overcompetition, and I can see in the proposal to set up another establishment the beginning of a warfare which I do not court, but which I am ready to meet.

I am sorry that you referred my letter to Mr. Quigg, because it was hardly necessary to give him proof that I was aware of his antagonistic feeling toward me. It places me at a distinct disadvantage. In the future I beg that what I may say regarding Mr. Quigg be treated confidentially.

Whenever the printing controversies come up I am inclined to no quarter, for the reason that since the Republican Party carried the State in 1893 I have never been able to secure a single contract from the Republican State officers, but have uniformly been ruled out by some friend.

Regarding your suggestion as to the legal proceedings, I can do nothing. Mr. Brandow I scarcely know. I have never conversed with him on any printing matter or with anybody representing him. Very sincerely your,
WILLIAM BARNES, JR.

Earlier Fight for Contracts.

The next three letters, which passed between Platt and Barnes in 1894, showed how at that time Barnes was trying to get the printing. The first letter read:

Nov. 21, 1894.

Dear Senator: The matter was arranged on Monday last with Mr. Hyde satisfactorily.

I have heard from Fassett today in relation to Colonel Baxter, and he says that the Colonel undoubtedly will stick to his determination not to give the Journal Company the stationery business and appurtenances thereto. He adds that Colonel Baxter stated to him that I sublet my contracts to a Democrat. This is a lie and was proved so before the Senate Committee which Mr. Cowell had appointed to investigate Colonel Dunn and me.

If the new Clerk of the Republican Assembly desires to put Colonel Dunn and myself in the position of having done what was wrong last year, he can go ahead and recognize Mr. Cowell, who stirred up that investigation. Very truly yours,
WILLIAM BARNES, JR.

Barnes again wrote Platt, as follows:

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 27, 1894.

Dear Senator: I have forwarded to Colonel Baxter a letter signed by our three Members of Assembly, requesting him to give the Journal Company the stationery and printing work connected with the office of the Clerk of the Assembly. I have received a letter from Colonel Dunn in which he states that he does not believe Colonel Baxter will give me the work.

The annual organization of the Republican party in the county takes place the week beginning Dec. 10 and every effort is being strained to capture the organization from your friends. Mr. Cowell is one of the most accurate men in this movement, engineering certainly for a period. Mr. Baxter favors him he evidently is doing it for a purpose, and I have heard as much from Senator Fassett, to whol I wrote in regard to this matter. He states tactfully that inasmuch as I had not supported him at Saratoga, he would not do anything for me with Colonel Baxter. I must confess to some surprise that, inasmuch as the State organization has been active in getting out of the way various candidates for the Clerkship in order to give Mr. Baxter a clear field, he should act in the way he is acting now.

It is reported to me on excellent authority that Robert C. Pruyn, Will H. Weaver, and Horace Y. Young, of the Delaware & Hudson road, are zealously contemplating the establishment of a new newspaper here, and they hope to obtain Mr. Cowell's support on the State paper. Mr. Cowell has given me his word that he will vote to designate The Journal, and of course Mr. Palmer cannot be swerved by any considerations.

I trust you will not consider that in writing you this I am showing any particular weakness at home. Never, I believe, have our friends been stronger in Albany County than at the present time. The influence of the Commercial National Bank people, however, is actively engagen, as it has been in the past, in opposition to me, whom they seem to think they cannot control.

I hope to be in New York tomorrow and will introduce to you Frederick Easton of this city, a prominent lumber dealer, whom we are pushing for Superintendent of Public Buildings. This is the one appointment that I desire to obtain for Albany County above and beyond all others. Very truly yours,
WILLIAM BARNES, Jr.

Denied "Legitimate Patronage."

In a letter which Barnes wrote later he described the State printing as "a legitimate piece of patronage" denied him because he had supported Levi P. Morton for Governor. R. P. Flower was Governor at the time. The letter read:

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 22, 1894.

Dear Senator: I had a little talk with Mr. Fassett when I was in New York last and inquired of him why it was that Mr. Baxter had refused to take the recommendation of the three members of Assembly from Albany County upon the question of stationery and had selected Mr. Cowell. He said first that he had nothing to do with Mr. Baxter, &c. I hung on to him, however, until he finally remarked, petulantly: "Well, Cowell was the only man in the Albany delegation last Fall of whose vote I was absolutely sure if it came to a test."

I replied: "The organization has pulled out the various candidates for Clerk in order to give Baxter a clear field, and then Mr. Baxter deprives me of a legitimate piece of patronage because I supported Mr. Morton for Governor."

I certainly hope that you will use your influence for Fred Easton. I am ready to forego everything to have this appointment made. From my conversations with you and from what I have heard outside, it looks to me pretty dark. The Governor told Captain Palmer that he had appointed Mr. Martin to satisfy the Parker family, to close the matter up, to wipe it off from the books and go ahead on a perfectly clear basis as far as Albany County is concerned, and with that understanding we have no objections to Mr. Martin, but might ask in justice to Mr. Morton whether any appointment is to be made in this county at the request of the organization. If Senator Parker's family can obtain a Military Secretary at 2,500 a year I think that Secretary Palmer, the entire Republican organization, and The Albany Journal ought to be entitled to as much.

I hope you understand the spirit in which this letter is written, that it is not in the nature of a complaint; but I fear that we may be lost in the shuffle unless something definite can be decided upon pretty soon. Can't you see your way clear to back Mr. Easton, and we can get rid of the other candidates easily enough. Very truly yours,
WILLIAM BARNES, Jr.

Band Supplies a Diversion.

In the midst of the reading of the letters a parade of university students, headed by a noisy band, passed the Court House. The din aroused the ire of Justice Andrews and when shouts of "Hurrah for T. R." floated in he ordered the Sheriff to go out and stop it. Just as the lawyer started to read another letter the band blared. "He's a Rag Picker. Above the din the Justice ordered the attendants to tell the Sheriff to make arrests if necessary to stop the racket. That settled the band, but by that time it was noon and a recess was taken.

At the beginning of the afternoon session Mr. Winchester again took the stand. He said he could not find the cost sheets he had been ordered to get. He said the present system of tabulating the costs had not been installed until 1908, and he had a record of what happened before that time, except what might be on file in the State archives. He told Mr. Bowers that he would be glad to tell the cost of each job if furnished with official stamples of the work.

Mr. Bowers asked what two volumes entitled "The Birds of New York" had cost to print. The witness fumbled with several books and then declared that he could not tell unless he had an official sample of the work. Mr. Bowers was plainly impatient. The witness said he was trying to defend his reputation from attack. Mr. Bowers denied attacking him and asked if he could give any light on five or six of the sixty-odd matters mentioned in the subpoena which had been served upon the witness. The witness said he would try to produce what was wanted and again was allowed to go.

Mr. Bowers then called Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"What relation are you to the defendant?" he was asked.

"Fifth cousin by blood and nephew by law," he replied with a smile. The witness said he was a State Senator from 1911 to 1913 and was present throughout the contest to elect a United States Senator in the Spring of 1911. He said he had several talks with Mr. Barnes about that, and was asked about one at the Fort Orange Club about the middle of February. Mr. Roosevelt said:

His Talks with Barnes.

"We talked in general about the Senatorial situation. I called Mr. Barnes's attention to the fact that the deadlock had been going on for several weeks, and I deplored the fact that the State was not able to elect a Senator and that legislation was being held up. I said I hoped the solution would be reached as rapidly as possible, and I told him of a talk I had had with Senator Thomas F. Grady several weeks before. I told him this talk had occurred soon after the rumored attempt of the Republicans to stay away in sufficient numbers to allow the total Sheehan vote to constitute a majority. Grady told me that it was his judgment that the deadlock would continue for a long time, as Mr. Barnes had told him that he had an agreement with Mr. Murphy that the Republicans should hold out for Depew so as to give the Democrats every opportunity to elect Sheehan."

"Did you tell this to Mr. Barnes?" asked Mr. Bowers.

"I did," replied the witness. "I also again told him that, for the good of the State, so that its business could go on, a Senator should be elected and that it must be a Democrat as the Democrats were in control of both houses, but that I hoped Mr. Barnes would see the advisability of the Republicans standing with the independent Democrats for the election of an anti-machine Democrat. Mr. Barnes replied: 'No, I can't do that now.'"

Mr. Roosevelt said he had a subsequent talk with Mr. Barnes, and he was sent a letter which Barnes had sent to Edwin T. Brackett and Edward Merritt, Jr., the Republican ad Democratic leaders of the Senate. In this letter Mr. Barnes said the Republican minority, not with any idea of making a deal but solely in the performance of its duty, should unite with the independent Democrats and give them the opportunity to elect an independent as Senator. Mr. Bowers brought out that this letter was sent only the day before O'Gorman was elected. The witness said O'Gorman received practically the solid vote of the Democrats and Depew the sold Republican vote.

Ivins Scores for Barnes.

Mr. Ivins took the witness and asked him if he knew Francis Lynde Stetson and Montgomery Hare of New York. The witness said he did, and he admitted that he had conferred with Mr. Stetson in Albany while the fight was going on.

"Then Mr. Stetson was conferring with you on the one hand and with Mr. Barnes on the other?" Mr. Ivins suggested.

"That is true," replied the witness.

"You lived on the same street as Mr. Barnes?"

"Yes, we lived about a block away."

"And sometimes Mr. Stetson conferred with you for the purpose of defeating the official candidate of the Democratic Party?"

"What do you mean by that?" put in Mr. Bowers. The witness said he referred to a time about a week before the final selection for Senator was made by the State to The Albany Evening Journal from 1895 to 1914. These are for the publication of the session laws. The State Treasurer must produce canceled checks and vouchers made out to The Albany Evening Journal for the session laws between 1895 and 1906. The record of the appointment of the Barnes newspaper as the official State paper and affidavits showing the insertion in its columns of all printing of which the publication is required by law, must be produced by the Secretary of State.

CONVENTION GETS SHORT-BALLOT PLAN

First Amendment Suggested Retains Four Elective Officials of State Government.

MAKES NEW DEPARTMENTS

Whole Business of the Commonwealth Reorganized—Longer Ballot Plan Also Proposed to Constitution Revisers.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 4.—Amendments providing for the short ballot in modified form and for the lengthening of the ballot now in vogue in State elections were presented to the Constitutional Convention almost simultaneously at the session today.

The short ballot plan was introduced by Edward N. Smith, a Republican delegate from Jefferson County. One amendment continues the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Controller, and Attorney General as elective officers, and provides for officers to be appointed by the Governor with the consent of the Senate to take over the duties of the Secretary of State, the State Treasurer, and the State Engineer and Surveyor. A companion measure provides for an entirely new grouping of other administrative functions of the State Government under department heads to be appointed by the Governor. The amendments are supposed to embody a plan proposed by Senator Elon R. Brown.

The amendment lengthening the ballot was presented by ex-Senator Edgar T. Brackett of Saratoga, who has announced that he is prepared to assume the leadership in the fight certain up-State Republicans are expected to make against the short ballot and any other proposal for the centralization of power in the Governor. The Brackett amendment makes the Superintendents of Banks, Insurance and Prisons, elective officers, with terms running for five years, with the Governor retaining his power of removal for cause.

The Smith plan is the first ballot proposal to come before the convention. It lengthens the terms of the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Controller, and Attorney General from two to four years. One amendment provides for the appointment by the Governor, with the consent of the Senate, of these officials to be the administrative heads in the State Government and the Governor's official advisers. Secretary for State, Secretary for the Interior, Secretary for Charities, Secretary for Public Works, Secretary for Finance, Secretary for Defence, Secretary for Commerce and Labor, and Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Another companion amendment empowers the Legislature to create these departments:

A Department of Law of which the Attorney General shall be the head.

A Department of Charities of which the Secretary for Charities shall have charge.

A Department of Commerce and Labor, under the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, which shall have supervision over labor, manufactures, agriculture and public utilities, and shall have attached to it a Bureau of Research.

A Department of Defense of which the Secretary for Defense shall be the head.

A Department of Finance under the Secretary for Finance, to have supervision over the finances of the State, taxation and retrenchment, the civil service, banking and insurance. In this department also, there shall be the State Treasurer, appointed by the Governor with the consent of the Senate and the Controller, who shall perform the functions of the present State Treasurer.

A Department of the Interior, under the Secretary for the Interior, which shall have in charge of the forests, parks, fish and game supervision, regulation of water supply and water powers, and public health.

A Department of Public Works, under the Secretary for Public Works, to have charge of the canals, highways and public buildings of the State, in which there shall be, appointed by the Governor, with the consent of the Senate, a State Engineer to do the work now done by the elective officer of the same title.

A Department of Records with the Secretary for State in charge. This department shall have charge of all records of the State. The records of and the appointments of clerks in all the State departments, the State census, election and public printing.

The amendment also provides that the Legislature at its next session shall take action to create these departments and organize the bureaus and divisions in them. The Governor, under the amendment, has the power to appoint heads of bureaus and divisions as well as the department heads with the consent of the Senate. It is provided that the provisions of the proposed amendment shall go into effect on Jan. 1, 1917.

In addition to the Brackett amendment lengthening the ballot, Russell Wiggins introduced an amendment to include among elective officers the State Superintendent of Highways.

Proposes Board of Pardons.

Mr. Brackett introduced another amendment curtailing the present power of the Governor, but in this instance power and responsibility which many Governors have urged should be shifted from their shoulders. This amendment provides for the creation of a Board of Pardons and Parole, to which all applications for pardon, parole, commutation, and executive clemency shall be referred, which shall have power of final disposition in all such matters.

H. Le Roy Austin, Republican, of Greene County, presented a proposal to amend the Constitution by striking from Section 15, Article II., the provision empowering the Governor to certify to the necessity of the immediate passage of a bill pending before the Legislature.

Under the present Constitution a measure must be on the desk of members for three full legislative days before it can be taken up for consideration. An emergency message from the Governor serves to cut all the red tape surrounding legislative procedure, so that a bill can be put through even before it appears in printed form. The existing constitutional provision is intended to meet situations of grave emergency. In recent years, particularly during the Whitman administration, the emergency message has been employed in and out of season until at the Legislature session which has just ended, charges that the Governor was abusing this power, were made frequently in both branches of the Legislature.

More measures affecting the powers of the Executive and the Legislature and the structure of the State Government were introduced at the session today than at any previous meeting of the convention. Here are some of the more important:

By Anthony J. Griffin, Democrat, of the Bronx: Providing that the Legislature must not adjourn until action has been taken on all bills before it. The Senate and Assembly by joint resolution shall fix a day after which no bills shall be introduced, except under an emergency message from the Governor.

By Russell Wiggins, Republican, of Orange: Proposing an amendment changing from five to ten years the period of residence in the State required of a person before he shall be eligible to the office of Governor or Lieutenant Governor.

By John C. Leggett, Republican, of Allegany: Proposing an amendment to Section 1, Article XIII., by striking out the provision that in taking their oath of office, State officers must swear that they have not directly or indirectly paid or promised to pay any money or offered any consideration whatever for the giving or withholding of a vote.

For Longer Legislative Terms.

By Frank W. Standart, Republican, of Erie: Increasing the term of Senators from two to four years and the terms of Assemblymen from one to two years and raising their salary from $1,500 to $3,000 and their per diem allowances from $10 to $20. The amendment also provides for biennial sessions of the Legislature beginning in 1917, except that in even numbered years the Legislature shall meet for not exceeding thirty days for the purpose only of passing upon the budget.

By Anthony J. Griffin: Prohibiting the Legislature from passing any bill delegating to private persons or associations or corporations the right to prosecute, enforce, evollect or receive any fines or penalties imposed by law. This would affect among other organizations the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, which at present is partially maintained from the proceeds of fines imposed as a result of convictions on cruelty charges.

By LeRoy H. Austin, Republican, of Greene: That payment of money from the State treasury in pursuance of appropriations made by the Legislature shall cease two years from the beginning of the fiscal year for which the appropriation was made and that no appropriation shall be continued or revived except for the original purpose.

By Isidor Buxbaum, Republican, of Kings: Proposing an amendment to Article XIII., (new sections 5, 6, and 7,) providing that all laws, ordinances, regulations, rules, contracts, deeds, franchises, grants, judgments, licenses, permits, privileges, appointments, offices, positions on a list, fees, rewards or salaries, obtained by bribery, coercion, false pretenses, fraud, illegal consideration, or unlawful means, shall be forfeited and be of no effect. No person shall be incompetent to testify in an action or proceeding brought pursuant to this article by reason of being a participant or accomplice.

By Herman J. Westwood, Republican, of Erie: Proposing amendment to Section 1, Article 1, providing that suits may be brought against the State as against an individual, exclusively in the Supreme Court, in such manner, and within such limit of time, as may be provided by law.

By Thomas A. Kirby, Republican, of Orleans: Providing that the documents, books, and papers of the State Board of Charities, relative to the visitation and inspection of a charitable, eleemosynary, correctional, or reformatory institution shall be public records, accessible to any person connected with such an institution in an official capacity.

By Lemuel E. Quigg, Republican: Providing that no persons shall be compelled to be a witness against himself in a criminal case, but making exception of any person holding public office who shall not be excused from testifying or producing books and papers in any criminal case in which he is a defendant or any investigation held by public authority and involving his official conduct.

WANT TO TAX CHURCHES.

Erie Delegate Proposes Amendment to Cancel Exemption.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 4.—James L. Nixon, one of the Republican delegates from Erie, in the Constitutional Convention today proposed an amendment to do away with the exemption from tax which is enjoyed at present by churches, societies, and schools under church direction or ownership and by cemetery associations and public and private institutions of every character not owned by Federal, State, county, or municipal governments. Under the amendment it is provided that all such property shall be taxed in proportion to its assessed valuation, and that the tax shall be applied to the general fund in the places where it is levied.

Friends of the amendment assert that it would increase the revenue from real estate taxes by 25 per cent.

FOR JUDICIARY CHANGES.

Proposed Uniform Salary for Supreme Court Justices.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 4.—Under an amendment to the Constitution presented to the Convention today by Meier Steinbrink, a Republican delegate from Kings, the Governor with the consent of the Senate would be empowered to designate a Supreme Court Justice, in the year when his term expires, to continue in office for fourteen years from the expiration of his term, or until he has reached the age limit of 70. In case the Governor should fail to make the designation, the vacancy would be filled at the next following election, and the Governor's failure to designate would not affect the eligibility of a Justice for re-election.

Another Steinbrink amendment provides for a uniform salary of $12,000 for Supreme Court Justices, with no extra pay for those designated to sit in the Appellate Division. The amendment raises from $10 to $20 the per diem allowance for expenses in the case of Justices elected in the Third or Fourth Department (up-State,) designated to sit in another Judicial District. In no case, however, shall the total compensation paid a Supreme Court Justice exceed $17,500 a year.

Through another proposed amendment Mr. Steinbrink would have the present power of the Legislature to increase the number of Supreme Court Justices repealed.

An amendment introduced by Floyd J. Adams, Republican, of Kings, would abolish the Kings County Court after Jan. 1, with the proviso that all actions then pending shall be transferred to the Supreme Court and the County Judges then in office become Supreme Court Justices for the remainder of their terms.

VETOES LUNACY BILL.

Whitman Kills Measure Which Would Overcrowd Bellevue.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 4.—Governor Whitman today vetoed the Knight bill to do away with the examination of insane convicts in penal institutions under the control of the Commisioner of Correction in New York City by two examiners in lunacy, pending their removal to Matteawan, and substituting committal to the psychopathic ward at Bellevue for observation.

In a statement accompanying his veto, Governor Whitman said that plan proposed would tend to overcrowd Bellevue and would react unfavorably on curable cases awaiting committment to State hospitals.

SUFFRAGISTS LEAVE FOR ALBANY TODAY

ANTIS AT CAPITAL, TOO

Mrs. Dodge Says Herbert Parsons Resolution Follows Suggestion of Her Organization.

Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, President of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, and Miss Alice Hill Chittenden, the State President, visited Albany yesterday to consult with various members of the Constitutional Convention, and many suffragists will go today to appear at a hearing at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The anti-suffragists said that in making their visit to the Constitutional Convention delegates they are not working to prevent the matter being brought before the people.

"At the time of the Republican Convention in Saratoga, last September," said Mrs. Dodge, "the New York State Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage took the position that if the Legislature should pass the woman suffrage amendment a second time during the session of 1915, then the question would be squarely before the people as a separate proposition and the Constitutional Convention would not have to consider it in any way. The resolution introduced by Mr. Parsons last week, therefore, is really in line with the suggestion the anti-suffragists made last Summer."

The suffragists who will go to Albany from New York today are Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, head of the Empire State Campaign Committee; Mrs. Raymond Brown, the State President; Miss Mary Garrett Hay, Chairman of the Woman Suffrage Party, and Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse. The women will meet Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch, President of the Women's Political Union, who, with Miss Alberta Hill, left New York for Albany yesterday.

Miss Hill, who is the Executive Secretary of the union, will remain in Albany, while Mrs. Blatch will visit different large cities up the State to make suffrage speeches before men's clubs. She will also attend the dinner to be given to Governor and Mrs. Whitman by the Onondaga Branch of the Women's Political Union next Friday at the Onondaga Hotel in Syracuse. Mrs. Joseph Griswold Deane and Mrs. John Winters Brannan will escort Mrs. Whitman from the Executive Mansion to the dinner at Syracuse. Two hundred prominent men and women of the State will be present, and the speakers will be introduced by Lieut. Gov. Edward Schoeneck. Mrs. Frederick R. Hazard, Vice President of the Women's Political Union, will preside.

An anti-suffrage card party will be given on Friday afternoon at the Hotel Bossert in Brooklyn, where auction bridge and five hundred will be played. Tickets, returns to be made to Mrs. W. B. Moore, Treasurer, at the Hotel Bossert, are $1. The invitations to the card party say: "The co-operation of patriotic women is earnestly solicited at this critical period in the history of New York State." Mrs. Jacob Remsen and Mrs. Percy Gray are on the Committee of Arrangements.

SUFFRAGE IN BOWERY OTEL.

Maggie Hinchey Wins Vigilance House Audience with Her Brogue.

For the first time there was a suffrage meeting last night in a Bowery lodging house, the Vigilance Hotel, and the women had a courteous and sympathetic audience.

"Sure you can have a meeting," the night clerk at the Vigilance told the women when they asked permission. "I'll get all the boys in, and you won't have no trouble, ladies, for I'll put all the drunks in the submarine," and he pointed below.

There were half a dozen of the women, among them Lavinia Dock, better known as "Little Doc," of the suffrage pilgrim army; Mrs. Ella C. Guilford, Miss Matilda Splint, and the Billy Sunday of the suffragists—Maggie Hinchey, who represents working women. Maggie is big and sisterly and, above all, human in a good, strong way. When Maggie got up to speak the Bowery succumbed to a man.

"Brothers," began Maggie, rolling her r's with good Irish brogue. As she went on and her audience alternately wiped its tears and shook with laughter, and when she said at the close, "And now you know what you are going to do on Nov. 2," every hand went up to say yes, they would vote for the women.

She talked of the war and the English and the Irish, the Germans and the Russians, all "fighting like mad dogs, and don't know what they are fighting about, and there's them that calls themselves Kings and Kaisers that puts them up to it."

She talked about religion, "and the father says come this way or you will go to hell, and the Protestant says come with me or you'll go to hell, but we are all alike, and we are all brothers together."

She talked about war babies at the last and of the shame of it, and added: "There would be no man here but for a woman. You have all had mothers, though maybe you have forgotten it."

"I had a mother," murmured another old man, as though it was something he had forgotten entirely.

The suffragists are canvasing the Bowery and are getting comparatively favorable returns.

WOMEN TO HAVE A HEARING.

Parsons Believes Suffrage Proposal Can Be Kept Separate.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 4.—Patrick W. Cullinan, Republican delegate-at-large and Chairman of the Suffrage Committee of the Constitutional Convention, announced tonight that his committee would give a public hearing on the Parsons resolution, pledging the convention to take no action on woman suffrage, that would interfere with the proposed Constitutional amendment which goes before the voters this Fall.

Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch and Miss Alberta Hill, suffrage advocates, and Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, President of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, and Miss Alice Hill Chittenden, President of the State branch of that organization, are at the capital tonight prepared to appear before the committee and voice their divergent pleas.

Mrs. Blatch said tonight that it was her intention to urge the Suffrage Committee to bring in a resolution under committee auspices, pledging the convention to the submission of the suffrage article of the revised Constitution as a separate proposition at the referendum this Fall. A similar course was adopted by the Constitutional Convention of 1894 with regard to the reapportionment of Senate districts.

Herbert Parsons said today he felt convinced that through the ingenuity of President Root of the Constitutional Convention some way would be found to submit the woman suffrage question as a separate proposal without causing any confusion or endangering the sections in the Constitution dealing with the exercise of male suffrage, in case the proposition to give women the ballot should be defeated at the polls. Mr. Parsons said the convention has the power to submit the question to the people in a manner that would make it perfectly clear that the present Constitutional provision regarding suffrage would remain in force in the event of a defeat for woman suffrage.

It was intimated today that some attempt may be made in the present Constitutional Convention to amend the Constitution with a view of providing an educational qualification for the exercise of the right to vote. No proposal with that aim has been presented as yet.

James L. Nixon, Republican of Erie, presented a proposal for an amendment to the Constitution providing that no elector in the military service of the State or nation or regularly employed in any legitimate occupation which compels him to be absent from his election district on election day shall be deprived of his vote by that reason.

Kills Slater's Bill.

ALBANY, May 4.—Governor Whitman today vetoed a bill introduced by Senator Slater of Westchester, to create civil service commissions in counties with from 250,000 to 300,000 inhabitants.

Callaghan and Mills Named.

Governor Whitman appointed Municipal Court Justice Stephen Callaghan of Brooklyn yesterday to fill the vacancy in the Supreme Court, Second District, caused by the death of Justice Joseph A. Burr. The Governor also designated Justice Isaac N. Mills of Westchester County to succeed Justice Burr in the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, Second Department, which is composed of the Second and Ninth Judicial Districts.

BANKER MANDEL SENTENCED

Must Serve Two and a Half to Five Years and Pay $3,000 Fine.

Adolf Mandel, the east side banker, who was convicted last week before Justice Davis in the Criminal Term of the Supreme Court of receiving deposits when he knew his bank at 155 Rivington Street was insolvent, was sentenced to Sing Sing yesterday for not less than two years and six months nor more than five years, and to pay a $3,000 fine. Hundreds of depositors in the corridors cheered when they heard the sentence, and when Assistant District Attorney Isidor Wasservogel, who prosecuted Mandel, came out of the courtroom the crowd pressed forward to shake his hand.

TO INVESTIGATE ELECTION.

Kansas Governor Believes Prominent Men in Both Parties Involved.

TOPEKA, May 4.—Following the receipt of the refusal of Henry T. Zimmer, Election Commissioner at Kansas City, Kan., to resign, Gov. Capper announced today he will conduct an investigation of the recent election at Kansas City. He said he had received more than forty complaints on the election.

The Governor was authority for the statement today that the investigation promised to involve men prominent in the affairs of both the Democratic and Republican parties.

Manhattan Day at Expositions.

Borough President Marks has written to inform the Chamber of Commerce, the Merchants' Association, the Board of Trade and other similar organizations that at his request the Panama-California Exposition at San Diego has designated Aug. 9 as Manhattan Day, and the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco has given the same title to Aug. 19. President Marks will attend the expositions on these days and will deliver addresses.

MAN FATALLY SHOT FALLS BEFORE TRAIN

BULLET ENTERS STOMACH

Victim Staggers Out Upon Track Before an Approaching Express, but Is Foun in Time.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., May 4.—Falling on the tracks of the Lackawanna Railroad with a bullet hole in his stomach, and in danger of being crushed by an express train which was due within a few moments, August Schmalsky, a gate tender of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad at Union Avenue, Totowa Borough, a suburb of Paterson, was discovered just in time by a track walker late tonight, and taken to the General Hospital, where, it is said, he cannot live. The Paterson police have started out with their dragnet to locate Frank Martin, a former police officer of Totowa Borough, and more recently an inmate of the State Prison at Trenton, and Harry Stuart, another resident of the Borough, who has not worked for many years.

In an ante-mortem statement made to detectives just before midnight Schmalsky, who is 40 years old and married, charged Martin with the shooting. He said he was in his shanty at the side of the track when Martin and Stuart came in, and the former, after drinking the gate tender's pail of coffee, placed a revolver at his abdomen and said:

"How would you like to be shot?"

Before Schmalsky could reply the man pulled the trigger, and his victim fell at his feet. The two men ran away in the darkness toward the Breakness Mountains.

According to his story Schmalsky staggered to his feet and out of his shanty in an endeavor to seek assistance. He walked only a short way along the track when he fell across the rails and lost consciousness.

He was discovered there by a man who carried him back to the shanty and summoned Dr. Ives of Little Falls, N. J. The doctor took the dying man in his auto to the General Hospital, where it is said he cannot recover.

LABOR LEADERS AROUSED.

Predict General Colorado Strike as Result of Lawson Verdict.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, May 4.—The conviction of John Lawson, official of the United Mine Workers, for the murder of a Deputy Sheriff in the Colorado coal strike, may result in a general labor strike throughout the State, according to the more radical labor leaders. John McLennan, President of the State Federation of Labor, today issued a cal for a meeting of that body next Monday, at which a formal protest will be drawn up against Lawson's conviction, and at which more drastic action in the form of a general strike is predicted. When the Lawson case is again brought to trial, as labor leaders claim it will be, they will ask for a change of venue. They claim the districts in which the large coal mines are located are ruled by the coal operators. Indignation in labor circles is intense, and their leaders claim they will have the united support of organized labor throughout the country.

UPHOLD APPLIANCE ACT.

Decision May Cut Down Accidents Due to Hand Brakes.

RICHMOND, Va., May 4.—The Federal Circuit Court of Appeals today unanimously affirmed a decision of the Federal District Court construing the Safety Appliance act so as to make it unlawful for a railroad to require brakemen to use commond hand brakes to control the speed of trains on the road.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Experts of the Interstate Commerce Commission say the decision at Richmond today is one of the most important in many years. If supported by the United tSates Supreme Court, it will result in cutting down accidents now laid to the hand brake, which last year killed 586 men and injured 10,653. It may force the railroads, especially on high grades, to cut down the length of their trains.

THOMPSON GETS $20,000,000

Uniontown Banker Says He Will Reopen Bank in Six Months.

UNIONTOWN, May 4.—Josiah V. Thompson, banker and holder of extensive coal properties in Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Ohio and West Virginia, whose financial embarrassment has been widely felt for several months, announced today that he had negotiated a loan of $20,000,000 and that he and his associates would soon be freed of their troubles.

Mr. Thompson said further that the First National Bank of Uniontown, which has been in the hands of a receiver since January 18, would reopen within six weeks, that receivers appointed for the many persons associated with him would be discharged, and that the 430,000 acres of coal lands involved would be withdrawn from the market.

Mr. Thompson did not disclose the names of the persons who have agreed to advance the money, but added that they were conversant with the situation.

D. E. SEYBEL A SUICIDE.

New York Lawyer Was a Director of Black, Starr & Frost.

PORT CHESTER, N. Y., May 4.—Daniel E. Seybel of the law firm of Seybel & French, 41 Park Row, Manhattan, shot and killed himself here today at his home in Ridge Street. He was found dead in one of the rooms of the house by the caretaker. A discharged revolver was lying by his side.

It is thought that despondency because of ill health and the loss of his wife three years ago was responsible for the suicide. Since the death of his wife Mr. Seybel, who was 50 years old and childless, had been much alone, and it is said that he became melancholy in his solitude.

Warren C. French of 469 West 152d Street, New York, Mr. Seybel's partner, came here as soon as he was notified of the suicide.

Mr. Seybel was Secretary-Treasurer of the Greenfield Automatic Fastener Company, Treasurer of the Park Mortgage Company, and a Director of Black, Starr & Frost, jewelers.

NEW ROCK ISLAND MOVE.

Protective Committee Expected to Ask for Deposits of Stock.

It was announced yesterday that the Sheldon Proxy Committee, which collected proxies for the last annual meeting of the stockholders of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company on April 12, would be dissolved. In its place will appear a new protective committee, which, it is expected, will ask for a deposit of the railway's stock.

The new protective committee will be organized by Charles Hayden, one of the newly elected Directors of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway. Mr. Hayden denied yesterday that the committee had already been formed. He had merely broached the matter informally to several men representing considerable holdings of the railway company stock, he said. It is expected that W. Emlen Roosevelt and W. J. Matheson, also newly elected Directors, will serve on the new committee. F. H. Van Hall of Amsterdam, representing 86,000 shares of the railway company stock held in Holland, has also been asked to serve on the new committee, but no reply has yet been received. The committeee, it was said yesterday, would probably consist of seven members. It would be in every way representative and independent, it was explained.

While this committee is being formed, N. L. Amster, the insurgent Director on the railway board, will work along his own way, and his committee will also act as a stockholders' protective committee. It was said yesterday on Mr. Amster's behalf that no deposit of stock would be asked for, but that stockholders would be asked to give their support to the Amster plan of lifting the Rock Island out of receivership.

A Director of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway, referring to the recent receivership, said yesterday that each and every Director excepting only Mr. Amster had known of the contemplated receivership action before it was actually launched. This apparently settles a question which has been much discussed in Wall Street. In the past a number of the Directors specifically denied that they had known in advance of the receivership. This Director also stated that Mr. Van Hall had known of the receivership before he sailed for Amsterdam.

Mr. Amster said last night that papers in the plea for intervention in the receivership will be filed this week.

"I have just learned that an opposition stockholders' committee is being formed with the manifest purpose in view of detracting from the strength of our committee," said Mr. Amster. "This is in line with the tactics that have heretofore been employed. I want to say that our committee proposes to go right ahead with the suit for the recovery of the $7,500,000 from old Directors and to sift the entire Rock Island receivership.

"We shall oppose receiver's certificates for new equipment; the company has too many locomotives now and can hire a few thousand cars cheaper than to buy them in view of its present poor credit.

"In my investigation I discovered that the company can save more than $500,000 annually in its traffic department, $500,000 more in its general expenses, and $600,000 by cutting out its Golden State Limited daily train service from Chicago to the Pacific Coast.

SAYS FISH WERE DROWNED.

Kissena Lake Lacks Oxygen, City Chemist Asserts.

Two hundred carp and a number of perch were drowned recently in Kissena Lake, Flushing, according to a statement by Thomas W. Melia, a chemist and bacteriologist of the New York Water eDpartment, yesterday. When the fish were found floating on the lake a week ago sensational reports were circulated to the effect that they had been poisoned.

After a thorough investigation Mr. Melia discovered no foreign element that would cause the death of the fish, but he found that in a lake in Northern New Jersey in 1906 the same conditions which confronted the Queens Park Department prevailed. The fish in the New Jersey lake died from no apparent cause, and experiments showed that the annual changes in the waters of the lake, known as the lake bloom, caused by sudden changes in the temperature, had absorbed all of the oxygen in the water.

CHINESE PREPARE TO DEFEND PEKING

Okuma and Foreign Minister Kato, have approved a project to send an ultimatum to China. The information reaching Japan, this paper says, leads to the conviction that the nature of the latest Chinese answer to the demands of this country obliges Japan to resort to what it calls this logical diplomatic step.

Continuing, the Yomiuri says that the concessions made by Japan, particularly the restoration of Kiao-Chau to China, had created the belief that China was satisfied an dthat the matter would be arranged peacefully. There is an impression now, the newspaper says, that Yuan Shih-kai, President of China, desires an ultimatum in order to justify China's eventual acceptance.

According to the newspaper Hochi Shimbun, martial law will be proclaimed in South Manchuria simultaneously with the issuance of the ultimatum.

Minister of Justice Ozaki was quoted by the newspapers in earlier editions as having announced that the Cabinet had decided to send an ultimatum to China requiring her to reconsider the decision to make no further concessions to Japan. It is explained in official circles that Japan has no desire to resort to force, but that China "must be made to realize that this country is determined upon the acceptance of its program for solidifying the peace of the Orient."

The press considers the ultimatum a proper step. The Japan Times believes that, if China refuses to yield, Japan should occupy provinces like Shantung "until China comes to her senses." This, the paper says, would not constitute a violation of China's integrity, "since its sole aim would be to insure the integrity of the country."

The belief is professed in some circles that China may send word at the last minute that additional concessions are possible, and in this way avert the ultimatum.

The Kokumin Shimbun quotes Premier Okuma as expressing disappointment with the course of the Chinese authorities. In the beginning, it is related, Japan asked China to keep the proceedings strictly secret. In spite of China's alleged promise to this effect, the proceedings were published broadcast.

Continuing, the Kokumin Shimbun says it is in a position to declare with authority that, whatever action Japan takes, her course will not disturb the friendly relations with the United States and Great Britain. In conclusion this paper says that the appeal of China to America through the missionaries will not move the United States to interfere.

Statements have appeared in the Japanese press to the effect that the followers of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, who are now in Japan plotting to overthrow President Yuan Shi-Kai, have issued a manifesto making the charge that Yuan Shi-Kai in reality was the originator of the Japanese demands, his ulterior motive being to obtain the help of Japan to make himself Emperor. These allegations, however, are quite without confirmation.

LONDON, May 4.—The correspondent of the Central News at Tokio says in a dispatch received here tonight:

"I learn that the Cabinet in special session has decided to send an ultimatum to China. The ultimatum will accord a brief limit for China's compliance with the Japanese demands."

NO JOINT ACTION, SAYS GREY.

Secretary, in Commons, Denies Anglo-American Negotiations Over Japan.

LONDON, May 4.—The United States and Great Britain have entered into no formal negotiations concerning Japan's demands upon China. Announcement to this effect wa smade in the House of Commons today by the British Foreign Secretary, Sir. Edward Gray. The Secretary added that the only communication on the subject between the American and British Governments had been a brief and informal conversation in February between Ambassador Page and a representative of Great Britain.

Asked by a member from the floor for a statement of the progress of the negotiations between China and Japan, the Foreign Secretary said that Great Britain had been in communication with the Japanese Government on the subject of the Anglo-Japanese agreement generally, and particularly concerning those British interests which might possibly conflict with the competing Japanese demands upon China. These negotiations, however, he said, were strictly confidential.

Asked if he were going to do nothing "until Japan, by military force, having already 60,000 troops in China, had imposed her authority on China," and whether Great Britain was not bound by treaty to defend the integrity of China, or if he, "was prepared to regard that simply as a scrap of paper," Sir Edward Grey reiterated that the communications made to him by Japan were confidential and that he, therefore, was not at liberty to discuss the actual terms of the Japanese demands.

The Secretary said he was not aware that any official and accurate version of the demands had been published and that he regarded the matter as one of the greatest importance.

"The question as to how Japan can reconcile some of her demands upon China with her professed intention of upholding the independence of that country is asked by The Manchester Guardian in reviewing editorially the Chino-Japanese negotiations.

"China does agree," says The Guardian, "to the request that she shall not cede to a third power any harbors, bays or islands among her coasts—an undertaking against which nothing can be said except that it apparetly leaves Japan free to demand from China just what China is forbidden to grant to a third party. If Japan would enter into a self-denying ordinance, then, indeed, Chia and those who wish her well would have solid ground for satisfaction. But at present we remain puzzled to know how Japan can reconcile some of her demands, those for instance which China has rejected, with her professed intention of upholding the independence of China."

NO APPEAL FROM CHINA.

President Wilson Corrects Rports —Still Hopes for aSettlement.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—It was brought out by questions asked of President Wilson today that the Chinese Government had not appealed to the United States to help it resist the demands of Japan for concessions alleged to be dangerous to China's integrity. The inference drawn from the rather cautious answers made by the President was that the United States Government had acted on its own initiative in any part it had taken in the matter.

From what the President said it was apparent that the information that this Governmmt was receiving in regard to the progress of the negotiations between Japan and China was being furnished by Paul M. Reinsch, the American Minister at Peking. This was held to clear the Chinese Governmnt of the imputation that it was conducting a publicity campaign among foreign nations in order to create sentiment against the Japanese demands, at least so far as the United States was concerned. The Japanese Government is said to have accused the Chinese Governmnt of engaging in such a campaign. No direct statement was made by the President, however, as to whether any information on the subject of the negotiations was coming from the Chinese Government.

To a question the President said that he thought there was ground for the hope that the Japanese-Chinese situation would be cleared up soon. H said he had heard of no ultimatum.

CHINA'S TONE PROVOCATIVE.

Japanese Government Holds That It Precludes Further Conversations.

LONDON, Wednesday, May 5.—"I am authoritatively informed," says The Times Tokio correspondent, "that the tone of the Chinese reply to the Japanese demands precludes further conversations. China not only refuses to concede Article 5 but does so in language distinctly provocative.

"China's attitude since the presentation of the modified demands became decidedly less conciliatory than at any time earlier in the negotiaitons, when Japan's proposals were much more exacting."

KILLS BABY AND HIMSELF.

Wife Attributes Brooklyn Postal Clerk's Crime to Overstudy.

Thomas P. SmithP, a clerk in the money order department of the Post Office, took his two-year-old daughter, Ruth, into the bathroom of their apartment at 368 East Eleventh Street, Flatbush, yesterday morning, and cut her throat, almost severing the baby's head from her body. Then he cut his own throat.

Mrs. Florence Smith, the wife and mother, who was preparing breakfast, knew nothing of the tragedy until Frederick Benzenberg, a decorator at work in a vacant apartment below, ran up to discover why blood was dripping down into the bathroom. Then Mrs. Smith, learning that both husband and daughter were dead, collapsed and had to be taken to the Kings County Hospital. Mrs. Ellen Smith of 416 East Eleventh Street, Smith's mother, called at the house, and, learning of the tragedy, collapsed also and an ambulance was summoned for her.

Mrs. Smith said her husband was interested in the cult of Christian Science. She said she thought his mind had given way under the strain of excessive study.

MRS. BURKHAM ON STAND.

Testifies She Is the Daughter of Man Who Left Her a Fortune.

ST. LOUIS, May 4.—Mrs. Lois Campbell Burkham, beneficiary with Mrs. Florence Campbell to the $16,000,000 estate of James Campbell, traction magnate, took the stand today and testified in the suit brought by relatives who are attempting to prove invalid the late millionaire's will.

Mrs. Burkham testified that James Campbell was her father and Mrs. Florence Campbell was her mother. That she had lived with the Campbells all her life until her marriage last Fall, and that during his life she and her father were inseparable.

"He would not let me go away to spend the night," she testified, "nor even stay away to lunch. He wanted me with him. He used to take me to school and carry my books, and where on eof our family went we all went. This custom interfered with my education, since my parents traveled a great deal, and they would take me on the journeys rather than be away from me."

PROF. YOHANNAN MENACED.

Arrest of Alleged Agent Follows Threat by Persians.

When the Rev. Dr. Abraham Yohannan, Professor of Oriental Languages in Columbia University, received a letter at his home, 557 West 124th Street, last Friday, written in Prsian, the Professor native language, and demanding $200 under threat of death, he carried it to the Fourth Branch Detective Bureau. Th letter said the writrs wanted to return to Persia and would telephone the Professor, making an appointment to receive the money if he decided to settle with them. Dr. Yohannan was advised to wait for such a message, and Monday he received a second letter telling him the writrs hoped he had decided to follow their wishs. Yesterday some one telephond, and, speaking in Persian, made an appointment to call on the Professor at 10 o'clock last night.

Detectives McManus and Hill were hidden behind some portiers in the library when, shortly after 11 o'clock, the maid admitted a young Persian, who afterward said he was Joel Jacobs, 21 years old, employed as an office attendant by Dr. Joseph E. Winters of 25 West Thirty-seventh Street.

"I presume you come for the money mentioned in the letters I have received?" said the professor.

"I was sent to get some money from you," replied Jacobs. "I know nothing about any letters."

"I promised those men I would give them $100 and pay the rest later," continued the professor, and Jacobs responded: "I guess that will be all right."

Then Dr. Yohannan handed the youth $100 in marked bills, and as he accepted them the detectives seized him. He was apparently greatly astonished and insisted that he had done nothing wrong. He declared he had acted as a messenger for others, but steadfastly declined to say who they were.

Jacobs was locked up, and Dr. Yohanran said he thought the youth, or those he acted for, had conceived their idea from watching moving pictures. He said he did much translating for publishing houses and was well known among the Persians of this city, who doubtless regarded him as wealthy.

A PURE WHITE MINERAL OIL FOR CONSTIPATION

"The longer used, the less needed."

THAT is the final test of a remedy—does it do away with the trouble for which it is taken?

By that test, the various laxatives and cathartics stand condemned. They do not remove the condition they are supposed to cure. In fact, the longer they are used, the more they are needed. Laxatives and cathartics are dangerously habit-forming.

By the same test, the mineral oil treatment, used in conjunction with a return to rational habits of eating and exercise, reveals itself as the one logical remedy for constipation. The longer it is used, the less it is needed.

Nujol is not a drug, is not absorbed by the system, and consequently can be taken in any quantity without harm. Nujol acts chiefly as a mechanical lubricant, although it has the additional property of absorbing and removing intestinal toxins. By facilitating the natural evacuation of the lower intestines, it restores the bowels to healthy activity.

Write for "The Rational Treatment of Constipation," an informative treatise on constipation and the mineral oil treatment, which doctors all over the world are now successfully prescribing.

Ask for Nujol at your druggist's, or send 75c. in money or stamps for a trial pint bottle. Address Dept. E.

SAFETY-FIRST RULES FOR FLEET VISITORS

All Boats Running from Shore to Ships Will Be Licensed and Capacity Limited.

BAR ON ROUND-TRIP TICKETS

Passengers Will Not Be Deserted on Vessels After Having Paid Fare Back to Land.

Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith has issued regulations to govern the transportation of visitors by specially licensed boats to and from the ships of the Atlantic Fleet during the two weeks that the fleet will be anchored in the Hudson. The regulation of the sight-seeing and visiting traffic during fleet visits has always been one of the big problems of such events, and this time the Federal and city authorities will enforce to the letter all regulations promulgated for safety.

The maximum number of passengers each boat engaged in the shore-to-ship traffic may carry will be decided before the license is granted. A maximum charge of 25 cents per passenger, each way, will be allowed, and certain landings from which the boats must operate will be designated. Pennants to indicate maximum passenger capacity of each boat must be carried. It will no longer be possible for a boatman to sell round-trip tickets, and then go home without returning for the return-ticket holders.

Rule 1, which governs the issuance of licenses to boatmen and boat owners, reads:

Owners of motor boats who desire to engage in transporting passengers for hire to and from naval ships, or around the ships, will apply to the Commissioner of Docks for a permit. Applicants will be notified to present their boats for inspection as to legal requirements, suitability and capacity, and if satisfactory a triangular pennant will be issued to the operators by the Commissioner of Docks on deposit of two dollars ($2), showing number of permit and capacity allowed, which will permit the boat in question to engage in this traffic and use the gangways of the war ships. The pennants will be issued for the length of time the ships are to be in the river at that particular visit. These pennants are to be carried by the boats so that they can be readily seen from all points. They are to be turned in at any time on demand of representative of the Department of Docks and Ferries.

Rule 3 refers to the rate per passenger to be charged and is as follows:

On boats carrying passengers between the war ships and the shore, the fare shall not in any case exceed 25 cents each way. The fare out is to be collected upon embarkation of the passengers, and the fare back during the return trip, and no tickets of any sort shall be sold, nor shall return trip fare be collected on the outward passage.

Rule 4 requires that the operators of passenger-carrying boats must continue those boats in service until all visitors to ships, which under their licenses they are permitted to serve, have been cleared of visitors and a failure to live up to this regulation will result in forfeiture of license. The men of the fleet and the city police will co-operate in the enforcement of all regulations.

The Mayor's Committee, of which Cornelius Vanderbilt is Chairman, appointed to arrange for the reception and entertainment of the officers and men of the fleet, gave out yesterday the route of the land parade of the fleet personnel, which parade will be reviewed by President Wilson from a reviewing stand to be erected in front of the Public Library at Forty-second Street and Fifth Avenue. The parade will take place the morning of Monday, May 17. The route will be: Twenty-fifth Street to Fifth Avenue, Fifth Avenue to Fifty-ninth Street, Fifty-ninth Street to Central Park West, Central Park West to Seventy-seventh Street, Seventy-seventh Street to West End Avenue, north to Seventy-ninth Street, west to North River.

It is now expected that the entire dreadnought and pre-dreadnought divisions of the fleet will be swinging at anchor in the Hudson by 9 o'clock next Saturday morning.

MORE MILLS FOR CUBA.

Sugar Men in Better Financial Condition Because of the War.

C. A. Johnson Hardy, a contractor of Santiago de Cuba and his brother-in-law, Francisco Auza, engineer and manager of a big sugar estate on the island, have arrived at the Imperial. Mr. Hardy, who went to Cuba with the American Army, is interested in many agricultural and other properties there. He said yesterday that there is practically no big construction work going on except the building of a few sugar mills.

"The sugar people, because of the good price they got for part of their product last year, have not felt the results of the war," said Mr. Hardy. "Still, the benefits of the high prices have been more apparent than real on account of adverse crop conditions. The sugar mills had not been making money for the last two or three years. Most of them were heavily in debt. Since last Fall they have been paying some of their accumulated indebtedness and are now in a tremendously better financial condition.

"There is practically no construction work going on in Cuba except a few new sugar mills and improvements in old ones. As for general business, the best characterization would be that it is good only in spots. The iron mines of Cuba are now working at a minimum, as they have not felt the demand for steel up here.

"I do not know whether it was appreciated up here, but the sudden jump in the price of sugar last Summer found Cuba's sugar almost entirely disposed of. I believe there was not more than 2 per cent. of the crop left, and all the profits for the season were made on this comparatively small amount."

ADMITS HITTING CHAUFFEUR

But Only with Hand, Says Mrs. Harrold—Case Dismissed.

Mrs. Orville Harrold of 106 Central Park West, wife of the opera singer, appeared in the West Side Court yesterday before Magistrate Corrigan in response to a summons obtained by Moe Small, a chauffeur, of 50 St. Mark's Place, who alleged she struck him on the head with her slipper, inflicting a lacerated wound, last Saturday night, after she had refused to pay him 25 cents for the delivery of some medicine.

Mrs. Harrold admitted striking Small, but said she used only her hand, after he had pulled her into the hallway from her apartment.

Magistrate Corrigan said it was a question of veracity, and dismissed the case, telling Small to take the case to a civil court if he desired redress.

MUSEUM OF SAFETY OPENS NEW HOME

Rooms at 18 West Twenty-fourth Street Show Devices for Protection of Life.

WILL TEACH FOOD VALUES

Committee, with Miss Edith Wetmore as Chairman, to Promote Sanitation in Homes.

The American Museum of Safety opened its new home at 18 West Twenty-fourth Street yesterday afternoon. While the opening was formal, there was very little formality about the reception. Those who desired to inspect the place came in, looked about, saw the moving pictures and departed. There was a luncheon served by three or four very formal looking waiters, and tea was obtainable.

The new location of the museum is ideal, for it is in the heart of the loft and factory district, where the streets at noon and certain other hours teem with working men and women. The museum occupies the ground floor and the basement of the building.

Its managers intend by lectures and publications and by exhibits and by personal effort not only to teach the value of safety first in the factory, on the railroads and in the street, but that safety means also the shielding of the children in the household and a standard of better living.

The space in one of the great windows looking out on the street is given up to an exhibition of safety devices used in a big lighting and power plant. Near the door is a collection of rather gruesome exhibits showing the effects of occupational diseases.

A section is devoted to an exhibit of industrial dietetics. There at a glance the worker can tell whether condensed milk has better food value than the fresh article, and there he can learn the nutritive value of rye flour, corn meal and other staples of diet. "Alcohol lessens efficiency," is the sign over several glass cases, and within is presented evidence to prove the truth of the charge. Two life size figures are used to demonstrate the use of the pulmotor.

One side of the main hall is devoted to moving pictures on educational and safety subjects. Downstairs is an exhibit showing what has been done to protect workers from the danger of moving machinery and to safeguard them against the carelessness of others. Here, by means of two miniature ships is demonstrated a device which its inventor claims is practicable for a quick and safe transfer of passengers from a sinking ship to a rescuing craft.

President Arthur Williams in an address of welcome said:

"We are most happy to welcome the friends of the American Museum of Safety to our new premises, where it is the intention of our organization to come into closer contact with the industrial workers of the city. For such a plan this location is more suitable than our old one, because it establishes us literally on the ground floor.

"This will, we hope, lead passers-by to step in, attracted by the displays in our show windows. These exhibits will be carefully arranged to illustrate various phases in accident prevention and health promotion. Being on the street level will also make it more convenient to give lectures illustrated with stereopticon and moving pictures. A series of such lectures is now being prepared.

"This may be an opportune time for announcing that a new committee has recently been formed which will devote its time to bringing safety and sanitation into the home. Miss Edith Wetmore has kindly consented to serve as Chairman of this committee."

Dr. William H. Tolman, Director of the museum, and several other officers assisted the Reception Committee, which consisted of Mrs. James Speyer, Chairman, Mrs. Charles S. Alexander, Mrs. Nicholas F. Brady, Miss Mabel Choate, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. Horace Gallatin, Miss Virginia C. Gildersleeve, Dean of Barnard College; Mrs. E. H. Harriman, Mrs. Helen Hartley Jenkins, Mrs. S. Crimmins Jennings, Mrs. Tompkins McIlvaine, Miss Anne Morgan, Mrs. J. Dyneley Prince, Miss E. Louise Sands, Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt and Miss Edith Wetmore.

REPLIES TO NAT. C. GOODWIN

J. S. Metcalfe Asks Dismissal of Book Review Suit.

James S. Metcalfe, who is being sued by Nat C. Goodwin because of his review of "Nat Goodwin's Book," filed his answer yesterday. Mr. Metcalfe admits that the review was written by him, but says that was by the request of the plaintiff, who urged him to review it. Evidently Mr. Goodwin did not urge Mr. Metcalfe to criticise the work in such strong language.

The answer repeats some of the things contained in the alleged libel, and says that the book contains "unmanly gossip and worse concerning the women who have been his [Mr. Goodwin's] wives, and other women, and is a record of hate and dastardly publication, and a betrayal of the most intimate and, to every man deserving of the name, most sacred relations of life."

Mr. Metcalfe also says that the book contains libelous matter and matter which it is unlawful to print. He asks that the suit be dismissed.

CHAUFFEUR FINED $50.

Joseph Elder Found Guilty of Running Down Henry R. Towne.

Joseph Elder, a chauffeur, of 50 Russell Street, Brooklyn, was fined $50 by Magistrate Murphy in Yorkville Court yesterday on a charge of reckless driving. Elder's machine knocked down Henry R. Towne of 121 Madison Avenue, founder and President of the Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company, and President of the Merchants' Association, on Monday morning in Fifth Avenue at Twenty-seventh Street.

Mr Towne, who is 78 years old, told Magistrate Murphy he was fortunate in receiving only minor bruises. He said Patrolman Huth had halted traffic in Fifth Avenue when he attempted to cross, but that the chauffeur disregarded the signal. This was corroborated by the patrolman.

Elder is employed by Edwar Karfoll of 707 Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn.

Want to Carry Bundles in Cars.

As a result of complaints received by the Public Service Commission concerning the exclusion from the Subway and elevated lines of persons carrying bundles, a hearing will be held on the matter this morning before Commissioner Hayward. Complaints have been received from department stores and trades unions. The regulation sometimes hits a workman, who is taking a big load of tools to his work.

Pantasote
as the sure sign of a good car
It shows that the maker of the car is giving full value. It shows that the present price cutting competition in the automobile industry has not turned that maker toward a less expensive and less durable top material.
Genuine Pantasote is the top material that is recognized as without a peer—for perfect shelter, perfect appearance, longest wear and ability to withstand all weather conditions, folding and misuse.
In buying a big thing like a car, the top material may be considered an unimportant little detail, but just think about this for a minute. Consider that the top is chiefly responsible for the trim, new and stay-new appearance of your car and your personal comfort in bad weather

HALT ARMS EXPORT, CHIEF MASON URGES

Grand Master Freifeld Asks Aid of 187,000 Members in New York State.

CALLS FOR ACTION NOW

Address at Annual Communication Largely Devoted to War in Europe and Plea for Peace.

Members of the Masonic fraternity in the State of New York, numbering 187,000, were called upon yesterday to begin a campaign against the exportation of arms and ammunition from this country to the warring nations of Europe in the opening address by Grand Master George Freifeld of Brooklyn at the one hundred and thirty-fourth annual communication of the Grand Lodge of this State.

"We are a world fraternity, not bounded by geographical lines or circumscribed by race cred or time. Teaching the brotherhood of m a.nwe touch all men everywhere with sympathetic interest. That the world has but partially accepted belief in and practice of the fraternal relation which should exist among men is painfully apparent by the gigantic and murderous strife engaging the nations of Europe.

"The time is ripe, brethren, to instill into the hearts and minds of men the .dea of a brotherhood so deep and strong as not only to prevent the killing of men by other men with arms, but to prevent also the spectator, or so-called neutral, from supplying the deadly weapons with which more murder shall be accomplished. The command 'Thou shalt not kill' applies equally to him who has the weapon and to him who holds it for such use by another. If Freemasonry is to play an honorable part in the world's theatre of action, let us not shrink from the battle where truth and righteousness cope with error and evil. The world has been led too long by the men and the ideas responsible for this horrible conflict. Let us join with the Church of God and all other forces for good in spreading better, nobler, and more exalted ideas.

"There is no earthly power strong enough to intervene by forceful or peaceful means to cause the conflict to cease. We look beyond and above the clouds to the Great Architect of the Universe and raise our prayers to Him, the God in whom we put our trust."

Belgium Only One to Ask Aid.

After describing the Grand Lodge's efforts to ascertain how to succor its brethern in the war-stricken countries, the Grand Master said that many weeks elapsed before responses were received, and that none of them expressed the desir for immediate action and some declined help. An appeal received from the Grand Lodge of Belgium was forwarded, as per request contained in it, to other jurisdictions, through the Masonis War Relief Association of the United States, and it was then responded to. This was the only appeal requiring immediate attention. He said that the German lodges in this city had collected a Widows and Orphans Fund from among their own members amounting to about $20,000, which was sent abroad.

Referring to the matter of neutrality among the members of the organization, Grand Master Freifeld said:

"Let it be recorded to the glory of all our brethern that our fraternity has been neutal in the highest sense, the kindliest fellow-feeling has prevailed among all our brethern, and in our sceswtow'oneapamongblFly."e shrdl sh French and German lodges particularly."

Entire Lodges of Foreigners Here.

Grand Master Freifeld said that there was received into the fraternity, not only the occasional individual who, from the fact of birth in another country may be termed a foreigner, but there are whole lodges composed of Italians, Frenchmen, Germans, Scandinavians and Spaniards, and others having a large number of Armenians and Turks, Russians and Poles.

"We thus demonstrate, in a very striking manner," he continued, "in the new world the significant and hopeful fact that there may be united in one great fraternity men of every clime and creed under God's fatherhood, all working together for the higher well-being of each in a moral, social and spiritual sense. In every nation on the earth are many men to whom the principle of brotherhood is a vital force which will yet overcome the animosities of racial and national differences.

"And now, under the protection of a great flag, in peace and with a measure of prosperity, we are met to learn whether we have progressed, to give serious thought to present problems and to anticipate and provide for the future, if we can but discern the coming events by the shadows they cast before them."

To Install Officers Tomorrow.

The Grand Lodge began its annual communication in Masonic Hall, Sixth Avenue and Twenty-third Street, yesterday afternoon, with Grand Master Freifeld presiding., assisted by Deputy Grand Master Thomas Penney of Buffalo, Senior Grand Warden William S. Farmer of Syracuse, and Junior Grand Warden Arthur S. Tompkins of Nyack.

There are 837 delegates in attendance. The sessions will continue until tomorrow, when the newly elected officers will be installed.

The Grand Lodge will be visited today by Grand Lodge officers from the Pennsylvania, Connecticut, and New Jersey Grand Lodges. A luncheon will be given them at the Republican Club, to be followed by an automobile ride, and in the evening they will be given a dinner, also at the Republican Club.

There are now in the Masonic Home at Utica nearly 500 adults and children, the Grand Master said in his report. The operation of the farm attached to the home resulted in a clear profit of $7,000 in the past year. He said the net income from the buildings of the fraternity amounted to $58,000 and there was an increase in resources during the year of over $100,000, of which $40,000 is in the permanent fund.

There has been received toward the redemption or endowment fund nearly $440,000.

STRIP METERS FROM TAXIS.

Test Case Begun Against Mason and Seaman Company.

John J. Drennen of the Bureau of Licenses charged in the West Side Court yesterday that, by stripping taximeters from their taxicabs and operating them under the guise of private cars, the Mason and Seaman Transportation Company is doing business in violation of the Public Hack ordinance. Five employes of the company were summoned before Magistrate Corrigan charged with violating the ordinance.

In order to make a test case, one of the defendants, Theodore Malcke, a chauffeur, of 1,646 Overing Street, the Bronx, was held for examination next Monday. The examination of the four other men, three chauffeurs and a starter, was put off until May 14.

The Appellate Division last Friday sustained the new amendment of the Taxicab ordinance that all public vehicles carrying taximeters must be licensed as public conveyances. The stripping of taximeters from many of the cars owned by the Mason and Seaman Company followed, according to Drennen.

MRS. HAY LEFT $2,057,895.

According to an appraisal filed yesterday in the Surrogate's office, Brooklyn, Mrs. Clara S. Hay, John Hay's widow, who died at her home in Washington, D. C., on April 25, 1914, left an estate amounting to $2,057,895. A transfer tax appraisal report was filed in Brooklyn because Mrs. Hay left realty in that borough and elsewhere on Long Island valued at $3,475.

The bulk of the estate is shared by Mrs. James W. Wadsworth, Jr., wife of the junior United States Senator from New York; Mrs. Payne Whitney and Clarence Leonard Hay, the children of Mrs. Hay. Under the will $40,000 is to go to various churches and charitable organizations in Washington, New York and Cleveland.

SAY THEY LEFT $1,100 AFTER OPENING SAFE

Putnam Railroad Men Hurry Back from Philadelphia to be Locked Up.

BUT MONEY IS MISSING

Scared When They Read That Cash They Were Afraid to Take Was Gone from 155th St. Station.

Two young men walked into the Detective Bureau of the District Attorney's office yesterday, and one said, to Lieutenant Edward Rayens:

"We are the men who opened the safe in the Putnam Division ticket office at 135th Street on Sunday night. We want to give ourselves up."

To District Attorney Perkins they said they were Spencer Roberts, 25, of 21 Macomb's Place, assistant ticket agent at the station, and Thomas Wright, 30, of 22 Chestnut Street, Yonkers, formerly a conductor on the Putnam Devision.

"We opened the safe," Roberts said. "We thought it would be a litrtle easy money."

"What did you do with the money?" the District Attorney asked.

"That is just what we came to see you about. We never got the money at all. We were frightened away and left it there—every cent of it. When we saw in the papers today that some one had taken $1,100 we thought the best thing we could do was to give ourselves up. So we came over from Philadelphia and inquired our way here."

Roberts said he was on duty at the station from 2:30 P. M., until midnight, when he locked up the safe and in the morning Melville E. Wooley, the other agent, opened it and at about 10 o'clock checked up the cash. Roberts has worked for the railroad for five years and for two years had been Mr. Wooley's assistant. He said he knew Wright when he was a conductor on the road. Wright was discharged about six months ago.

"On Saturday," aid Roberts, 'he came around to see me and we decided to rob the safe. Of course, I knew the combination, but we wanted to make it appear as if it were an outside job. We bought a ratchet for $2.50 and a drill for 80 cents on Saturday afternoon, and on Sunday night after closing time we went to work on the safe. We drilled into the plunger, but finally opened the safe by means of the combination.

"We took out the cash and were ready to make a get-away, when Waterman, the night watchman, made his rounds. He peered into the windows and recognized me. 'What are you doing here so late, Spence' he asked. 'Oh, I am going to leave in a few minutes,' I told him.

"After he had passed we got scared. Of course, if we took the money, we would have been caught. So we decided to leave it there and hide for a few days until the thing passed over. We did not think the railroad would make a complaint when they found that the money was all safe. So I wrote a note to my wife—we were married last December—and we went to Philadelphia."

The two men said they got to Philadelphia at 8:30 o'clock Monday morning and walked around all day. Wright had $15 and Roberts had less than $5. They were dumfounded, they said, when they read in the papers that the money was missing from the safe, so htye came back here to surrender.

Wright and Roberts were taken to Police Headquarters, where they were locked up on a charge of attempted burglary. Late in the afternoon Chief Humphries of the New York Central questioned them for a half hour.

Wright has been employed by the Terry & Tench Company as a handy man. He said he lost his job with the railroad because he allowed members of the Aqueduct police force to ride free.

Weeley, who has been employed by the railroad for twenty-four years, reported the burglary at 5:30 o'clock on Monday morning to the White Plains police and the city police. The amount reported missing was $1,148.22.

CARPATHIA BRINGS TYPHUS.

Serbian Patient and 375 More from Steerage Detained.

The Cunard steamship Carpathia, which arrived early yesterday with 831 passengers from the Mediterranean and the Levant, was detained nine hours in Quarantine by a case of typhus which developed in the steerage, where 376 men were quartered. The patient was Christos Kelepouris, a Serbian 20 years old, who had run away from his country to Piraeus to avoid military service. He embarked at that port on April 13, and showed symptoms of the disease on April 26, according to S. P. Hodgkinson, the ship's surgeon, who had the man isolated and the after steerage disinfected.

After examining the patient, Dr. Joseph J. O'Connell, the Health Officer of the Port, had him sent to Swinburne Island for treatment, and the 375 men in his section of the steerage were sent to Hoffman Island for observation.

At Quarantine the Carpathia was thoroughly disinfected and she came to her pier at 5:30 o'clock to land her seventy first and 222 second cabin passengers. The cabin passengers believed the typhus case was a mild attack of smallpox.

This is the second case of typhus to reach New York. The other was the third engineer of the Greek steamship Christoferos, who arrived in New York last Saturday and wes sent to Swinburne Island.

ART MUSEUM A PURCHASER.

The Metrouolitan Museum of Art was one of the purchasers at the sale of ancient Chinese and Persian porcelain and pottery "consigned on account of the European war," with a collection of snuff bottles, jades and antique cloisonnes, at the Anderson Galleries yesterday afternoon, paying $100 for a Persian plate. This was of the sixteenth century, deep with a flaring rim, coarse paste, with a crackle glaze over an ivory ground decorated with flowers and with an ornamental inscription in black, green, blue, and aubergine. It was from an exposition of masterpieces of Mohammedan art of Munich, 1910.

DEFENDS LONG BEACH VOTE.

Village President Explains Plans for $200,000 Improvements.

John G. Gerhard, President of the Board of Trustees of Long Beach, L. I., said yesterday that an injustice had been done to the village in the recently published statements that the decision to spend $200,000 for new street work was due chiefly to the voting force of the employes as against that of the property owners.

"The truth of the matter is," said Mr. Gerhard, "that in these village elections which have to do with the appropriation of money for local improvements, only resident property owners are entitled to vote. Of the ninety-odd resident property owners at Long Beach fifty voted on the proposition to expend $200,000, and every vote was in favor. This money is to be used for repairing old streets.

Mr. Gerhard said that there was absolute unanimity in the expenditure of the money for the improvement of Long Beach. Another improvement lately effected is the installation of gas through the village. The pipes are being laid along the main Long Beach road to Rockville Centre; a road about three miles long, which, although used by thousands of automobiles every season, never has been lighted. Arrangements have been made to install eighty-candle-power lights at a distance of 200 feet. The greater part of the board walk is to be surfaced with concrete.

NEW DESTROYER LAUNCHED.

QUINCY, Mass., May 4.—The Tucker, the newest and one of the largest torpedo boat destroyers built for the United States Navy, was launched at the yards of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation today.

The Tucker measures 315 feet over all, with a beam of 20 feet 10 inches and depth 17 feet 7 inches. The displacement is 1,000 tons an dthe vessel is equipped with a 17,000 horse power engine.

The Tucker is named for Commodore Samuel Tucker, who served in the wars of the Revolution and of 1812. Mrs. William Garty of Brookline, a lineal descendant of the commodore, acted as sponsor.

Cow Stolen in an Auto Truck.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May 4.—Thieves early this morning stole a cow from the barn on the farm of Randolph Lee at Yorktown and carted her away in an auto truck. They muffled their engine so it could not be heard by Lee, but Deputy Sheriff Carpenter trailed the car from the farm to the State road by the impression left by the hard rubber tires. Several days ago two pigs were stolen by an automobile party passing through Ardsley. The "porkers" squealed so much that the thieves had to release them.

The Equitable is renting solely on its merit

That headline was inspired by a perusal of the Equitable rent roll—a rent roll which embraces many names that are household words in the world of commerce and finance—a rent roll which includes firms and organizations whose names are synonymous terms for business acumen and sagacity—a rent roll which is far too hard-headed in character ever to entertain any proposition except on the basis of merit.

Every Equitable tenant to date has come in after establishing the merit of the Equitable proposition, and we invite you to come in by the same route.

VACUUM CUP TIRES
With this heavy car average as a basis, the light car owner's expectations of far greater mileage service are easily realized, for mileage increases as weight decreases.
This assurance of top-notch mileage service is made the more pronounced by the toughening process developed by us since the A.C.A. tryout and applied in the construction of 1915 V.C.'s.
This process gives 50% more wear resistance. It also doubles the effective life of the Vacuum Cups, guaranteed not to skid on wet or greasy pavements.
As to prices, our new schedule makes Vacuum Cup Tires the lowest priced tires having any kind of non-skid device added to a tread of regular thickness.
Pennsylvania Gray and Puregum Red Inner Tubes also materially reduced in price—each bearing an unqualified guarantee.

The Light Six As It Will Be
HUDSON $1550 F. O. B. Detroit
7-Passenger Phaeton
3-Passenger Roadster
Think What Security One Gets in a HUDSON
The HUDSON is built by one of the strongest concerns in the industry.
It is built by the largest builder of class cars—cars that cost over $1250.
It is designed by Howard E. Coffin, whose designs have for years led the trend in America.
And 12,000 owners in 43 countries have proved this Light Six faultless. In the past two seasons they have driven it at least 30 million miles.
Our Prize Success
There have been many successful HUDSONS, but none so successful as this. When this Light Six came out—the first model—it took a year to catch up with our orders.
Sales last year—$11,500,000—nearly doubled the year before. This year shows another amazing increase.
And never was a car so widely copied as this HUDSON—the pioneer Light Six.
Look a Year Ahead
When you buy a Light Six look a year ahead. Do more than consider how rival cars perform now. There are many years coming for the car you buy.
You want a Light Six when you buy a class car. You want lightness, economy, low upkeep cost. Crude, heavy cars are not popular now.
Get the Light Six that has proved itself right. The HUDSON has done that for two seasons, in more than 12,000 hands.
Luxury's High Mark
This HUDSON sets a new high mark, in beauty, finish, comfort and equipment. We have given a whole year to refinements since the model itself was perfected. You will be proud to own it.
Last spring there was a shortage of HUDSONS. Buyers waited weeks for cars. Now we have larger output, but there will be far from enough, we think. With such a popular car it is wise to choose early. We urge you to come this week.

MORE RIPPER CRIMES FEARED BY POLICE

Thought to be Work of Man Normal Except When Under Murderous Impulse.

WARN PARENTS OF DANGER

Two More Children Found Who Barely Escaped the Fate of Little Charlie Murray.

A few minutes before Charles Murray, the four-and-a-half-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Murray, was murdered by a "Jack-the-Ripper" in the dary hallway of his home, 270 First Avenue, near Sixteenth Street, on Monday evening, Louisa Niedig, the six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilhelm Niedig, 247 Avenue B, was attacked in a hallway just five doors from the place of the murder. She frightened her assailant away by her screams.

Crimes of this character are to be expected at intervals till the maniac "ripper" is caught, according to Inspector Joseph Faurot, who is in charge of the hundred detectives searching for the murderer, and Coroner Israel Feinberg.

The ripper type, according to Inspector Faurot, is one of the shrewdest and most elusive of criminals, because he may appear to be normal, mingle with other persons without causing suspicion, and then suddenly yield to a murderous impulse. Consequently, the murderer of little Charles Murray, who, the police believe, also was the slayer of little Leonora Anna Cohn in the hallway of her home, 352 Third Avenue, last March, may elude the detectives and commit more crimes.

"This is a terrible situation," said Coroner Feinberg. "If this slayer is not apprehended within ten days we may expect more similar crimes. I believe all parents should be warned to see that their children are safe at home before dark."

The description Louisa Niedig gave of the man who attacked her coincides in several details with that furnished by Mamie Murray, the eight-year-old sister of Charles, who saw a man leaving the tenement just before the body of Charles was found. In a geenral way, also, it is the description of a man who has annoyed several little girls in that neighborhood recently.

Still another little girl, who was attacked in the neighborhood of 270 First Avenue, several nights ago, has been found by the police, but they are withholding her name. She is walking the streets now with detectives following ready to seize the first man who accosts her. They believe the appearance of this little girl will attract the same man who seized her before if he should be haunting the scenes of his former crimes.

Louisa Niedig was still excited yesterday afternoon when she told about the man who attacked her. She lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilhelm Niedig, who have a bakery at 247 Avenue B. An aunt of the little girl, Mrs. Josie Larber, living next door at 249 Avenue B, is a saleswoman in a bakery at 260 First Avenue, in the middle of the same block where Charles Murray was slain.

Louisa late in the afternoon went around to the bakery in First Avenue to return with her aunt, following her custom. She had to wait until closing time, and spent the interval playing in front of the bakery. While there, a man walked up and said: "Where do you live little girl?"

The child, bearing in mind her mother's admonition never to speak to strangers, made no reply. Suddenly, she said, the man seized her right arm and dragged her into the hallway adjoining the bakery where her aunt was at work. The child remembers that she screamed, but she was hardly able to recall what happened before she was picked up by Mrs. Lillian Hussey, living at 260 First Avenue, who heard the cries and ran to her.

Mrs. Hussey is the daughter of the janitres of the building, and lives on the second floor. She said it must have been near 7:30 o'clock when the screms attracted her. She was dressing to go to church at 7:45, and was positive about the hour when Louisa was found by her in the hall.

When Mrs. Hussey opened the door of her room and looked down the stairway she saw the child crouching and called to her to come up. Then she went downstairs. The child told Mrs. Hussey she had been dragged into the hall by a strange man, and Mrs. Hussey took her into the bakery adjoining and gave her over to her aunt. There she repeated her story. Yesterday she showed blue marks on her right arm, which she said was caused by the man's grip.

According to Louisa, the man who attacked her was of medium height, of slight build, and wore a dark suit, probably brown. He wore no overcoat, but had on a black derby hat. He had a black mustache, and his clothing was neat.

A man answering this description, except for the added detail of a Van Dyke beard, several times in the last few months has annoyed Rose Masler, 12 years old, who lives at 278 First Avenue, just a block above the home of Charles Murray. Her annoyer has been seen also by Bella Gelb, 13 years old, living at 349 Seventeenth Street.

Rose said she first noticed the man while skating in Stuyvesant Park, where she went after school. While she was skating the man followed her. When she sat down to rest he came to the same bench and sat beside her. He never spoke, Rose said, and the last time she saw him was about Easter. She and her friend, Bella, were walking along Second Avenue at Seventeenth Street. Suddenly Bella said: "There's the man who followed you. I believe he's following us now. Let's walk over toward Third Avenue and see if he follows us."

Acting on Bella's suggestion, the two walked toward Third Avenue, and the man turned out of Second Avenue across Seventeenth Street and followed them. Then Bella suggested to Rose that they stop in front of a shoe store on Third Avenue between Seventeenth and Eighteenth Streets and wait. "Sure enough," said Bella, "we looked in the glass window and saw the reflection of the man still following us." After that the girls hurried home.

An examination of the body of Charlie Murray was made yesterday by Dr. Otto H. Schultze, Medical Examiner for the District Attorney, in the presence of Coroner Israel Feinberg, Coroner's Physician Lehane, and Inspector Faurot. There were no marks about the throat to show he had been strangled to prevent an outcry. The autopsy confirmed the preliminary investigation showing that part of the liver was missing.

The work of a hundred detectives is being directed by Commissioner Woods, his Secretary, Guy H. Scull; Second Deputy Commissioner, Frank A. Lord; Inspector Faurot, Inspector Cray and Captain Gilden. Some of the police officials spent all of Monday night working on the few clues that had been found. The detectives are making a house to house search in the neighborhood of the crime.

Joseph A. Daly, who refused his address; Edward Gilmartin, 20 years old, 746 Third Avenue, and Antonio Cunonella, 40 years old, living at the Olive Tree Inn, in East Twenty-third Street, all arrested soon after detectives began the search for the "ripper," were arraigned before Magistrate Murphy in the Yorkville Court. The first two were held in $1,500 bail until tomorrow, when they made a plea for an adjournment. The third, technically charged with vagrancy, was held in $1,000 bail also until tomorrow.

PRAISES WORK OF FAUROT.

Commissioner Denies Detective Bureau Is to Have a New Head.

A report that Inspector Joseph Faurot, in charge of the Detective Bureau at Police Headquarters, was to be removed, was denied yesterday by Commissioner Arthur Woods soon after he read it in a morning newspaper.

"We have had a series of startling crimes which call for the best work of the police," said Commissioner Woods, "but the public can rest assured that we will put forth our best efforts.

"With reference to the published story that Inspector Faurot is to be removed from command of the Detective Bureau, there is no foundation for it. The bureau has done much good work. Lately there have been several crimes of which we have not yet found the perpetrators, but the work of Inspector Faurot and his men has been untiring, and has shown distinct detective ability.

"The fact that the perpetrators of these crimes have not been found does not mean that Inspector Faurot may not be the best man to head the Detective Bureau. It is wholly unjust to him, and cannot but make his task more difficult to have a story published without foundation that tends to cast discredit upon him."

OFFER PLEA FOR FRANK.

Illinois Legislature Asked to Pass Resolution in His Behalf.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 4.—The Illinois Legislature was asked today to pass resolutions asking for the suspension of the death sentence on Leo M. Frank, sentenced to death at Atlanta for the murder of Mary Phagan.

The resolution is addressed to the Governor of Georgia, who is urged to act on the ground that "a civilized Christian nation has ever supported the principle that the law is not meant to destroy, and that it has ever been the prerogative of the people to petition for a redress of grievances, and that since there is a reasonable doubt in the minds of the able jurists of the United States Supreme Court who presented the minority opinion, the suspension of the death sentence should be exercised."

The resolution was read into the records of the Legislature by Senator Willit H. Cornwall of Chicag oand was referred to the Committee of the Whole.

10,000 Sign Cassidy Petition.

More than 10,000 residents of Queens County, among them a number of lawyers and influential men who had always been politically opposed to him, have signed a petition to Governor Whitman praying for the pardoning of Joseph Cassidy, the former Queens "boss," who wa ssentenced to Sing Sing for a term of not less than one year for selling a nomination for the Supreme Court bench to William Willett.

Left $5 to Pay $23,000 Bequests.

Charles Bentzen, who died on Dec. 2, 1914, drew his will on Nov. 25, 1913, making bequests that aggregated $23,000, of which $2,000 was to go to the Home for Sailors at Holmestrand, Norway; $9,000 to his widow, Mary Bentzen of 240 West Twelfth Street, and the residue to relatives. Mrs. Bentzen filed the instrument for probate yesterday, and with it a petition which recites that the estate amounts to about $5, and that there are not sufficient funds to pay the funeral expenses.

40 DETECTIVES SEEK DYNAMITER IN BRONX

Two Prisoners, Arrested on Suspicion, Are Held Under the Sullivan Law.

ONE PREPARED TO QUIT CITY

Sixty Men Clear the Borough Hall of Debris—Heavy Guard of Police on Duty.

While detectives of the Bronx under the direction of Captain Andrew Wines conducted an investigation yesterday to establish the identity of the persons who partly wrecked the Borough Hall, at 177th Street and Third Avenue, with dynamite on Monday evening, they were obliged to confess late at night that little of a definite nature had been accomplished.

Twenty detectives were at work, most of them in the Italian district, where it is believed that the men guilty of the crime live. They kept trace of the movements of all persons who had been under suspicion at the time of the Court House explosion of last November, but no new arrests followed. At night an equal number of detectives was sent out with instructions to dress themselves so as to avoid attracting attention, and to shadow suspected persons. Late at night it was said that important developments might be expected soon, but on what grounds they based their optimism the detectives would not state.

Importance was attached by the police to the arrest, shortly after the explosion, of Antonio Coldeguidia of 530 East 189th Street and Alfonso Maretti of 189th Street and Belmont Avenue, who were found near the Borough Hall. Coldeguidia carried a loaded revolver, and a revolver was found in Maretti's room. The important feature, according to the police, was that the men were unable to tell satisfactory stories about their activities just before the explosion. It was stated by the police that the backs of Maretti's coat and his hat were covered with dirt. The man who placed the dynamite had to stoop beneath the cellar stairs of the Borough Hall, it was pointed out. The prisoners could not explain how Maretti's clothing had become soiled.

Prepared to Leave City.

It was also learned at Marietti's boarding house that he had packed a suit case the night before and had said that he was going away. In the morning the prisoners were taken to Police Headquarters where they were examined by Acting Captain Tunney, and the members of the anarchist and bomb squad, but none of the detectives had seen the men before. In the West Farms Court they were held under $5,000 bail for trial by Magistrate Simms. The charge against them was violating the Sullivan law. Both denied any connection with the attack on the Borough Hall.

Police Commissioner Woods took up the case personally and directed Deputy Commissioner Lord and his Secretary, Guy B. Scull, to inspect the building and give what aid they could to the Bronx Police Department.

The detectives were pretty well satisfied that the crime was committed by the men who exploded dynamite at the Court House last Fall. District Attorney Martin thought that friends of those who had been convicted in the "white slave" prosecutions were responsible and that there had been no intention to injure Borough President Mathewson, whose rooms were near the spot where the dynamite was exploded. Mr. Martin said that he believed there was an organized band and that he would not rest content until all of the men who thus showed their contempt for the government were in jail.

Mr. Mathewson said he was sure that the bomb had not been exploded as a threat to him, and pointed out that it would have been easy for the men to place it much nearer his rooms if they intended to harm him. He scouted the idea that the men had been actuated by the fact that orders he had issued drew men out of work temporarily. One of these orders was that other material than bluestone could be used for paving, an order which affected many stone masons. The police investigated this phase of the case, and Captain Wines came to the conclusion that Mr. Mathewson was right in his deductions. However, he kept a force of men working along this line as he was loath to give up any clue which gave the slightest promise of results.

Difficulty of Detection.

The police admitted they had found their task most difficult, as no one had seen the persons who exploded the dynamite leave the Borough Hall. The dynamite was placed in the rear of the building where it was dark, and the plotters had the opportunity to do their work with but slight danger of detection. The two men arrested were found about seventy feet from the place where the explosion occurred but no one had noticed them until several minutes after the explosion.

An examination of the Borough Hall showed that the foundations had not been damaged seriously, although the manner in which several of the rooms were wrecked showed the explosion was powerful. No trace could be found of fragments of a bomb and the police were convinced that the explosion had been caused by several sticks of dynamite which had been fastened together with a fuse attached.

Sixty men under Arthur J. Largy, Superintendent of Public Buildings, and S. Stewart Wilson, Superintendent of Highways, went to work at 6 o'clock in the morning clearing up the débris and glaziers replaced the windows which had been shattered. By 9 o'clock most of the offices were in shape for occupancy except the clerk's office in the Borough President's rooms and the offices of the Highway Department, the flooring of which had been ripped out.

Police reserves were detailed to keep the crowds away from the building, and none was admitted who did not have business. Detectives were dtailed to watch all who went to the building and to mix with the crowd which collected in the streets. In fact, the Borough Hall looked a good deal like an armed camp.

Esterbrook Acts as Mayor.

O. Grant Esterbrook, Vice Chairman of the Board of Aldermen, was acting Mayor of the city yesterday afternoon. George McAneny, President of the Board of Aldermen, who had taken the place of Mayor Mitchel during his vacation in the West, left town for Troy, where he spoke last night to the Chamber of Commerce on Home Rule for cities. The Aldermen held a very short session yesterday and transacted no important business.

John Bunny's Estate $8,000.

Although he was one of the highest salaried of the film players, John Bunny, the famous motion picture comedian, left an estate of only $8,000, according to a statement filed with his will yesterday in the Surrogate's Court, Brooklyn. All of the property goes to his widow, Mrs. Clara Bunny. The comedian died at his home, 1,416 Glenwood Road, Brooklyn, on April 26.

Hampton Furniture for the Country Dining Room

THE air of buoyant cheeriness, which should make of the sunny Country House Dining Room one of the most delightsome of gathering places, may be enhanced by the apt selection of its furniture.

Comparatively easy will that task be found if recourse be had to those Hampton Shops Reproductions which reflect the charming Sheraton tradition — the hospitable round Table, for instance, surrounded by the quaintly backed but comfortable Chairs, or the bow-fronted Side Table whose delicate carvings and slender tapering legs give to it a touch of aristocratic distinction.

BOARD OF REVIEW HEARS NUCKOLS CASE

Harness Horse Driver Appeals, but Remains Under Suspension Pending Decision.

Several cases held over from their last session, which was held in January, were heard yesterday at the May meeting of the Board of Review of the National Trotting Association at the Murray Hill Hotel.

New evidence was produced in the case of Vance Nuckols versus the National Trotting Association, in which the well-known driver of trotters appealed against the decision of the board.

According to the evidence produced at the previous sessions of the board, it was alleged that Nuckols did not try to win a certain race which was run at Rockport, Ohio, on Oct. 22, 1914. After hearing the case the board suspended Nuckols indefinitely.

Yesterday Nuckols appealed against this decision, and asked that the case be reopened, as he wished to produce new witnesses. The request was granted and the case reheard. After hearing the testimony on both sides, the board reserved its decision. Meanwhile Nuckols remains indefinitely suspended.

A. B. Richardson, who had been accused of running a "ringer" and then selling him for $6,000 to Thomas W. Murphy, asked for reinstatement. The application was denied. According to the evidence produced the horse, Dr. Spikes, was named Jack Leondon with a meticious mark of 2:12¼, which permitted him to enter a number of slow classes in which he won.

The application of E. Douglas for the removal of expulsion made May 8, 1914, was granted. Douglas was accused of driving a ringer under the name of Joe A., 2:13¼, during the Summer of 1912.

The members of the board present were: P. P. Johnson, President, Lexington, Ky.; John C. Welty, Canton, Ohio, third Vice President; A. P. Sandles, Ottawa, Ont., Western District; J. M. Johnson, Boston, Mass., Eastern District; J. T. Settle, Syracuse, and T. P. De Forrest, Cleveland, and W. H. Gocher, Hartford, Conn., Secretary.

HORSE COURT IN WEST.

American Trotting Association Expels Dr. Eganbright for Ringing.

CHICAGO, May 4.—An order of expulsion against Dr. C. H. Ergenbright of Liberty, Ind., was entered by the Board of Appeals of the American Trotting Association which held its Spring meeting here today. Twenty-two other disputes were discussed and disposed of.

With the order of expulsion against Dr. Ergenbright was one suspending the bay mare Celia W., which animal, it was alleged by the board members, raced under the alias Mamie Woodland. It was ordered that the suspension remain in force until $280, alleged to have been won illegally by Celia W. in 1913, was returned to the trotting association for redistribution.

The protest against the payment of first and second moneys in the 2:13 pace at Bay City, Mich., Sept. 8, 1914, to the chestnut gelding Eddie Dillard and the chestnut horse Shadeline was sustained on the ground that the animals were ineligible. It was ordered that their winnings be redistributed under the rules. The protest was made by C. E. Morgan of Charlotte, Mich. Merrill & Vibber of Breckenridge, Mich., owned Eddie Dillard and J. R. Sears of Detroit owned Shadaline.

It was ordered that the application for reinstatement made by John Carr of Blackwell, Okla., be granted.

COURTNEY SHIFTS CREWS.

Almost Daily Changes in Boating of Men at Cornell.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 4.—Continued shifts in the boating of the Cornell crews are being made almost every day, but thus far Coach Courtney has been unable to select a satisfactory combination. Commodore Ellms, who has been stroking the first boat for several days, has been called away to be a witness at a damage suit in Geneva, and Collyer is stroking the 'Varsity at present. The 'Varsity in a time trial race with the second eight won by two lengths, but the time is reported to have been slower than that made by last year's crew at the same time. The new 'Varsity eight contains all of the men remaining from last year's crew, two sophomores, the stroke of last year's junior eight, and two new men. It is boated as follows: Terriberry, bow; Cushing, 2; Welles, 3; Andrus, 4; Moir, 5; Stahl, 6; O'Brien, 7; Ellms or Collyer, stroke; McCandless, coxswain.

40 CARS IN SPEEDWAY RACE.

All American Made Except Ten—Trials May 21, 22, and 23.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 4.—Two additional mail entries have been received for the next Indianapolis 500-mile race, increasing the total count for that event to forty.

They are a third Duesenberg, entered by F. S. Duesenberg of Minneapolis, Minn., no driver named, and a Shambaugh special, entered by Charles Shambaugh of Lafayette, Ind. Shambaugh will drive his car.

An "unknown" car was entered at the eleventh hour by an Indianapolis man, but is not officially listed, inasmuch as the owner desired his name withheld until he ascertained whether his car would be finished in time.

Rene Thomas, who cabled his entry to the Speedway management early in the Spring, is not coming after all. Thomas, after failing originally to interest the Delage factory in loaning him a car, tried to raise the necessary capital to buy the machine, but failed in that also.

It is not thought, however, that he will be missed, as Dario Resta, winner of the last Vanderbilt and Grand Prize races at San Francisco, is counted on as being more than able to fill his shoes. The elimination trials will be held May 21, 22, and 23.

COLUMBIA YOUNGSTERS WIN.

Columbia's freshmen humbled De Witt Clinton High School in their annual track and fried meet on South Field yesterday afternoon by the score of 51 to 39. The events were more closely contested than the score would indicate. Each team won five events, but the Columbia youngsters captured seven of the ten second places. Despite a slow field, due to rain, there were some very creditable performances.

W. A. White scored the most points for the freshmen, winning both the high and low hurdles against keen opposition. In the high hurdles he barely beat out I. Jacobson, who gave him a hard fight. White's performance of winning two firsts was equaled by D. Raimonds, Clinton's speedy sprinter, who took first in both the 100 and 220 yards, winning the latter event handily in the good time of 24 1-5.

The closets race was the quarter mile, which was won by L. Teigenow of the Red and Black in the very fast time of 55 seconds. Teigenow took the lead from the start, lost it and then won out in a blanket finish from A. Zychlinski of the freshmen in the last few yards. Another Clinton runner, A. Bislo, finished third, a scant yard behind.

A. L. Huelsenbeck, former P. S. A. L. champion at Manual Training, won the mile, and took second in the half-mile race for the Columbia first-year men. J. H. Brown won the shot-put for Columbia with a put of 38 feet 9¼ inches. Brown also placed in the low hurdles. The summaries:

100-Yard Dash.—Won by D. Raimonds, Clinton; second, M. Wettels, Clinton; third, H. Mahnken, 1918. Time—0:10 3-5.

220-Yard Dash.—Won by D. Raimonds, Clinton; second, W. Alzamora, 1918; third, M. Wettels, Clinton. Time—0:24 1-5.

Mile Run.—Won by A. L. Huelsenbeck, 1918; second, H. Oswald, 1918; third, L. Cokefair. Time—4:54 4-5.

120-Yard High Hurdles.—Won by W. A. Waite, 1918; second, M. Ripin, 1918; third, I. Jacobson, Clinton. Time—0:19 4-5.

220-Yard Low Hurdles.—Won by W. A. Waite, 1918; second, J. H. Brown, 1918; third, I. Jacobson, Clinton. Time—0:28 1-5.

Running High Jump.—Won by L. Belsky, Clinton, with a jump of 5 feet 3 inches; second, B. Spiro, clinton, with a jump of 5 feet 1 inch; tie for third between Shevlin and Lehman, 1918, with a jump of 5 feet.

Running Broad Jump.—Won by H. Lucas, Clinton, with a jump of 18 feet 6 inches; second, M. Ripin, 1918, with a jump of 17 feet 7⅝ inches; third, H. Henken, 1918, with a jump of 17 feet 4 inches.

Shot Put.—Won by J. H. Brown, with a put of 38 feet 9¼ inches; B. Spiro, Clinton, second, with a put of 37 feet 5 inches; L. Zychlinski, Clinton, third, with a put of 35 feet 5¾ inches.

NEW EQUESTRIAN RECORD.

Australian Women Clear Bars at 6½ Feet—Saddle Controversy.

In Australia the horse has lost little of his popularity notwithstanding motor cycles are common in the "back blocks," and equine skill is as much admired now as in the far-off days of the bush-rangers.

In Sydney recently in the ladies' jumping contests at the Royal Agricultural Show, what is said to be a world's record has been made by Mrs. E. M. Stace, an Australian equestienne of note. Riding Emu Plains she cleared the bars at 6 feet 6 inches at the first try. Miss Myra Smith riding Bandolier did the same, but on the second try.

The field was very wet from heavy rains and very slippery, but it is a remarkable fact that every lady who rode astride came to grief at least once, whereas the only two competitors who rode in side-saddles—one of whom was Mrs. Stace—did not suffer any falls.

The competitors numbered eleven, one of whom was a girl of 15. Some of the tumbles were pretty severe. Mrs. Stace said subsequently that she was a firm advocate of side-saddle ridding for girls. All her successes—and she has been riding professionally for nineteen years—have been attained by means of the side-saddle method, although she learned the other style early in her career. To sit astride, she said might be all very well for a lady till there was a pronounced jolt. One of Mrs. Stace's feats—some years ago—was taking twelve horses in all over ninety-six steeplechase fences, each fence being four feet high.

As for Miss Smith, she is a typical "back block" girl. She is not yet 22 years old. She has ridden horses since she was 4 years old, her father having been a ranchman. She has successfully competed at numerous agricultural shows, and the fact that she has twice broken her collarbone in spills has not dampened her ardor. She rides astride and unlike Mrs. Stace believes it is the more rational way in which to sit upon a horse.

CRICKET'S A CEREMONY.

Baseball's a Game, Says a British Officer with the Allied Armies.

The popularity attained by the American game of baseball among the soldiers of the warring nations in Europe is interesting. The Canadian soldiers, who have left their homes on this side of the sea to fight for England, are responsible for the introduction of America's national game on the field of battle, and those who are fighting for their countries and glory displayed a remarkable aptitude in becoming familiar with the essential points of the diamond game.

William G. Shepherd, a correspondent, at present stationed in Northern France, in a dispatch makes known the popularity of baseball as a pastime among the soldiers of France and England, and refers to the Canadian soldiers as missionaries of baseball behind the Allies' lines.

Shepherd, in his correspondence, dated from Northern France, says:

"It's baseball time in France. Spring is here; the mud has gone; when a soldier isn't fighting he must be playing, and the only game a Canadian knows is baseball.

France is beholding baseball for the first time. England is playing it. The Canadians are missionaries of baseball behind the Allies' lines, and they get so much out of it that the French and British are beginning to believe that it is really a good game after all.

The English cricket players, in a dozen places behind the British lines, have thrown away their cricket paddles and are taking up the baseball bat with the Canadians.

Morning, noon, and night there are baseball games going on behind the lines wherever a few Canadians are gathered together. Sometimes the game is one-old-cat, sometimes it's only knocking up flies. But at certain times there has been inter-company baseball games with the dollars of the Canadians staked on the result, and with British and French officers betting as enthusiastically as anybody else.

"Cricket's a ceremony, baseball's a game," said one British Colonel, who has been converted to baseball. "You have to have a large number of men to play cricket and it takes a long time to play a game, but with this odd game of baseball you can start with any number of men and play as long or short as you please. And you get results quickly."

"Why, do you know," he continued, "half a dozen fellows can get out their bat and ball and have a ripping time for half an hour, any old time, while one can't have that sort of fun at cricket impromptu, don't you know."

NEW YORK A.C. TRACK MEN CALLED OUT

Coach Wefers Expects to Develop Team That Will Defeat the Irish-Americans.

Local track and field representatives of the New York Athletic Club will receive notifications today to report to Coach Bernie Wefers at South Field, Columbia University, tomorrow afternoon, for their first practice of the season. The New York athletes were due to get started the first of this month, but were delayed almost a week. Paul Pilgrim yesterday mailed about forty notices to his men, and it is expected that thirty or more will be at South Field tomorrow. The Mercury Footers will accept the hospitality of Columbia for a month only, then will remove their baggage to Travers Island, the New York A. C. Summer home.

There are few acquisitions to the Mercury Foot track aggregation, but some of the old men have shown during the month such marked improvement over their last year's form that they are already looking forward to a long-expected victory over the Irish-American A. C. in the Metropolitan senior championships. The Metropolitan Association has not as yet announced the date for this title meet, but there is some indication that it will be held in June, and probably at Travers Island. Last year the Irish team came through a victor after a close fight.

Homer Baker, the international half-mile champion, is back in "harness," and has been quietly preparing himself for a rigorous season. His injured leg has almost entirely healed, and he reports himself in fine shape to start at any time. He will be among the candidates at South Field tomorrow. The Gordon brothers, Willie, Freeland, and Louis, will also be there.

In a letter to Paul Pilgrim, Freeland Gordon recently denied that he had retired, and said he would be as active as last year on the cinderpath. Freeland ran second to Abel Kiviat in the metropolitan championship mile last Fall. Among others for whom calls were issued are Danny Kuhn, middle-distancer; Matt Adams, champion jumper; Maxfield, weight thrower; Roos, shot putter; Elliott, shot putter and javelin thrower; Eddie Carroll, the one-armed schoolboy broad jumper; J. V. Baker, the up-State jumper, who was recently reinstated by the Registration Committee after having sustained a long suspension during the Winter for an infraction of the eligibility rules in connection with the last senior "Mets."; Frank P. McNally, sprinter; Ed Maurer, sprinter; Oltman, sprinter, and R. E. Daisel, sprinter.

In addition to these men there will be a large number of college athletes carrying the winged foot who will be prepared by their college trainers and will not report until after school closes in June. Included in this list are Val Wilkie of Yale, quarter-miler; Poucher of Yale, a distance runner; Wesley Oler, Jr., Yale, metropolitan high-jump champion; J. B. Peso, miler, of the University of Pennsylvania; Balcolm of Pennsylvania, a quarter-miler and former Thirteenth Regiment representative; Donald Tcenholm, hurdler; Braun, hurdler, and Lagay, distancer of Dartmouth College; Peterson, half-miler, and K. Curtis, pole vaulter of Syracuse University, and Nagle of Yale, a pole vaulter.

As the outdoor season advances, this list of college men will be augmented, so that the Mercury Foot team when recruited to full strength will show up more prominently than in any recent year as a metropolitan senior championship contender.

Some of the athletes mentioned will make the trip to San Francisco for the national championships this Summer, but just who they will be depends on their showing during the outdoor competition prior to the title games.

It is likely that Tommy Lennon, who captured a second in last year's "Mets," will be out for a big part of this season with a pulled tendon. This youngster was coming along in great shape under Coach Orton of the University of Pennsylvania, and was in line for a title this summer.

Pilgrim, who is assistant to Captain Arthur McAleenan, was not certain yesterday how many juniors the New York A. C. would place in training, but he has been assured there will be plenty of men of high class to look after the metropolitan championship for the New Yorks.

Any records made under proper conditions at Travers Island this year will be recognized by the Amateur Athletic Union, for the track has been remeasured twelve inches, instead of eighteen, from the boarder to conform with the International Athletic Federation rule, adopted recently by the A. A. U. The change was made several days ago. Hannes Kolehmainen will not receive credit for his fifteen-mile American record made at the Celtic Park on Sunday because the Irish-American A. C. overlooked the fact that their cinderpath should have been remeasured. It is likely that the Winged Fist organization will take steps now to provide for future record-breaking contests.

Mike Dorizas, the Greek strongman of the University of Pennsylvania, has been invited to take part in the Post Office clerks' games at Celtic Park on Sunday, May 23. Entry blanks were issued yesterday for this meet. The usual list of events for outdoor meets has been arranged.

PANAMA FAIR GOLF.

OAKLAND, Cal., May 4.—The first round of the Panama-Pacific Exposition amateur handicap golf tournament, played here today on the links of the Claremont Country Club, resulted in the elimination of C. S. Maud, a former Pacific Coast champion of the San Francisco Golf and Country Club, by Heinrich Schmidt of the Claremont Club. Schmidt, who was runner-up in the recent Panama-Pacific Exposition championship tournament, won 2 up in 18 holes.

H. Spens-Black and Gerald Marx, both of the Claremont Club, contested 22 holes before the former proved the winner, 1 up.

The four players who won their matches today will meet tomorrow in the second round.

Essex C. C. C. Golf Fixtures.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., May 4.—With the mountainside course of the Essex County Country Club selected for the New Jersey State golf championship to be held here from June 10 to 12, inclusive, announcement has been made by the Golf Committee of the ratings of the three divisions. They are: Class A, 0 to 15 handicap, inclusive; Class B, 16 to 22 handicap, inclusive; Class C, 23 and over. The contests for women opened today and embraces a series of tournaments running to June 22. The men's events for the season will be:

May 8—Best ball foursome, 18 holes medal play, two pairs to qualify and play off at handicap match play on or before May 15.

May 15—Club championship, 18 holes medal play to qualify, first sixteen to play for the title at match play.

May 22—First round club championship, 18 holes match play.

May 29—Second round club championship, 18 holes.

May 31—Thirty-six holes, selected 18 holes to count, for Classes A, B, and C.

June 5—Eighteen holes medal play for Classes A, B, and C. Third round club championship.

June 10 to 12—New Jersey State championship.

June 26—Flag tournament for Classes A, B, and C.

July 5—Independence Day Handicap, 18 holes handicap medal play for Classes A, B, and C.

EMBRYO STAR WITH HAMMER

A possible champion for Columbia in the intercollegiate track championships developed yesterday, when Duke Olmsted, the mainstay of the Blue and White field athletes, threw the hammer 162 feet 8 inches in practice. For two years Olmsted has represented Columbia in this event, but until recently has he been able to beat 152 feet. Coach Bernie Wefers has been training Olmsted in the handling of the hammer, and the improvement is marked.

Not only is Olmsted developing in the hammer throw, but under the tutelage of Coach Wefers and Russell Beatty, intercollegiate shot-putting champion, Olmsted is lengthening his put considerably. In competition this Spring his best efforts have been 43 feet 9 inches, but he has not had to extend himself in any of the meets.

SECOND ROUND IN WOMEN'S GOLF PLAY

The second round in the tournament for the metropolitan team golf championship for women was played yesterday over six courses, the seventh contest being a default on the part of Century No. 2 to Montclair. As a result Mrs. Lawrence Swift, President of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association, announced last night that the next matches, scheduled for tomorrow, will be played as follows:

Tuxedo at Apawamis, Montclair at Glen Ridge, Knollwood at Englewood, Nassau drew a bye. In the consolation division the matches will be with Hackensack at Scarsdale, Westfield at Essex County, and Arcola at Richmond County.

Englewood defeated Fairview at Englewood yesterday by 7 points to 3. Only one visitor, Mrs. S. A. Herzog, was successful in her match, and she gathered in 3 points from Miss Elsa Pickhardt. Miss Louise F. Krug has developed a fine long game since last Summer, and it had telling effect against Mrs. Schubert.

Nassau continued its successful start by trouncing Century 8 to 2, the only visitor to win being Mrs. A. S. Rossin, who defeated Mrs. Howard F. Whitney, wife of the Secretary of the United States Golf Association. Knollwood succeeded in blanking Cranford and Tuxedo won at Fox Hills by the narrow margin of one point. Apawamis mustered 6 points to Piping Rock's 3, while at Glen Ridge the Great Neck team lost every possible chance to tally. Arcola treated Siwanoy to a similar dose.

There were defaults in the consolation division, Westbrook and Scarsdale resigning their places, Ardsley defaulting to Hackensack, New Brunswick to Richmond County, and Flushing to Westfield. The summary:

SMITH DEFEATS DIONNE.

Seventh Regiment Tennis Crack Wins Hard Match at Forest Hills.

King Smith, the Seventh Regiment crack, and G. A. L. Dionne, former Captain of the West Side Tennis Club, played an interesting match yesterday in Class A division of the West Side Club Spring Tournament on the club courts at Forest Hills, L. I. Three sets, with a total of forty games were required to reach a decision, but in the end youth triumphed, and Smith won, 10—8, 7—9, 6—0. The contest abounded in play of a high class, and it was not until the third set that Smith's aggressive attack made its effects felt.

The first two sets of the match went to deuce, with the players alternating in the lead. Smith captured the first set by a splendid rally, which gave him Dionne's and his own services. Conditions were reversed in the second set, when the veteran pulled himself together and by clever manoeuvring outplayed Smith. The third and deciding set was a short one. Dionne was unable to get his drives home accurately and failed to capture a game.

The threatening weather kept many contestants away from the courts. Several women players put in an appearance, but, as their opponents were absent, no matches in the women's singles or doubles were played. With favorable weather today it is expected that both of these events will reach the semi-final round.

Karl H. Behr, the internationalist, withdrew from Class A on account of business and defaulted to Gustave F. Touchard. In the Class B singles Plimpton defeated Swain in straight sets, and in the doubles of the same class Myrick and Hildt won from Ely and Swain after two closely contested sets. Henshaw and Watrous qualified for the third round of Class B doubles by a victory over Pine and Johnson. The Summary:

Men's Singles, Class A, Third Round.—King Smith defeated G. A. L. Dionne, 10—8, 7—9, 6—0; Gustave F. Touchard won from Karl H. Behr by default.

Men's Doubles, Class B, Second Round.—Myrick and Hildt defeated Ely and Swain, 6—4, 7—5.

Men's Doubles, Class C, Second Round.—Kershaw and Watrous defeated Pine and S. F. Johnson, 6—1, 1—6, 7—5.

Sleepy Hollow Tennis Tournament.

The second annual invitation tennis tournament of the Sleepy Hollow Country Club will be on the clay courts of the club at Scarborough-on-Hudson during the week beginning May 17. The events consist of men's singles and doubles. The entries, which are limited to thirty-two in both singles and doubles, include the following with their pairings:

Singles.—Karl H. Behr vs. Louis Graves, Dean Mathey vs. Evan Gwynne Evans; Robert Le Roy vs. Fredk. Frelinghuysen, Frederick B. Alexander vs. Arthur M. Lovibond, Fred C. Inman vs. Charles R. Leonard, Theodore R. Pell vs. R. D. Little.

Doubles.—Behr and Pell vs. Le Roy and Mathey, Hackett and Alexander vs. Graves and Lovibond, Little and Inman vs. Leonard and Frelinghuysen.

The other players entered are: W. Merrill Hall, Edmund Pearsee, Gustave F. Touchard, Leonard Beekman, G. Carlton Shafer, Hugh Tallant, Charles M. Bull, Jr., Harold A. Throckmorton, E. H. Whitney, George M. Bodman, Howard A. Plummer, Walter S. Andrews, Cedric A. Major, Lindsay Dunham, Airick H. Man, Jr., E. H. Hooker, Lyle E. Mahan, King Smith, Walter L. Pate and Watson Washburn.

Morris H. S. Boys Win at Nets.

Playing their first match of the season, the New York University freshman tennis team lost to Morris High School yesterday at University Heights by the score of 3 to 2. The summaries:

Singles—Brown, New York, defeated Fertig, Morris, 6—0, 6—1; J. Hauptman, New York, defeated Copeck, Morris, 6—4, 0—6, 8—6; Condon, Morris, defeated Kelting, New York, 6—1, 6—1.

Doubles—Starkman and Cohan, Morris, defeated Hauptman and Olcott, New York, 6—4, 0—6, 8—6.

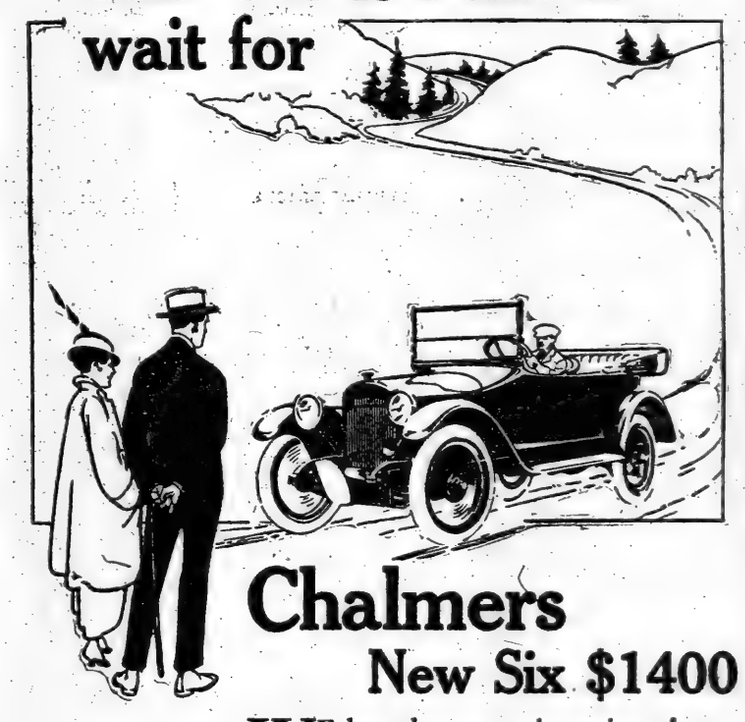
The Car it Paid to wait for



Chalmers
New Six $1400

WE have been very impatient for 18 months.

All around us dealers were selling hundreds of cars ranging in price from $1000 to $1500.

We knew that the Chalmers people were making a car in this class. We knew it would be good when we got it.

But to our impatient inquiries we got one answer, "We haven't tested it hard enough yet."

Now it is here.

The Chalmers people say it has simply been abused over in the Alleghany Mountains for 18 months and stood the racket.

Hence they know what they are offering.

It is the lowest price ($1400) at which a Chalmers car has ever been sold.

Yet it has all the Chalmers quality, and owing to new plans of construction, a distinctly different appearance from any other motor car.

It gets away quicker than any car we've ever seen except a racer. It rides like a Pullman.

It is a "thoroughbred."

We feel that it paid to wait for it.

Come in and see if you don't think so too.

AMERICAN LEAGUE FAVORS WITHDRAWAL OF BASEBALL SUITS—LOCAL CLUBS IDLE

WANTS BASEBALL SUITS WITHDRAWN

American League President's Attitude Points Toward Settlement of War.

BOSTON, May 4.—Ban B. Johnson, President of the American League, today declared himself in favor of withdrawing from the courts of the country suits between organized baseball and the Federal League. A suggestion to this effect from Philip Ball, President of the St. Louis Club of the Federal League, he said, met with his approval.

Mr. Johnson explained that in an earlier statement to the effect that he was willing to have the suit in the Illinois Federal Court, now awaiting decision by Judge Kenesaw M. Landis withdrawn, he did not refer to this case in particular. "The suggestion and the acceptance of it," he said, "referred to the suits generally at issue between the Federal League interests and those allied with the National Commission. Baseball should have been kept out of courts, and it is not now too late to reach an agreement outside of the courtroom, I believe."

President Johnson read dispatches from other sections of the country, in which other baseball league officials said they knew nothing of the proposal to withdraw the suits. He smiled as he read some of them, but he declined to make any comment.

In addition to the suit pending before Judge Landis, in which it has been said that organized baseball as an institution is vitally interested, President Johnson said the other suits to which organized baseball and the Federal League, either directly or indirectly, were parties, affected individual players who had jumped contracts.

He expressed the opinion that the national pastime as professionalized "would be bettered by the trials which it is undergoing." He asserted that peace, or an agreement between organized baseball and the Federal League, was not immediately in sight and had not recently been discussed, but he added that he had no fears for the future.

Mr. Johnson explained that his consent to the withdrawal of the suits applied only to the American League and had nothing to do with the attitude of the National League officials.

"At the suggestion of Philip Ball, President of the St. Louis Federals," Johnson said, "a conference of the attorneys of the American and Federal Leagues was held at Chicago ten days ago for the purpose of discussing the withdrawal of the suits. The attorneys of the National League knew nothing of the meeting. Some progress had been made in the direction of an adjournment when other matters were injected into the discussion, and the conference broke up without accomplishing anything.

"I do not know whether any further efforts will be made to bring about an agreement."

PEACE TERMS SIGNED.

American and Federal Leagues Agree, but Nationals Fail to Enter Pact.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 4.—Peace terms were signed between the American and Federal Leagues at the recent "peace meeting" in Chicago, at which the highest officials of the two leagues conferred and then stood pat on a policy of silence. The National League is the only obstacle now between the consummation of baseball peace.

Absolute verification of the signing of such an agreement, which was rumored in St. Louis about ten days ago, was received tonight. The attorney who drew up the pact admitted that the American and Federal Leagues came to an understanding at the Chicago meeting.

After this understanding had been reached, "other parties," according to the information received tonight, refused to ratify the agreement at this time. The "other parties" mentioned are supposed to be the executives of the National League, as President Tener and others did not proceed to Chicago, although they were expected to do so. Whether the "other parties" will continue to refuse to ratify the terms or whether negotiations are on which will mean a complete ratification this Summer the attorney would not say.

ALL NEWS TO TENER.

National League Head Knows Nothing About Plan to Withdraw Suits.

President John K. Tener of the National League, when informed yesterday of Ban Johnson's statement relative to withdrawing the baseball suits from the Illinois courts, said that he did not understand the American League executive's remarks. President Tener stated that so far as he knew there was no intention at this time on the part of organized baseball in general and the National League in particular to withdraw the case now before Judge Landis.

Other local officials of the National League expressed the opinion that President Johnson did not intend to convey the idea that the suit had been or was about to be withdrawn from court. His remarks, they thought, were merely an expression of personal opinion in the matter of the controversy between organized baseball and the Federal League.

While they appeared to be more or less mystified by President Johnson's statements, it was apparent that the National League authorities did not care to take any definite attitude in the latest development of the baseball controversy.

HERRMANN IN DARK, TOO.

Commission's Chairman Says He Would Know if Rumor Were True.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, May 4.—"I know nothing of any movement looking toward the withdrawing of the Federal League's suit against organized baseball from the Federal Court in Illinois," aid Chairman August Herrmann of the National Commission today when told that President Johnson of the American Leage had given out an interview in which he said that he had consented to such a withdrawal.

"In so far as I know there has been no discussion along this line," continued Mr. Herrmann, "and I believe that I would certainly know of it if such a matter had been discussed."

DENIAL FROM GILMORE.

President of Federals Declares Suits Will Not Be Withdrawn.

FRENCH LICK, Ind., May 4.—"I know nothing of an agreement for the withdrawal of the suit between organized baseball and the Federal League in the United States court at Chicago, and will not consent to such an arrangement," asserted James A. Gilmore, President of the Federal League, here today.

President Gilmore said he had received a number of telegrams stating that Ban Johnson of the American League was going to end the baseball war out of court, but declared he did not know what was meant until the Johnson interview, given out in Boston, was read to him.

"We will never consent to the withdrawal of the suit," reiterated Mr. Gilmore. "The Federal League was organized because it was felt there was room for a third major league. We are perfectly satisfied with the conditions in our organization at the present time."

WARD DOES NOT APPROVE.

Federal League Vice President Will Not Favor Withdrawal of Suits.

Robert B Ward, President of the Brookfeds and Vice President of the Federal League, said that he knew of no plans or arrangements between organized baseball and the independent league that warranted such a statement as credited to Johnson. He said:

"So far as I am concerned personally and as representative of the Federal League I am not ready to have the Illinois suits withdrawn from the court. I don't understand the situation, but you can state for me that the Federal League is not ready to depart from the stand it took when the case was pleaded before Judge Landis. There can be no withdrawal of the controversy from court without the consent of all parties concerned, and I am confident that no official of the Federal League would have taken such a step without informing all other members of the league."

NO SUITS WITHDRAWN YET.

No Effort Has Been Made in Chicago Courts to End Disputes.

CHICAGO, May 4.—None of the baseball suits pending before Judge K. M. Landis in the United States District Court here has been withdrawn, it was state by the Clerk of the Court today. Judge Landis is not in the city.

John J. Healy, who was among the attorneys for organized baseball in the hearing of the Federal League's Sherman law suit before Judge Landis, said he knew nothing of any withdrawal, and declared that lawyers interested in the case had not been drawn into the reported peace negotiations.

Of the several suits pending in this city, only the anti-trust suit mentioned and the suit of the Philadelphia National League against the officers of the Federal League for damages due to some of its players deserting it are in the United States Court. The Johnson, Blanding and Schulz suits, all filed last year, were State court cases, Mr. Healy recalled.

Baltimore Feds Stop Leaders.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 4.—McConnell's wildness in the opening inning was sufficient to give Baltimore two runs, and another in the fourth made just enough to take the first of the series from Chicago this afternoon, 3 to 2. Quinn pitched good ball throughout. Wilson's homer over the left field fence featured.

WALTER JOHNSON LOSES HARD GAME

BOSTON, May 4.—Foster, ably supported at critical moments, outpitched Walter Johnson today, and Boston won from Washington 2 to 0. Speaker's triple scored Hooper, who had been passed in the first, and Lewis's triple and Hoblitzel's single counted again for the Red Sox in the seventh. Double plays started by McNally, a recruit playing third base, were prominent factors in Boston's defense. The score:

KAUFF NOW SATISFIED.

Brookfeds Deserter Will Accept Terms Offered by the Wards.

Benny Kauff, the Brookfeds' star player, who is under suspension for jumping to the Giants, went to Brooklyn yesterday and had a conference with Business Manager Dick Carroll and Manager Lee Magee. It is now said that Benny is satisfied with his contract with the Brooklyn team, and that he will be in the line-up as soon as President Gilmore lifts the suspension.

Kauff will be made an example of in the good cause of discipline. President Gilmore wanted to make the player pay a large fine, but through the intercession of Manager Magee, the fine was not applied. Kauff, while under suspension, will go to Washington Park and practice with the club to keep in shape, but he will not be permitted to sit on the bench during the games.

As for the salary and bonus differences between Owner Robert B. Ward and Kauff, it is stated that these difficulties were adjusted at their meeting on Monday afternoon. As the Brooklyn Club needs Kauff's services badly, it is believed that President Gilmore will raise the player's suspension in a short time.

Lejeune Goes to Minors Again.

PITTSBURGH, May 4.—Larry Lejeune, holder of the world's long distance throwing record, was released by the Pittsburgh National League Baseball Club today to the Sioux City Club of the Western League. It was the third time Lejeune had been released by a major league club. His place in centre field on the Pirate team will be taken by Dan Costello.

TENER SUSPENDS HERZOG.

Reds' Manager Gets Five Days for Altercation with Umpire Rigler.

President John K. Tener of the National League announced yesterday that he had suspended Charles Herzog, manager of the Cincinnati Club, for five days for his altercation with Umpire Rigler at St. Louis last Saturday.

Umpire Hart, who arbitrated on the bases during the St. Louis-Cincinnati game, was also reprimanded by President Tener for not following the disputed play closely, thus necessitating an appeal to Rigler behind the plate, which caused the latter to become involved in fisticuffs with Herzog.

ANOTHER EDDIE COLLINS.

Watt, Columbia's Second Baseman, Said to be Forthcoming Star.

Several of the scouts of the big leagues teams who have visited South Field recently are watching the playing of R. W. Watt, second baseman on the Columbia nine. Several old time followers of the sport on Morningside Heights see in Watt a second Eddie Collins, his hitting and fielding both being of a high order. The scores in the twelve games which Columbia has played show Watt with a perfect fielding average and a batting average of .380.

Mike Donlin, Jack Chesbro, and Larry McLean, who have all practiced with Columbia from time to time, have given attention to Watt's spectacular playing a second base. They all believe that if given an opportunity to practice with the big league players, Watt would show in a short time the form of the star of the White Sox nine.

Watt resembles Collins in build, although about an inch shorter. He leads his team in getting free passes to first, and Andy Coakley, coach of the Blue and White team, thinks he is the best batsman in the college circles. Several Columbia men who remember Collin's playing when he was at Columbia, assert that Watt excels the White Sox star's playing when the latter was in college.

EASY GAME FOR HARVARD.

Colby Gets Only One Hit Off Whitney—James Pitches Well, Too.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 4.—Harvard had little trouble to beat Colby 5 to 1 this afternoon, although making only three hits against Pitcher James, who, however, kept the ball far from the plate most of the time. Whitney again pitched a fine game for the Crimson, the Maine batters making only one hit against him, this in the first inning, when the visitors got their only run on a pass to Campbell, a stolen base, and Deasy's drive through Short Stop Reed. Later Lafleur made a long hit to left field, which would have been good for two bases had not a base runner ahead of him missed touching second base, and was forced out.

In the second inning Gannett's double, a pass to Hardwick, Mahan's triple, and a passed ball netted Harvard three runs. Two innings later, after Lafleur had made a wild thrown on Hardwick, Mahan was hit by James, and two bases on balls forced in a run, another counting when James made a balk. Harvard's third hit did not come until the eighth, when Hardwick singled, but was doubled up with Brickley. Harvard's new third baseman, Beal, handled himself well and hit the ball hard, although not safely. The score:

Holy Cross at Fordham Today.

Fordham will play its first home game in the Catholic championship series today, when the Maroon nine tackles Holy Cross at Fordham Field. Holy Cross has an exceptionally fast team this year, and expects to retrieve her defeat of last season, having won the majority of its games so far. Fordham, on the other hand, is in a patched-up condition. Joe Martin, who pitched against Holy Cross in both games last year, will be in the box today for Fordham.

Columbia Baseball and Tennis.

Two athletic contests will be held at Columbia University this afternoon, the baseball nine playing Lafayette on South Field and the Blue and White tennis team playing the Princeton racquet wielders on East Field. The Pennsylvanians have a strong nine and expect to give the local collegians a hard game. Don Beck probably will start the game for Columbia, with O'Neale in reserve.

The tennis team has met with only one defeat this season, losing last week to the Williams team.

Connecticut Aggies at N. Y. U.

The New York University nine will face the players of the Connecticut Agricultural College on Ohio Field this afternoon in their sixth home game. Either Hagbloom or Genovese will take the mound for the Violet, the chances being in favor of the former, who has been well rested for today's contest.

Ed Walsh Removed to Hospital.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 4.—Ed. Walsh, the Chicago American League pitcher, who was reported much improved today, was taken to a hospital tonight. The physician attending Walsh said the pitcher was suffering only from grip, that he was in no danger and had been taken to the hospital merely because he would receive better care there than in his apartment.

Pickering Goes to Richmond.

Catcher Artie Pickering of Paterson, who received a trial with the Yankees, has been released by Manager Donovan to the Richmond Club of the International League.

Illinois Loses to Northwestern.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., May 4.—Northwestern University baseball team defeated Illinois, 3 to 1, here today in a Western Conference game. Today's defeat was the first suffered by Illinois this season. Up to today they had a record of twelve straight victories. Score:

										R.	H.	E.

Batteries—Juel and Locher; Gunkel, Halas, and Bradley.

Tufts Downs Holy Cross.

WORCESTER, Mass., May 4.—Tufts beat Holy Cross easily today in a slow game, 7 to 2. Score by innings:

										R.	H.	E.
Holy Cross	0	0	1	0	0	0	0	0	1	2	6	5

Batteries—Whittaker and R. Carroll; McCarthy, Murphy, and H. Carroll.

Results of Other Games.

At Lewiston—Bowdoin, 6; Bates, 2.
At Princeton—Pittsburgh University vs. Princeton, postponed; rain.
At Burlington—Penn State, 1; Vermont, 0.

BOXING CLUBS MUST PAY STATE TAX

Federal Club, in Bowery, Haled Before Commission for Delinquency.

Another crusade against delinquent boxing clubs has been inaugurated by the Boxing Commission, and stringent methods will be enforced against organizations operating under a commission license failing to pay the State tax imposed by law. Last year the Boxing Commission turned over to the State more than $32,000, and quite a large amount of this was due to the energetic efforts of the Boxing Commission in forcing the clubs to pay up. Many of the latter are operating at a loss, and with the new law they will be required to add 2½ per cent. to the present sum of 5 per cent. of the gross receipts.

The first club haled before the commission was the Federal Athletic Club in the Bowery, which was represented at the meeting of the Boxing Commission yesterday by Secretary Peter Di Mango. The club is indebted to the State for $215, the percentage due the State from the last show, at which Johnny Kilbane and Benny Leonard and Leach Cross and Packey Hommey were the stars. The amount due the State would indicate about $4,300 as the receipts. There was also another show for which the club had made no accounting. In addition there was another charge against the club—that of overcrowding on the night of the double attraction.

Secretary Di Mango assured the Boxing Commission that the failure to pay was due to oversight and not willful neglect. He was informed that unless the amount was forwarded at once to Albany the entertainment scheduled for tonight would be prevented and further bouts at the club prohibited. Secretary Di Mango promised to send the money at once to Albany by postal order and register it. He was advised that the production of the receipt for the money order and registration would be accepted by the commission.

Rockaway Beach will have another Summer club. A license was granted to the Wallace Athletic Club, which will occupy the old quarters of the Atlantic Athletic Club, 37 Maple Avenue, Far Rockaway. The new club will be under the management of G. Wallace and Joseph P. Herman. The former is the President of the organization.

"SNOWY" BAKER INJURED.

Reginald L. ("Snowy") Baker, Australia's foremost boxing promoter, had a narrow escape on March 28 from a serious accident. Baker was driving his big English automobile down a hill near the seaside town of Manly when a rear tire burst. There were four persons in the car at the time. Baker held the car well enough to stop it from shooting off the narrow road, but after skidding to one side of the road and then to the other the car ran off the strip of macadam into the bushes, where it was overturned.

George McLeod Redmond, a well-known newspaper man of Sydney, who was a passenger, was struck by a piece of machinery on the base of the skull and killed. Baker retained his hold on the wheel when the car upset and was hurt internally. Spinal injury was feared, but Baker escaped permanent injury.

Cutler Again Defeats Gallagher.

Albert G. Cutler of Boston last night displayed a falling off in his form when compared with that which characterized his playing in the opening block of his 18.2 balk-line billiard match with Tom Gallagher at Maurice Daly's billiard academy, Forty-ninth Street and Broadway, but he nevertheless managed to win from the veteran by the score of 300 to 249. Gallagher played a better game than he did on Monday night, when he scored only 116 points, but his total for both blocks of the match is considerably below that of the Boston billiardist, who has 600 points to Gallagher's 365. Cutler required twenty-one innings to complete his string last night, and he made high runs of 51 and 56, with an average of 14 6-21. Gallagher's highest runs were 39 and 40, and he averaged 12 9-20.

Johnston's One Best Talk, the Boer.

George Rodel, the one man all the heavyweights are afraid of, so Jimmie Johnston says, is now matched to box the "Iron Man" of the arena, Terry Kellar, at the St. Nicholas Rink Friday evening in one of the ten-round bouts. The winner of this bout will challenge the winner of the Coffey-Reich bout. Johnston also says that Rodel was robbed of a clear-cut knockout over the big Irishman some time ago, and he has been anxious to get at him ever since that memorable evening, but the cunning "mick" has always told his manager to pass the "Boer," So Jimmie is trying to tell every one.

REICH AND COFFEY READY.

The Irish Giant Is Favorite for Tonight's Garden Bout.

Jim Coffey and Al Reich are ready for their ten-round contest tonight at Madison Square Garden, the sale of seats indicatnig that they will box before the largest crowd since the opening of the club under the Frawley boxing law. Both boxers are trained to the minute. In fact their condition, after two weeks toiling, is the boast of each training camp, and the loser will have no excuse to offer on the score of condition.

Coffey still rules the favorite with the speculative inclined, but he is not the two-to-one choice he was when the match was first made. The Coffey adherents are accepting anything that is being offered, five to four being the prevailing odds yesterday. Reich's determination to properly fit himself for this important engagement has won the confidence of his admirers, many of them making personal wagers that if the fight ends with a knockout Reich will be the victor.

Not since Jim Corbett and Joe Choynski fought their grudge battle on a barge in San Francisco Bay has a heavyweight contest, outside of a championship battle, created more interest among the followers of the boxing game. Reich and Coffey have never boxed together in public, although Reich is credited with showing Coffey up in the "gym" two years ago, from which time they have been enemies. Aside from the personal satisfaction of winning the victor will probably be Willard's next opponent.

Billy Roche will referee the contest, which will start promptly at 10 o'clock. A ten and a six round contest will precede the main event, Paul Freda and Phinney Boyle in the semi-final and Red McDonald with Willie Kohler in the curtain raiser.

YOUNG O'LEARY BEATEN.

Young Mundy defeated Young O'Leary in a fast and interesting ten-round bout at the 135th Street A. C. last night. Mundy weighed 118 pounds and O'Leary tipped the beam at 117¼. Both boys started off fast at the tap of the gong, and there was never an idle moment throughout the bout. Mundy is a hard hitter, and while O'Leary displayed much cleverness, he wilted under Mundy's terrific attack. In the ninth and tenth rounds Mundy had his opponent in distress.

At no time did O'Leary have the advantage, although he showed himself to be full of gameness. Despite the punishment he took on the jaw and face during the early rounds he never let up and came right back for more. From the seventh round on Mundy changed his attack from the face to body and O'Leary, who did not look to be in the best of condition, plainly showed the effects of Mundy's jabs and swings. In the last two rounds O'Leary had to hang on frequently.

The other two ten-round bouts, between colored boxers, were of such an inferior quality that they were stopped by the referee. Harry Gardiner was scheduled with Battling Chuck for the first bout, but the club physician refused to allow Gardiner to box because of a sore arm, and Charles Crisp was substituted. Crisp was accidentally hit low in the first round, and although he had a rest did not do any boxing after that, and the referee stopped them in the third round.

The other affair between Darky Griffin and Young Small went seven rounds before the referee stopped the agony. Griffin wanted to box, but Small would wave his arms and jump from one end of the ring to the other, and that was all the would do.

Moran and Edwards Matched.

Owen Moran and Lew Edwards have signed articles for a twenty-round contest at 126 pounds for $500 a side, a purse of $2,500, and the Lonsdale featherweight belt, the match to take place at the National Sporting Club, London, on Monday, May 31. Both fighters are in hard training for the bout.

Bombadier Wells is bobbing up again. He has been matched with Sergeant Dick Smith, another English heavyweight, in a twenty-round contest at catch weights, to take place at the Ring, London, on the same night.

White Knocks Out Murphy.

BOSTON, May 4.—Charlie White of Chicago knocked out Eddie Murphy of this city in the seventh round of a scheduled twelve-round bout tonight. The men are lightweights.

The decision was a technical one, being due directly to the invasion of the ring by Murphy's brother, after the Boston boxer had been floored four times.

M'COY AND CLABBY DISAPPOINT CROWD

There may have been worse boxing exhibitions than the one at the Broadway Sporting Club last night, but the memory of man runneth not back to that time. It was a disappointed crowd that saw Jimmy Clabby go through ten rounds with Al McCoy, the so-called middle-weight champion. For three-quarters of the match there was an excellent combination of jiu-jitsu and catch-as-catch-can wrestling, and when the bell sounded at the close of the final round there was not a mark on either man. There was so little of merit that it is mere charity to call it a draw. The crowd "booed" and hissed at times, but the fact that there was disapproval with the manner of the match acted as no incentive to the men in the ring.

In awkwardness McCoy stands in a class by himself. Every fundamental of the boxing game seems to be lacking in him. He exhibited this fact perfectly last night. One could count on his fingers the times he landed anything like a clean punch. Clabby, on the other hand, displayed that he was clever, but he did not open up with any sort of speed, and throughout indicated that he had great respect for his opponent's left. He did not wade into the fray in a manner that impressed the spectators that he was out to wrest the laurels from his opponent by the shortest route.

At every opportunity it seemed that the men were in a clinch. Clabby really forced this, his liking tending to the infighting, and he landed a number of times when the two were close locked. The blows, however, lacked the essential quality of force. McCoy was never even jarred, and the same might be said for Clabby. The man who took the championship from George Chip stood in the centre of the ring, while Clabby danced around him. McCoy never once went out after Clabby. He was content to be on the defensive, and his very awkwardness was his best asset in this respect. He was so clumsy that Clabby didn't know how to go after him.

Much had been expected of the bout, but, like all of the recent ten-round affairs in this city in which a title holder has figured, there was the continual stalling. It is hardly fair to say that McCoy did it intentionally. He didn't know any better, but the result was the same for the spectators. In the entire ten rounds there were not half a dozen clean blows struck.

There was a delay in starting the bout owing to a protest of the bandages on McCoy's hands. He had used tape under the soft bandage and the referee would not allow the bout to go on unless it was removed. McCoy finally agreed to this after a delay of many minutes.

Three six-round bouts preceded the main affair. In one Willie Aste, the former amateur champion, won from Harry Brooks, and in the final one Maxy Marks sent Harry Theet over the knockout route in the second round. Jimmy O'Neil had a slight margin of advantage over Jimmy Dunn in the other six-round event.

American Boxers Lose in Australia.

According to latest advices from Australia the war has not affected the boxing game in that country, and several European and American boxers are kept busy. In the recent bouts Americans have fared poorly. On March 20 at Sydney, Henri Demien of Belgium secured a twenty-round decision on points over Frank Loughrey of America. On the same day at Melbourne, Herb McCoy defeated Abe Attell on points, after twenty rounds of boxing. Eugene Volaire of France outpointed Delaney at Brisbane on March 20, making three prominent battles on one day. One week later at Sydney Walter Coffey of America lost a twenty-round decision on points to Kid Lloyd.

Young Kelly Staggers Dobbs.

Newark boxers were featured last night in the main ten-round bout at Brown's Gymnasium A. A., in West Twenty-third Street, and an interesting exhibition was furnished. Jackie Dobbs and Young Kelly, the former weighing 136 pounds, and Kelly 128, were the principals, and they furnished a bout that was replete with action from the opening to the close of the tenth round. Kelly was entitled to the honors at the final bell, mainly on his aggressive work in the two closing rounds. For eight rounds the contest was fairly even, with first one and then the other assuming the aggressive. In the ninth session, however, Kelly cut loose at a faster pace than he had displayed in the preceding rounds, and had Dobbs staggering around the ring in a helpless condition. The work of his seconds during the intermission worked a wonderful change in Dobbs, and he came out of his chair for the tenth round and eagerly began to mix matters with his opponent. Kelly, however, straightened him up with a right on the jaw, and then sent over a series of rights and lefts which sent Dobbs reeling around the ring. He kept his feet, however, and Kelly was unable to land a deciding blow, although at the final bell Dobbs was staggering and hopelessly outclassed.

The scheduled ten-round semi-final bout, in which Eddie McKinley and Young West, both Newark middleweights, were the contestants, ended abruptly in the second round, when the former sent over a blow on West's jaw, which ended the fray.

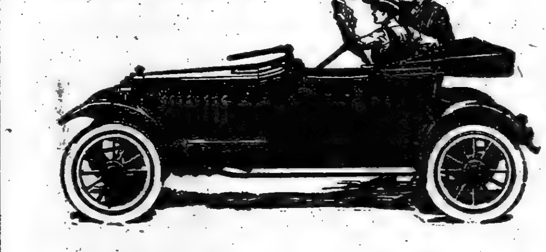
SAXON $395



4500 Miles in 30 Days!

Between New York and Albany

A Saxon Roadster has just completed what in many respects is the most remarkable performance in all motor car history.

For thirty days, in all kinds of weather—including the terrific storm of April 3—it plied its way on boulevard, on country road, on hills from New York to Albany and return. Each day it made a one-way trip. Each day it covered 150 miles. In 30 days it traveled 4500 miles.

The car that established this record was a stock car. Standard in every feature.

It proved that the Saxon costs less to operate than any other car, for it averaged better than 31 miles to the gallon of gasoline; 75 miles to the pint of oil. Only one-half a cent a mile for operating cost.

This car proved its reliability—for it operated with time-table regularity, held to its schedule, and covered 150 miles a day regardless of road and weather conditions.

It proved its durability—for it stood up under a strain such as no other car ever received; the strain of crowding into thirty days the equivalent of a year of service such as the average owner requires.

When will it be convenient for you to see what the stylish, roomy Saxon will do for you? A demonstration puts you under no obligation.

BUSINESS FACTS AND POLITICAL THEORY.

Secretary BRYAN a day or two ago put out an argument for Government assistance to our commerce with Holland. It was suggested to him by the American Chamber of Commerce for the Netherlands, and was passed along without apparent examination of the facts. Now comes the Holland-America Line and asserts its ample capacity to accommodate all the commerce offering, even for contraband. England recognizes shipments to the Netherlands Overseas Trust, and all goods can be sent to Holland freely, if they are to go no further.

The explicit statement that tonnage is "ample" comes from a source as interested as the Secretary, it is true, but it is supported by the record of commerce, as the Secretary is not. For the nine months of war, for example, our exports to Holland have risen from $84,160,000 last year to $101,892,000 this year. For March alone the increase is from $8,953,000 to $23,386,000. That bears out the Holland-America Line's suggestion that earlier impediments had been removed. Our imports from Holland, it is true, declined from $26,538,000 to $25,176,000. That decline is neither serious in itself nor is it necessary to believe that it is due to causes remediable by Government shipping.

The figures for Argentina also show the stimulating effect of closer financial arrangements. For the period of the war this year they were $51,646,000, against $30,099,000 last year. Those are the goods which used to be the imports of the countries now unable to trade with Argentina. We are the chief buyers now, just as we are the principal sellers. No doubt freights are high, but commerce is redistributing itself on a scale which would defy the capacity of any conceivable Government merchant marine. Traders know their business better than the Government, and they never asked for what the Government proposed to give. On the contrary, many of the assertions of the Government are challenged both on fact and theory. Americans have no idea that their lawmakers and administrators are all wise, or should be trusted with the power of dispensing prosperity to some at the expense of others.

THE GOVERNOR'S RESPONSIBILITY

Within a month the Governor must dispose of over six hundred bills, and appropriations of over $64,000,000. Some days ago he announced that he had summoned experts for his advice. He now announces that he will hear all objectors, and that the heads of thirty-two departments must show cause for his signatures to the money items. Certainly better late than never, but why so late? The appropriations which were to make necessary the levying of a direct tax were passed by the Legislature upon something resembling a requisition by the Governor, and in total substantially according to his views. If he had called his experts in the first place he might have saved himself from the dilemma which now confronts him, one essentially of his own making. It was promptly shown that there were duplications and additions and increases not consistent with the public temper, and that is true even now. For example, the appropriations include money for the canals, and the canal outlay is submitted to a referendum with provision for repayment from the proceeds of a bond issue. The bond money will be available before the money can be got from the direct tax to be put into this city's next year's budget, and not to be collected until May, 1916. In any case, why appropriate money to be repaid? When the lawmakers were fixing conditions to suit themselves, why did not they provide for a short temporary loan until the bonds could be issued, without any added burden to the taxpayers who already had voted that the canals should be paid for from capital, and not from income?

The direct tax is necessary as ordered only if all the appropriations are approved. Already it is sure that all the appropriations are not necessary. Controller TRAVIS announces that State Engineer WILLIAMS has abolished 367 barge canal positions, suitable to be called "jobs," it may be imagined, and that the resulting economy is $43,188 monthly. That is net economy, above some necessary additions. The Secretary of State has abolished sixteen positions, the Controller four places, the up-State Public Service Commission ten places, twenty-six public buildings employés have been dismissed, and so on. If this can be done before the Governor gets to work it can only be imagined what he can do with the help of his experts, and the assistance of pitiless publicity. One item is the reappropriation of $10,000,000 previously appropriated, but unexpended. It certainly is time to deliberate when the Legislature appropriates money faster than it can be spent. Nominally the budget calls for only $64,000,000, but Mr. MCANENY finds that power is taken over $120,000,000, more than double the budget of 1910. This city's budget is a good pacemaker, but it never doubled in four years. The State budget has excellent capacity for keeping up its record pace, unless checked. When the State's quarter billion of bonds are all out the sinking fund alone will nearly reach this year's direct tax. That is an addition to the local budgets throughout the State, and will not cause the farmers to bless the name of the Governor, nor his party.

Why should not the taxpayers show a little of the forethought lacking in their representatives? Even now it is not too late to make such an impression upon the Governor that he should feel the necessity of vetoing the direct tax, although he asked for it. In years to come the process of checking the tax wasters ought to begin earlier. The voters ought to count the cost of the benefits they authorize from tax money, and those who vote the taxes ought to be made to feel that the popularity bought with public improvements not needed in the public interest is not a political asset. Public sentiment should require the Governor to exercise his control over expenditures before they are voted, rather than afterward. The responsibility for the budget should be centred somewhere, and the irresponsible private members who make additions for personal reasons, and in methods not to be approved, ought to be brought under control.

QUICK ACTION NEEDED.

Polite words and the desire to be perfectly fair to a public official who has won the respect of the people cannot conceal the ugly fact that the "ripper" crimes and the destructive use of dynamite in the Bronx have caused great anxiety and alarm, and that the recent efforts of the police have done little to reassure us. The explosion of dynamite which wrecked part of the Borough Hall in the Bronx Monday evening was carefully planned and skillfully executed. It was the work of practiced criminals, done for a purpose, and the inference that the dynamiters were the very ones who caused the explosion by the wall of the Bronx Court House some time ago is irresistible. Suspicion fell then upon some rascals who had sworn to avenge the conviction of certain friends of theirs engaged in illegal occupations, but the police in the interim have made no progress toward their apprehension. The killing of the MURRAY boy Monday night was a crime similar in all its aspects to the slaughter of LENORA COHN in the same part of Manhattan six weeks ago, the work of a degenerate with a mania for killing. The police are about as near to identifying the murderer in the Murray case as in the Cohn case. But, for that matter, they have not yet apprehended the murderers of BARNET BAFF, whose crime was committed many months ago in broad daylight, while the Heilner case is already in the way of becoming a mystery in spite of the identification of HANEL as the murderer and the confidence of the police that they would soon have him in custody.

Whenever the police do good work there is a disposition to applaud it. They have done some notably good work since Mr. WOODS has been Commissioner. But the accumulation of mysteries is wearing upon the nerves. The Bronx dynamiters, the murderer of helpless children, and HANEL are still at large. A system which affords practical immunity to criminals of this kind is not efficient enough for the protection of life and property in New York City.

WHERE GERMANY LEADS.

The report that two large German chemical and aniline-dye concerns are to establish branch plants in New Jersey is interesting, and important if true. Germans lead the world in the dyestuff industry, a fact well known in the business world even before the war, but made generally known since by the famine in dyestuffs when supplies from Germany were shut off by the war.

Just how Germany acquired this position in science and industry is now made known by British scientists. As one of them recently pointed out in The London Times, when British organic chemistry boasted such names as FRANKLAND, PERKIN, and WILLIAMSON, half a century ago, it was different. HOFFMAN also might be named with these, though he was later induced to return to Berlin and found a school of chemistry there.

These facts give point to the words of a writer in the Cologne Gazette who a few weeks ago asserted the essential superiority of Germany over England. The writer contrasted the state of English education with Germany's avidity in intellectual matters and her "intellectual possessions," her vastly superior elementary education, and finally what he calls the crowning glory of the whole, the German military system, "that incomparable "institution which no power in the "world shall take away."

In the end this incomparable military organization and the spirit of national pride in it may prove Germany's undoing, but as to the chemical industry Germany is certainly warranted in referring to it with pride as among her intellectual possessions, and in respect to this branch of science the Cologne Gazette article is true in its boast that Germany is "fifty years ahead," not only of England, but of the world in general. This leadership of Germany in chemical science and its allied industries was recently admitted by such a competent authority as Dr. W. H. PERKIN, Waynflete Professor of Chemistry at Oxford, in his Presidential address at the general meeting of the Chemical Society at Burlington House. The English as a nation and their manufacturers in particular, he said, "had "failed to understand the extreme "complexity of the scientific basis of "organic chemical industry." Not understanding this complexity and its difficulty, neither the Government nor the manufacturers held out any inducements to British chemists to prosecute researches in this department.

Germany, on the contrary, was intellectually awake to its opportunity and seized it, and as a result leads the world today in furnishing dyestuffs. Professor PERKIN declared that "the "decadence of the coal-tar industry "and its gradual transference to Germany began during the period from "1870 to 1875."

England in 1874 had the lead in this industry, which was then, apparently without protest, surrendered to Germany. Professor PERKIN even goes further by way of admitting German superiority in this branch of practical science. He says that in 1870, when this transference of a great branch of applied science to Germany began, organic chemistry was not recognized in the older English universities, and the newer ones of today did not then exist. He says:

> Many of our universities, and particularly those of Oxford and Cambridge, and those in Scotland, contributed practically nothing to the advancement of organic chemistry in the latter part of the last century, and even now their output of research is far less than it should be. In Germany, as soon as the importance of the subject became apparent, schools specially devoted to the subject were founded by such teachers as LIEBIG, WOEHLER, KEKULE, and BAEYER.

It is rarely that such a frank admission of an enemy's superiority in any line is made as that of Professor PERKIN as respects English and German science in one of its most important branches. Its frankness, however, is characteristically English, and therefore hopeful. America has done much in recent years in scientific research, and is a leader in some departments, but as respects aniline dyes and dyestuffs, like England, America must acknowledge German superiority. If the opportunity has at last come to America to engage in this industry under German scientific direction, it can only be regarded as another gift of fortune as an incident of war.

THE DEATH HOUSE.

The revelations of the routine of life in that department of the State prison at Ossining commonly known as the death house, resulting from the temporary transfer of one of its occupants to this city to give testimony in a criminal trial, must be very depressing to sober-minded persons. The crime for which FLACK was sentenced to death was committed more than a year ago. With him in the condemned cells are seventeen other men, some of whom were there when he was placed in the part of the prison in which the occupants are supposed to prepare themselves for inevitable death by legal form. It is not objectionable or surprising that they should be uncommonly well treated, but no sort of treatment can make their waiting for the last summons endurable. They keep up their spirits by hoping, often vainly, for reprieve, for some accident which may preserve their lives. Yet any human being thus confined, marked for extinction, and waiting on the law's delays, must suffer the tortures of death mentally day after day, night after night. The present course of our criminal law with condemned prisoners is the refinement of cruelty, and it has an evil effect on the whole community. It does not necessarily amount to an argument in favor of the abolition of capital punishment. But it warrants the belief that the death sentence should never be inflicted when there is a shadow of doubt of the guilt of the prisoner, and that, when it is inflicted, it should be swiftly executed. The delay is not humane, but the reverse. Appeal from all convictions for a capital crime is now demanded by law, but surely an effort might be made to have such appeals quickly attended to. The spectacle of eighteen men, condemned to death, trying to make themselves as comfortable as possible, while seasons come and go, because court routine compels long postponement of judicial consideration of their cases, cannot fail to have a bad effect on society. No wonder the outcry against capital punishment increases in volume. Yet for the preservation of society it is well that murder in cold blood should be punished by the extinction of the murderer. Our methods, however, tend to make capital punishment as revolting as possible, and to create in the common mind a strong disrespect for the law.

OPERATIC PLANS.

The prospects of New York's opera next season, on paper, seem exceedingly bright, and considering the difficulties Mr. GATTI-CASAZZA overcame in carrying out his plans this season we are justified in hoping for the fulfillment of all his promises. But who can guess what the European situation will be next Autumn, who can say precisely what the temper of the American public will be? There is much real encouragement for the constitutionally doubtful in the engagement of MARIA BARRIENTOS, an illustrious compatriot of MALIBRAN and SARASATE, and the announcement that one of the season's novelties will be a Spanish opera sung in Spanish. That will assuredly be a novelty and it may lead to a popular demand for Spanish artists and music which the impresario might find it convenient to encourage. There is encouragement, too, in the announcement of the engagement of three or four native singers of proved capacity. As for our favorites from Italy and Germany, they may feel, like Catiline in the old play, that "they go but to return," but they must feel also that their return is not quite assured. Much must depend upon the developments of the war.

Of course we want them all to come back with voices and artistic spirit unimpaired. The program the Director has tentatively arranged is most attractive, the best of recent years, in fact, and we shall prepare our minds for the promised aesthetic enjoyment with perfect confidence that no matter what accidents may befall we shall still have opera of a high quality, opera with GERALDINE FARRAR and LOUISE HOMER and other American artists of high rank, with CARUSO unless the worst of misfortunes comes upon us, and with an ensemble not to be equaled elsewhere.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Cautious Georgia Newspapers. An editorial article in The Savannah News has for heading, "Not Anxious to Handle the Frank Case." The nominal object of its writer was to express the opinion that neither Governor SLATON nor Governor-elect HARRIS is at all eager to speak, after the Board of Pardons has conducted the proposed inquiry and given its advice, what will be the decisive word as to FRANK'S fate. Whatever the final action taken, says The News, the number of people dissatisfied with it will be large, and it intimates that the number will be large enough fully to account for a preference on the part of each of these officials that the other should be the one to tell FRANK whether he is to live or die.

This theory is not improbable, but the article itself shows that Georgia journalists, as well as Georgia politicians, are "not anxious to handle the Frank case," so far, at least, as concerns a clear disclosure of belief in the man's guilt or innocence. Evidently there is serious inconvenience, if not danger of some sort, for them in doing that. In the present instance, one reads paragraph after paragraph to the rather distant end without getting even a hint of the editor's own opinion, and the only admission made as to the need of any action at all lies in the sentence—"dependence for clemency will be placed wholly upon the fact that many have expressed doubt as to his guilt."

In short, The News carefully refrains from giving its readers the slightest help in making up their own minds. This might be regarded as commendable self-restraint if the case were still "under the Judge," as the lawyers say, but it is no longer in that position, and while the case was there few of the Georgia papers were at all hesitant about offering clear and decided opinions as to the character of the prisoner and what the outcome of the trial should be. Now they seem to be in the same boat with the two Governors, or in the boat where The News puts them, and glad to evade the responsibilities attaching to him who says either that FRANK was or that he was not fairly tried and fairly convicted. No such timidity is exhibited anywhere outside of Georgia.

No Record, but Highly Important. Though the successful establishment and maintenance by our Government of wireless communication with Panama, by day as well as by night, breaks no distance records, it is still an achievement with so few predecessors that it excites satisfaction and admiration even though it cannot any longer produce wonder. Nothing electrical can easily do that, nowadays, for we have all come to where we are ready to believe in the unlimited possibilities of what is now almost the most used, though still the least understood, of energy's forms.

With points as remote as Panama, and, indeed, with those much nearer, we can as yet only communicate by means of signals, the wireless analogue to the old-fashioned telegrapher's dots and dashes, but Mr. MARCONI and the other qualified prophets say confidently that before long the wireless telephone will equal, and later will far outdo, the one now dependent on the use of a metallic circuit. Then anybody anywhere—who has the price—can talk, if not face to face, at least in effect ear to ear, with almost anybody else in almost any part of the world. Conversation with planetary neighbors is still out of sight, but probably Professor PERCIVAL LOWELL, who is more confident than most people that planetary neighbors exist, is already thinking about it.

Meanwhile, wireless telegraphy through all the twenty-four hours and as far as Panama is a "facility" that may be of enormous advantage to us. It is safe from such attack as that of the cable-cutters in Cuba and the Philippines, not to mention those much more recently active, and no nation provided with it can be prevented from transmitting facts—or fancies—to the other nations where either will be to its real or imagined advantage. Also, it deprives military and naval commanders of their old excuses for exercising discretionary powers. That is an advantage or a disadvantage, according to circumstances, but probably most often it will make for peace and against war, and is therefore on the whole desirable.

Incidentally, the Government, by the success of its new plant, made in defiance of much good advice, has proved that there is more than one way of doing this, as most other things. Whether best or not, the chosen system meets the pragmatic test—it works.

Smothering Works Both Ways. Already the dangers prophesied as incidental to the use of asphyxiating gases as a weapon have been exemplified, for yesterday's dispatches told how the wind, after carrying the deadly little cloud along the ground till it reached the hostile trenches, suddenly changed its always untrustworthy mind, and, by blowing the vapor back whence it came, forced its makers to flee for their lives.

It is reported, too, that a means of defense against the new implement of war has been found in "respirators." Their nature is not explained, but apparently those so quickly supplied in such large numbers are mere coverings—strainers, as it were—for mouth and nose, and they cannot be very effective protection against long and complete submergence in a corrosive gas. The oxygen helmets used by firemen and miners work on a wholly different principle, and with them it seems hardly practicable to equip armies or even whole regiments.

Hunters, in approaching game of some sorts, must carefully keep to leeward of their intended prey. Should fighting with poisonous gases become a generally followed martial custom, getting to windward of the foe and keeping there will become a very important military manoeuvre. The required tactics have not yet been worked out, but, if ever they are, the present order of battles will be wholly changed, and how heavy guns and laboriously made trenches could then be made useful in the new conditions it is not easy to imagine.

CLASSIFIED NURSING

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the letter from the Secretary of the Chautauqua Correspondence School for Nursing, which was published on the 26th, and which in some degree replied to my letter of the 11th, there is evidence of such a misapprehension of the whole attitude of those who are endeavoring to raise and maintain a high standard for nurses that a word more on the subject seems desirable.

The statement made in this letter as to the division of the nursing done between the really competent and the more or less competent is, of course, mere guesswork, but assuming it to be correct, can the writer not understand that the whole matter is simply one of making plain to the public the difference between the two? There is no "trades unionism" spirit to be found in any group of highly trained nurses of which I know or have known, no disposition to prevent those more or less competent women from doing their work as well as any experience or correspondence school may enable them to, but only a very great desire, backed by that of the great majority of doctors and hospital heads who have most to do with nurses, to clearly differentiate and to hold responsible the various classes of women who nurse the sick. This being so, and having read the Secretary's letter with a sympathetic comprehension of his point of view, I do not see why he does not join with us in working for this bill, since it can take away nothing he claims, and raises the standard of the profession to which his graduates, if they choose to go on and enter properly equipped training schools, can belong.

As for the nursing of the poor, the service being given by fully trained women through various channels, such as social service, district work, health boards, milk depots, &c., should be left unmentioned, for it is where ignorance is greatest, poverty most distressing, that the greatest need exists, and where constant and invaluable help is given in an ever-increasing degree.

The opposition to this bill, to the passage of which we must now look forward to another session of the Legislature, is founded one-half on misapprehension, the other half on commercialism. The first half ought to disappear with discussion. The second half must be overruled and put aside as unworthy.

A Correction.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I ask for a correction in your comment on my report on "Colored School Children"? Your article said: "Mr. Theobald disagreed with a suggestion in the report that more arithmetic should be taught to negro children."

As a matter of fact, the portion of the report referred to reads as follows:

> The large percentage of average shown by the study renders most significant the installation of double periods in reading, writing, and arithmetic which were inaugurated in Public School 89 (Mr. Theobald's school) in the Fall of 1913, (by Mr. Theobald's predecessor.) There has been no further opportunity to follow up the records of the pupils working under this plan, as it was inaugurated only two months prior to the close of this investigation. The Principal of Public School 89 was enthusiastic in his estimate of the effect of the work on both scholarship and conduct of the boys. If the plan has proved successful, its general use by the school authorities is urged in coping with this average condition.

After Unemployment, What?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is there not too little consideration given the workingman who wants to earn an honest living? Here is my case: An American, married, healthy and strong, father of a family, fairly intelligent, working but two days per week since Jan. 1. I have used every possible method to increase my income, trying to get some work to perform during the day or evening, but without success. What is the natural outcome to be? One has to work, beg, borrow, or steal. It is conditions such as these that many deserving men are confronted with. On the other hand, the life of the criminal element is considered a matter that needs some sort of an uplift.

As to Los Angeles.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

One who assumes to correct another should be correct himself. In today's issue of THE TIMES a correspondent from Baltimore tries to set the paper right as to the complete name of Los Angeles. He is in error. The full title of the California city is, or was, "Pueblo de Nuestra Senora la Reina de los Angeles," or "City of Our Lady the Queen of the Angels." It is better to be right than to be positive.

In the Land of Dreams-Come-True, they say
That to wish is to obtain,
And all may follow a chosen road
Till a chosen goal they gain.

Yet sadness lies in the people's eyes,
As though each some longing knew—
Perhaps because there are no more dreams,
In the Land of Dreams-Come-True!

A NEUTRAL HYPHEN

If You Will Subscribe and Can Imagine Such a Thing.

New York, May 4.

I received in my morning mail today a circular issued by the "Printers and Publishers Association," 150 Nassau Street, asking me to subscribe for shares in a new daily paper with a proposed capital of $2,000,000 to promote the principles of strict neutrality. A glance at the names of the Honorary Vice Presidents of the proposed association showed that of Professor Hugo Muensterberg at the head of the list. Therefore I was not surprised to find that the principles of strict neutrality to be promoted by the new daily were those of the hyphenated Americans, and that they were in deadly conflict with those officially proclaimed by our own Government. Strict neutrality, the promoters say, means "prohibiting the export of ammunition of war to the warring nations." Our own Government has repeatedly affirmed that such prohibition would be a breach of neutrality and an infringement of the rights of our own citizens.

I decided at once that I would not invest any money in an endeavor to combat my own Government in a crisis like the present. There is no room in New York for a new daily in a commercial sense. The declared object of this one is ephemeral. The paper itself would never return any part of the money put into it. It would be as generally spurned as the writings of Dr. Dernburg have been. It would be dubbed the Morning Neutral or the Daily Hyphen, and would disappear at the end of the war, if not sooner.

The name "Printers and Publishers Association" bears so close a resemblance to that of the American Publishers Association that I thought when I began to read the circular that it had been issued by the latter body. Probably other persons not so familiar with typographical matters may be misled by it.

The Garrick's Passing.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the general excitement that prevailed over the closing of Wallack's Theatre by an English actor, nobody noticed that on the same night a theatre of just as much, if not more, historical and sentimental interest was closed—and by an American actor. The Garrick Theatre, where Harrigan and Hart trod the boards, where Mansfield and Booth scintillated, where the good old melodies of Dave Braham rang true and clear, where the "Mulligan Guards' Ball," Riley in "The Four Hundred," and "Old Lavender," and many another gripping piece held forth in the good old days—the Garrick Theatre closed Saturday night—Arnold Daly closed it fittingly with Bernard Shaw's "You Never Can Tell."

There were no ceremonies—nobody came to see the old theatre out, except Mrs. Harrigan, the widow of Edward Harrigan of Harrigan and Hart, and as she saw the last piece of legitimate scenery go out, and the ten-cent moving-picture sign flash up, perhaps the glisten in her eye was the reflection of the sign—and perhaps it was something else, in memory of the olden days. Eheu! Fugaces!

Assorted Compliments from Dresden

I am a Boy Scout. I have read your Pictorial of the 8th of April. You say the Boy Scouts are thorough and efficient with the Prussian stamp. I thank you very much for your praise, but I think there are some Boy Scouts in Germany which could be better.

We have enough imagination; you say we don't have any imagination. But our teacher says so every time we are up to new tricks. We imagine that England gets licked yet, but that doesn't take much imagination. My father he says: "You have enough imagination for a boy of your size; if you would have more you could be an editor of THE TIMES." But your pictures are very good, and I am always glad when I get them from my relatives.

This is all. I wish you would not be so pro-English.

Theology vs. Higher Criticism.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Do the protestants of the Presbyterian General Assembly desire to alienate from the Church all thinking young men? Do they know that they are insulting the intelligence of Columbia University men when they condemn the reasoned views of Union Seminary candidates for the ministry? Are they satisfied with saving the souls of the uneducated? Who are worth more to the Church—20 Columbia University students or 200 ignorant fanatics, who denounce modern Biblical criticism as "the discordant guesses of fashionable rationalism"?

Four Little Girls.

The good care of four little girls—one eight, one seven, and twins, three years old—is the responsibility which rests on young Mrs. M. Her husband is dead and there is not a relative who can help. She is a home-maker with excellent judgment in the management of the children, to whom she is devoted, and the Charity Organization Society has undertaken to obtain funds for her. She earns some income by washing at home, but she needs, in addition, $30 a month to help with rent, food, and milk. Of this amount $5 a month is given by one donor interested through the society. Other gifts are needed to make up the balance of the $180 that must be supplied during the coming six months. Contributions should be made payable to the Charity Organization Society and addressed to its office at 105 East Twenty-second Street, and will be used solely for material needs in this home.

The society acknowledges, with thanks, the following contributions sent in response to previous appeals in THE TIMES for other families: "E. N. 18," $10; "C. K. H.," $5; "C. H. J.," $10; Mrs. S. H. Howe, $10; William Messer, $4.

WILL GERMANY ATTACK RUSSIA'S BREAD LINE?

A Military Expert Argues That the Advance in Courland Is More Than an Adventurous Raid.

By WALTER E. IVES,

New York, May 3, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The unexpected and sudden advance of German troops into the heart of the Russian Province of Courland has thus far been featured by the Russian General Staff as a mere adventure, a sort of a raid very much like that of the Russians on Memel, without any strategic value. This assumption may be right, but the probability is that it is erroneous. Lust for adventure has thus far never had any part in the plans of operation carried out by the German General Staff, and it is therefore safe to assume that the operations in Courland will prove to be of greater consequence than the Russians are willing to believe. At any rate, it will be of interest to consider (in case the invasion of the Baltic provinces should prove to be more than a mere raid) what is the real object!

Two motives can be found for the German advance north of the Njemen River—a political and at the same time economic one, and one of purely strategical nature. This means nothing less than either the conquest of the northwestern part of Courland as far as a line extending from Wileny (northwest of Kovno) to Schawli, Mitau, and Riga, or else a thrust against the Russian "bread line" from Dunaburg to Wilna and Warsaw. The difficulties which oppose the pursuance of either plan are great, so great, in fact, that in the mind of the Russian General Staff they must have appeared insuperable; this at least is the only explanation of their unpreparedness to meet an attack on their extreme right wing north of Kovno. The difficulties of a German advance in this region are in nature both topographical and purely military. For a stretch of sixty miles in an easterly direction along the entire East Prussian frontier not a single railroad exists, and roads fit for heavy transports are but scarce, the only direct road leading eastward being that from Tauroggen to Schawli. At Schawli the first railroad, that leading from Libau to Dunaburg and further south to Wilna, is reached. It now depends entirely on the object of the operations whether or not the difficulties arising from the lack of railway communications still continue. If the object of the advance is the acquirement of Northwestern Courland, the difficulties of an advance continue as unfavorable as ever, there being but one single road leading toward the northeast of the province, that from Mosheiki (about thirty-five miles southeast of Libau) to Mitau and Riga. If the motive of the advance be of purely strategic nature, the lack of railroad communications becomes somewhat less embarrassing.

Aside from the two roads mentioned above as leading in a general north-easterly direction (which would be the direction of any strategical operations) there is a third road, a branch road from Ponewjesh, joining the Dunaburg-Wilna road about two miles south of Poschement. These three roads will be of great help, but even so the conditions of communication will be far from satisfactory because of the great distances between the roads, which will make co-operation a difficult matter. The disadvantages of a lack of proper railway communications in modern warfare will be readily appreciated by students of military operations.

From a purely military viewpoint the obstacles in the way of the German Staff must be regarded as equally great, whatever may be the object of the advance. If the operations aim at taking possession of the northern part of Courland, an enormous extension of the German left flank toward the northeast will become necessary in order to prevent the danger of having it surrounded and cut off. The line of trenches will have to be extended from Wileny on the Njemen (halfway between Tilsit and Kovno) along the Dubissa River to Schawli, from there along the Kulpa and Wurzau Rivers to Mitau and from there along the Aa River toward the sea and Riga—in other words an extension of the defensive line of about one hundred and thirty-five miles would become necessary. This accomplishment would certainly not be an easy matter in view of the fact that the number of men Germany will be able to put into the field hereafter will be limited.

If the movement has a merely strategical object, id est, if it is intended against the Russian "bread line," the problem will become even more difficult. An advance from Schawli in a southeasterly direction will imperatively require a protection against attack on both flanks of the advancing army as well as of its rear. The right flank would have to be supported by a line of vantage along the Dubissa, Newjasha and Wilija Rivers (which would be identical with cutting Kovno off from the north and east,) and for the left flank of the advance absolute control of the railroad junction at Ponewjesh, of the railroad from Mosheiki to Mitau, and of a front presumably along the Aa, Muska and Lawena Rivers to Ponewjesh would be imperative. Since these lines would be even more extended than those necessary to control in case of a merely economical and political objective, and would at that but form points of vantage for the offensive of an army between Janowo and Ponewjesh, even greater numbers of troops would be required to bring the operations to a successful issue.

Tonight's official report from Berlin speaks of 3,200 prisoners and eight guns taken in the region of Schawli and Mitau. This report surely justifies the assumption that the operations in Courland have not the character of an insignificant raid, and that great developments may be forthcoming. Whether or not the difficulties in their way, referred to above, can be overcome by the German Staff, will remain for the future to show. The supreme significance of the German operations in Courland (should they be successful or not) lies in the eloquent example they give of German resourcefulness and vigor; they give a brilliant demonstration of the confidence with which the Teutons are looking upon developments in the Carpathians as well as in Flanders and France, where they can spare the troops that are now invading Courland, and the realization of this Teutonic display of power should be a warning to those who have been misled into the belief of approaching victories of the allied powers.

LATIN AMERICA'S HEART.

Hints That It May Have Cooled Toward This Country.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Any one who has followed the experiences and activities of J. Callan O'Laughlin in many fields of endeavor, activities second to those only of John Barrett, must admit that his view of the South American situation as expressed in his dispatches is extraordinarily convincing. While the Niagara Falls conference was especially gratifying to our people in its revelation of the wide grasp of international affairs possessed by the people of the Latin-American countries and their hitherto unsuspected ability to deal with them, we must remember that their most intense interest was with the people below the Rio Grande and that the apparent American sympathy of the mediators may have been but the extreme courtesy of Latin diplomacy. None of us, neither Anglo-Saxon nor Celt, can hope ever to follow the intricacies of the Latin mind.

But the change brought about by the situation in Europe as well as the mere intimate relationship said to have been established at Washington with the representatives of South American countries may have done much to bring about, as Mr. O'Laughlin suggests, conditions looking to the abeyance of Latin-American hostility and suspicion. Let us hope that the two years that have elapsed since Mr. Eder's publication have changed the South American viewpoint.

There are two or three features of the Pan-American situation that still puzzle me in view of the beatific conditions outlined as existing at Washington. One of these is the real meaning of the closing lines of the Washington dispatch which followed the announcement of Dr. Muller's proposed visit: "There is much opposition to Pan-Americanism in this country, and while the Government has sought to use its influence to bring about arrangements between groups of Americans, it has done so cautiously." Can one imagine the Wilson Administration proceeding in any other manner? And if this feeling exists in this country will it not affect seriously the efforts to bring about the closer relations between this country and South America suggested in the most optimistic of the Washington dispatches?

Again, Dr. Naon, the Argentine Ambassador, in an address at Pittsburgh on Thursday last, said:

"The day when the public spirit of each of the nations of America becomes imbued with the feeling of absolute tranquillity with which they can devote themselves to the organization of the administration of their territorial patrimony without being disturbed by the fear of an attack—on that day we shall be able to say that the idea of Pan-Americanism has triumphed."

Attack—by whom? By any one of the rags and tatters of a nation that will emerge from this European cataclysm with a decimated population, a starving people, a scrap-heap navy, and a Himalayan debt? Is any South American really shaking in his boots over the fear that a spasm of territorial aggrandizement will seize upon any European nation within a century to come and endanger his coasts? Hardly.

If Emma Opper Had Been There.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

According to THE TIMES, Senator O'Gorman said on Friday to the delegation of suffragists that he could "fill another room as large as this with women who do not want the vote." Upon which "the women bit their lips and said nothing." I think the biting of lips and the holding of tongues at that tragic point must be a typographical error, but if it is not I can only wish I had been there. I should have respectfully reminded the Senator that he could also easily fill a room as large as that with men who vote only at Presidential elections, or who don't go out to vote if it is raining, or who spend election day golfing or motoring or snoozing, or who didn't bother to register, or who never vote at all anyhow.

THE TRADING STAMP.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I note with great interest Marshall Field's letter published in your edition of the 29th, referring to the future policy of that house in reference to the discontinuance of giving trading stamps and profit-sharing coupons.

The Yorkville Merchants' Association has been trying the last six years to awaken the sentiment of the public along these lines. In fact, about three years ago, through a member of ours, Assemblyman Goldberg, we introduced a bill in the Legislature which would have obliged the trading stamp companies to publish their capitalization and make the output of their stamps represent a certain proportion of their capitalization and no more. The trading stamp business is a quasi-public business and should have the attention of public authorities. It is not true that selling trading stamps is selling merchandise, as the company is not obliged to disclose whether they have anything of value represented by the stamp. The minor companies have gone out of existence time and time again, and the larger companies are permitted indiscriminately to flood the country with stamps without regard to their actual value. The business of trading stamps is one of the least ethical in that it speculates on the lowest instinct of a consumer, that is, petty graft.

Today the trading stamp business is practically in the hands of one or two concerns, and the profits enable these concerns to prosecute and pursue any prospective competitor out of business. We are extremely glad to learn that the light came from the West this time, and that such a reputable concern as the Marshall Field Company has taken a stand of opposing the distribution of all premiums and certificates. It is time that the consumer realizes that what the merchants give away to him, benefiting the outsider, he must take off on the quality or quantity of goods in order to make a legitimate profit. The trading stamp company is nothing but a parasite based upon legitimate business, and educationally it is undesirable, as it spreads a sentiment for graft.

As a representative of an organization composed of many retail merchants in the City of New York, I welcome the attitude of the Marshall Field Company, and I hope that some prominent New York house will soon join this propaganda.

CHARLES RECHT,
Chairman of Committee on Legislation,
Yorkville Merchants' Association.

Unemployed Gentility.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letter of "Personally Interested" deserves more than passing notice. Where is there an employment agency that recognizes the woman of culture? There must be positions where the experience and efficiency of a woman of 50 should stand as qualifications rather than limitations.

I have in mind a lady who, through no fault of hers, has suddenly lost her position as a teacher. She has had a thorough training and is a woman of refinement and culture, with a deep insight and a natural intuition. A woman who stands for much in the educational world pronounces this teacher "a benediction to childhood." Where does this woman stand in the ranks of the unemployed? There must be many such unemployed, and there must be positions that only such women can fill acceptably.

MISS WATERS WEDS PRINCE PIGNATELLI

Runaway Match, but They Are Forgiven, Says Bride's Father, George Jason Waters.

HONEYMOON AT HOT SPRINGS

Prince Once Held at Ellis Island—Came to America in Service of Spain.

One day after the bride's parents had forcefully denied that their daughter was engaged, and two days after the bride herself had told friends that formal announcements of the engagement would soon be made, Miss Ruth Morgan Waters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Jason Waters, was married yesterday at noon to Prince Ludovico Pignatelli d'Aragon, who several years ago was Secretary of the Spanish Legation at Washington.

The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. Martin J. Scott, S. J., at the Church of St. Ignatius Loyola, at Eighty-fourth Street and Park Avenue. None of the bride's relatives were present, and a round scolding awaited both the bride and bridgroom as soon as they went from the church to an apartment they had taken at 12 East Forty-eighth Street.

The scolding was from George Jason Waters, father of the bride, who hurried up from his office, at 52 Broadway, upon hearing over the telephone from his daughter that she was married and would like to have her father's forgiveness and blessing.

The bride, who is 22 years old, and the bridegroom, who is fifteen years her senior, received the scolding in good part. They emerged from the apartment soon after the bride's father had gone, and announced that they were leaving for Hot Springs, Va., to spend their honeymoon.

On their return, they said, they would live at a home Prince Pignatelli has purchased at Merrick, L. I., but before going there, they said, they planned to visit the bride's parents at their Summer home, near Red Bank, N. J.

While the couple were completing their preparations to leave for Hot Sprinbs Mr. Waters hurried to his Summer home, where he talked the situation over with Mrs. Waters. Then he went for a long horseack ride, and on returning confirmed the statement of Prince Pignatelli that he would visit the bride's parents upon returning from the honeymoon trip.

"It was simply a runaway marriage," said Mr. Waters. "I denied on Sunday that my daughter was engaged because I didn't know anything about it. They simply ran off today and got married. The first I heard of the matter was at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon when I answered a telephone call at my office and my daughter reported that she had been married to the Prince and would seen be at an apartment at 12 East Forty-eighth Street, where she would wait for me. I should hate to tell you what I said to them, but you can put it down that I gave them a good talking to.

"My daughter left home this morning as though she was merely going on a little shoppin gtour. I have thought it all over and have decided to do the only thing possible under the circumstances—forgive them. Of course, they will be welcome to our home when they return from their honeymoon."

An hour before the marriage yesterday Prince Pignatelli appeared with his bride at the Marriage License Bureau. He gave his age as 37 and his occupation as "a broker." He said that he was born at Biarritz and was the son of Louis Pignatelli of Aragon. To questioners Prince Pignatelli said he was a distant relative of the King of Spain and came to this country four years ago in the King's service.

He said he first met Miss Waters at Nice, France, and renewed his acquaintance with her at Narragansett Pier.

Soon after his arrival in August, 1911, the Prince set out to see Central Park in an automobile. The machine skidded, turned over, and pinned Prince Pignatelli beneath it. Six ribs were broken and deep gashes were made in his face and head, which left permanent scars. In 1912 the Prince returned to France and cabled reports said he had shot himself in desperation "over a jilt by an American girl." He arrived in New York soon after, and was stopped at Ellis Island while charges that he was connected with a gambling house were investigated.

The bride is the sister of Mrs. Benjamin Gatins, who was married in Philadelphia in April, 1912.

MARRIED IN PARIS.

Miss Marion Lespennasse the Bride of Marcel Tourey-Piallat.

A letter from Paris yesterday brought the announcement of the wedding there on April 12 of Miss Marion Lespennasse, a daughter of the late George L. Lespennasse, to Marcel Tourey-Piallat. It was a quiet affair, with only a few friends present, and Mrs. Lespenasse gave her daughter in marriage.

The bride's father, George S. Lespennasse, died on May 12, 1914, in Paris, after a long illness. He had been a realty broker in New York, but had lived with his family in Paris for twenty years at the time of his death. The Lespennasses have a number of relatives here.

Clark-Churchman Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Clark of 44 East Forty-ninth Street, announce the engagement of their sister, Miss Helen Clinton Clark, to Dr. John Woodman Churchman of New Haven, Conn. The wedding will take place quietly in St. George's Chapel in Stuyvesant Square on June 1.

SCOTT—CAUCHOIS.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell Scott of Yonkers announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Eleanor Preston Scott, to Reginald Wadsworth Cauchois, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar R. Cauchois of New York. No date has been set for the wedding.

THOMPSON—BARTHOLOMEW.

Mrs. A. Fellowes Thompson of 103 East Seventy-fifth Street, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Dorothy Graham Thompson, to Marshall Moore Bartholomew, the son of Marshall Bartholomew of 412 St. Nicholas Avenue, New York. Mr. Bartholomew was graduated from Yale in the class of 1907. No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss McAlpin to Give a Bridge.

Miss Harriette Louise McAlpin will give a morning bridge and buffet luncheon tomorrow at her home, 11 East Ninetieth Street, for Miss Helen Cauldwell, whose marriage is to take place next month. About a hundred society girls will attend.

SOCIETY ENTERTAINS PRINCE

The Maharaja of Kapurthala and his wife, the Princess Prem Kaur, who arrived here Saturday from India, are at the Ritz-Carlton, on their way to visit the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, and are being entertained by society during their stay in New York.

Yesterday Mrs. F. Burrall Hoffman of 58 East Seventy-ninth Street, who has just returned from a six weeks' visit with Mrs. William H. Crocker at Burlinghame, Cal., entertained the ruling Prince of India and his wife at a large luncheon, and will also give a dinner for them tomorrow night, at which the guests will be mostly young people.

Mrs. Charles B. Alexander is to entertain with a luncheon for them at her home, 4 West Fifty-eighth Street, tomorrow, and Mrs. Vanderbilt is to give a small luncheon in their honor on Sunday. They will attend the meeting of the Meadow Brook Steeplechase Association on Saturday, to be held on the estate of Harry Payne Whitney at Westbury, L. I., as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Whitney. Robert Goelet is also planning to give a small dance for them before they leave on Monday next for Washington, D. C., where they will be entertained by the British Ambassador before going to the Pacific Coast.

Some of those entertaining the visiting Indian Prince have been guests at his palace at Kapurthala. Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman were his guests for a week during their trip around the world. Mr. Hoffman is to entertain him at luncheon today at the Recess Club, 60 Broadway, after which the royal party will be shown through the Stock Exchange and other places of note in the financial district.

The Maharaja's previous visit to this country was twenty-two years ago.

POLO GAME AT ARMY FETE.

Secretary Garrison to Attend Relief Society's Benefit on May 26.

Polo will be the chief feature of the annual garden party that the New York branch of the Army Relief Society will hold on May 26 on Governors Island. Owing to the naval prizes and the festivities connected with it, the Seventh Regiment will be unable to go to the island that day, as had been intended, so the officers stationed on Governors Island have arranged a polo game. The bowling alley will also be open to the public for the first time.

There will be no regular supper, as last year, but the Officers' Club house will beo pen from 3 until 7:30, and the cards of admission will also entitle the holder to refreshments. In addition, refreshment tents will be scattered over the grounds, and there will be fortune telling, hand reading, and other amusements. There is also to be a large reception for General Wood and Mrs. Wood and the officers of the society, including Mrs. Charles F. Roe, who has been President of the auxiliary for a number of years.

Secretary of War and Mrs. Garrison and Governor and Mrs. Whitman have accepted invitations to be present. The Mayor and Mrs. Mitchel will not be in New York then, but Admiral Usher, commandant of the New York Navy Yard; Mrs. Usher, and a number of notables are to be present.

FRENCH PLAY ACTED AT TEA.

Mrs. Clarence Clough Buel was the hostess yesterday afternoon at a French tea at her residence, 130 East Sixty-seventh Street. A little French play, in one act, "Les Coteaux du Medoc," by Tristan Dernard, was played by Beatrice Wood, M. Renevant, and Frederic Mathews. Mrs. Herbert Brown recited two short French poems, with music; Ruth Comstock sang, Miss Rebyl read, and the hostess also read "Daudet's 'The Goat of M. Seguin'" in French. Miss Buel and the Misses Ruth Welsh and Claire Van Lennep assisted in receiving the guests, and Mrs. Cass Gilbert and Mrs. Charles H. Ditson poured tea.

Among the guests were Mrs. Lindley Hoffman Chapin, Mrs. Joseph Howland Hunt, Mrs. Joseph A. Smith, Mrs. Charles de Kay, Mrs. A. Barton Hepburn, Mrs. William S. Edgar, Mrs. Eugene Coleman Savage, Mrs. Thayer Jaccaci, Mrs. Carlo Ponisene, Mrs. Carroll Beckwith, Mrs. Melbert Cary, Mrs. Benjamin Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Vivian Burnett, Mrs. Robert I. Ide, Mrs. Robert Underwood Johnson, Mrs. August Louis, Mrs. Clarence C. Rice, Miss Pauline Robinson, the Misses Gilder, Miss Hadley, Miss Carlotta Neilson, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Paul Loyssac, Sam Franko, and Ernest Perrine.

KANE MEMORIAL ALTAR SHOWN

Consecration Ceremonies in Convent of the Cenacle, Newport.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., May 4.—The chapel of the Convent of the Cenacle was blessed today by Bishop Thomas F. Doran of Providence, assisted by priests of Newport, Providence, and Boston with consecration ceremonies preceding. A magnificent white marble altar, the gift of Mrs. De Lancey Astor Kane of New Rochelle as a memorial to her husband, was shown, and two masses for the repose of the soul of Col. Kane were said. Mrs. Kane, her sister, Miss Iselin of New Rochelle; Dr. Horatio R. Storer, Miss Agnes Storer, and Mrs. Paul A. Andrews were present.

The marriage of Miss Margaret F. Andrews of Newport and Morgan Belmont of New York at the end of August will be a house wedding in the reception room of Rockery Hall, the residence of the bride's parents on Bellevue Avenue. Miss Andrews, a Catholic, will be married by the pastor of St. Mary's Church.

James J. Van Alen and Mr. and Mrs. James Laurens Van Alen arrive for the Summer Thursday at the latter's cottage Rosetta, on Bellevue Avenue, to remain a month, while extensive improvements to the former's residence, Wakehurst, are completed.

Mrs. Vanderbilt arrives at The Breakers Wednesday for a short stay before coming for the Summer on May 15.

Mrs. Burke Roche has arrived at Elm Court.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel B. Fearing are at the Muenchinger King for a stay of a month from Santa Barbara, where they passed the Winter.

Lieut. Commander and Mrs. Franck Taylor Evans gave a dinner at the training station tonight in honor of Colonel and Mrs. George F. Landers of Fort Adams. Others present were Commander and Mrs. Carl T. Vogelgesang, Mrs. Goldsborough Adams of Washington, the Rev. A. W. Henzel, Dr. and Mrs. Charles D. Eeaston, and Lieut. Commander and Mrs. Evans.

Mr. and Mrs. Craig Biddle of Philadelphia, who arrived from Europe this week, are at the Shields cottage for the Summer.

COACHING AT WHITE SULPHUR.

Lawrence Dickson Drives a Four-in-Hand Through Mountains.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., May 3.—Perfect weather has been enjoyed by the devotees of outdoor sports at White Sulphur for the last week, and walkers, riders, and mountain climbers are to be seen on all hands. The golf links are drawing more than their share of the colony, and the tennis courts are well filled all day long. The program is generally brought to a pleasant close shortly before the time by a cool and delicious plunge in the swimming tank.

There was a considerable flurry on the veranda of the Greenbrier this morning when most of the vacationists had gathered to read their mail and papers by the wheeling up of a handsome and spirited four-in-hand hitched up a tally-ho. The coach was driven by Lawrence Dickson, the enthusiastic horseman and hunter. Mrs. L. L. Turck and William F. Reilly of New York, were Mr. Dickson's guests, and they took a drive through the mountains and stopped for luncheon at Elmhurst farm. This was the first coaching here this season.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Hanna of Cleveland, arrived at the Greenbrier this morning on their annual Spring visit. They joined Mr. Hanna's nephew, Dan R. Hanna, whose family has been here for the last two months. During Mr. Hanna's stay he will take the medical cure and the golf cure.

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Vandeveer of Elizabeth, N. J., and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baker of aSn Francisco, also arrived this morning and will remain until the Spring season has closed.

HUGHES DECLINES TO BE A CANDIDATE

Disapproves Mention of Name in Connection with Republican Nomination for President.

STRONG FEELING FOR HIM

Boom in His Behalf Was Making Considerable Headway, and May Not Be Given Up Even Now.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Justice Charles E. Hughes of the United States Supreme Court today definitely declared his disapproval of the mention of his name in connection with the Republican nomination for President of the United States, and made a definite statement that he did not desire to re-enter politics, and that he was not available as a Presidential candidate. In his behalf, and with his approval, the following statement was made:

"Justice Hughes wholly disapproves the use of his name in connection with the Presidential campaign. Not only has he no desire to re-enter politics, but as a member of the Supreme Court he is not available. He is not a candidate in any sense, and cannot permit his name to be used."

The fact that the former Governor of New York and present member of the highest judicial tribunal of the country felt called upon to make such a statement, shows how definitely the Hughes boom was developing, and how well aware Justice Hughes was that it was likely to get beyond his ability to stop it, if he did not take deterrent action at once. There has been no Hughes movement in the sense that an organized effort as under way in his behalf, but it has been apparent for some time that men of high standing in the Republican Party, who had no axes to grind, but were anxious to rehabilitate the party for reasons that were based on motives not entirely partisan, were discussing Justice Hughes as the best selection for the Republican candidate for President.

It is probable that some inkling of this trend had reached the ears of Justice Hughes and had much to do with the preparation of the authoritative statement issued today. The acute reason for the announcement is supposed to be the recent declaration of Governor Hatfield of West Virginia for Justice Hughes as the Republican standard bearer.

The declaration of Justice Hughes is bound to be a keen disappointment to those persons of national prominence who looked to him to lead the party back to the place of supremacy that it occupied in Washington for sixteen years. Not one of them, however, ever felt certain that Justice Hughes would become the Republican candidate, even if the nomination was made and the convention had adjourned. But it was the feeling among these men that Justice Hughes could not properly reject a nomination that came to him in that way, and, while no plans had been formed, it was apparent that they contemplated working quietly in his behalf in the hope that he would be chosen in the next Republican National Convention by the sheer force of the fact that he would be regarded as the very best man available, and that Justice Hughes could not afford to refuse the honor thrust upon him.

That was the thought in the mind of a foremost Republican who would never allow his name to be mentioned in connection with his intention to urge Justice Hughes's qualifications on the attention of other Republican leaders. How far the undercurrent of sentiment for Justice Hughes had developed among men of this character is not known generally, but there is some reason to believe that it was making considerable headway. Most of these prominent Republicans know that Justice Hughes had stated definitely, when he went on the Supreme Bench, that he would not return to politics, but they felt that he should be willing to surrender that position for reasons that some of them, at least, considered to be more patriotic than partisan.

What will be the attitude of these admirers of Justice Hughes from now on is something that probably will not be disposed until discussion of Republican possibilities for the Presidential nomination is begun in earnest next Winter. Many Republican national leaders do not agree with the view of other Republicans that the party is certain to come back into power through the elections of 1916. They hold that only by nominating for President a man of nation-wide reputation for progressiveness, who has shown his ability to accomplish things that the people want, can the Republican Party be certain of getting control again of the machinery of government. It is among the Republicans who adhere to this view that the Hughes movement has been so strong. That some of them will not be willing to give up the hope that Justice Hughes will be the next President of the United States is a factor that may come to light in the near future.

"She's In Again" for the Gaiety.

A farcical comedy entitled "She's in Again," will be presented in the Gaiety Theatre Monday night, May 17, following the engagement of "Daddy Long-Legs," which will end a week from Saturday night. "She's in Again," is an Americanized version by Thomas J. Gray of "My Aunt," a play adapted by Sidney Blow and Douglas Hoare from the French. In the original French it was one of the successes in Paris last Spring. The cast includes Ada Lewis, Helen Lowell, Julia Ralph, Edwin Nicander, George A. Schiller, William Roselle, Mae Hopkins, Eileen Van Biene, Sydney Greenstreet, the Hon. Helen Montagu and Clifford Robertson. The locale of the comedy has been changed to America.

Browning Birthday Celebration.

The birthday of Robert Browning will be celebrated Friday evening in the Neighborhood Playhouse with a special program of the poet's works. Mrs. Sarah Cowell Le Moyne, of the producing staff of the theatre, will give readings from Browning. Her program will include "The Flower Name," "Love Among the Ruins," "Up at the Villa—Down in the City," and "Saul" from the Dramatic Lyrics; "My Last Duchess," "Count Gismond," and "In a Gondola" from the Dramatic Romances; and "Prospice" and "Youth and Art" from the Dramatis Personae.

Barker's Cast for "Trojan Women."

Granville Barker has completed the cast for "Trojan Women," the Greek tragedy, with which the new stadium of the College of the City of New York will be dedicated May 29. The principals and their rôles will be Lillah McCarthy, as Hebuca; Edith Wynne Matthison, Andromache; Chrystal Herne, Cassandrea; Gladys Hanson, Helen; Lionel Braham, Poseidon; Ian MacLaren, Talthybuis; Philip Merivale, Menelaus, and Alma Kruger, as leader of the chorus.

Inez Buck Joins Ben Greet's Players.

Inez Buck has been engaged by Ben Greet as leading woman of his Woodland Players for their coming tour. Miss Buck was last seen here in the title rôle of "The Misleading Lady." The tour will begin this month, and will embrace the principal colleges and country clubs of the East and Middle West. The repertoire will include "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "The Tempest," "Twelfth Night," "As You Like It," "She Stoops to Conquer," and "Masks and Faces." A string quartet from the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra to play the incidental music will be a feature of the performances.

BRADY HOSPITAL OPENED.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, May 4.—James Buchanan Brady was the centre of attraction this afternoon at the opening of the Urological Institute which bears his name and which he donated to Johns Hopkins Hospital at a cost of more than $250,000. Some of the most prominent men in New York and Baltimore attended the opening and showered congratulations upon Mr. Brady for his donation to humanity.

Mr. Brady came to Baltimore from Philadelphia, where he had been spending a week with friends. With him were Frederick Housman, Dr. Simon Flexner, J. J. Fields, Dr. Edward L. Keyes, Professor of Surgery at Bellevue Hospital, and Dr. A. C. Nordhuff, all of New York City.

The institution which Mr. Brady presented to Johns Hopkins Hospital is the best of its kind in the world, having an equipment which will fit it to do wonderful research work. Mr. Brady was called on to say something at the afternoon exercises and briefly acknowledged the kindness of the officials at the institution and explained that he loved Johns Hopkins Hospital because it benefited mankind.

In the evening a banquet in Mr. Brady's honor was given by the Trustees of the hospital, at which B. Howard Griswold, a prominent corporation lawyer of this city, was toastmaster. Mr. Brady made an address, telling of his treatment at the hands of Dr. Hugh H. Young, director of the new institution, and why he presented the large sum of money to the hospital. There were about 100 guests at the banquet, among them Raymond Hitchcock, the actor, and Mrs. Hitchcock, and William E. Barnes of New York.

OFFICIAL FAVORS CRITICISM.

Federal Prosecutor Talks of People's Rights to Rotary Club.

Assistant United States Attorney General Samuel Huston Thompson, Jr., was the principal guest at the dinenr of the Rotary Club of New York last night at the Hotel McAlpin. He came from Washington to speak on "The Government versus the People," and said his purpose was to give the diners a glimpse of the machinery of the Government so that they would appreciate some of the difficulties in the way of obtaining an administration that would suit every one.

"There is no closed season on public officials," he said, "and the people feel they are always at liberty to take a pot shot at them. That course is justified within certain limis. So long as we can criticise Uncle Sam as if he were one of our nearest relatives, and kept in our minds that we take this criticism ceriously and will follow it up in terms of action, that is, with the vote, we are doing the best thing for our country's health.

"I believe in a central Government to administer Federal affairs, but I do not believe in a Federal Government taking the lead in matters that are rightly local. The individual must not lose the right to criticise his Government and its officials, for that is what makes for righteous administration."

Other speakers were Arthur B. Reeve, author of the "Craig Kennedy" detective stories; Medical Examiner Otto H. Schultze, Senator Jose Castellot, former member of the Mexican National Legislature and personal adviser to ex-President Diaz, who spoke in general terms of the question of trade relations between North and South America, and the Rev. Merle St. Croix Wright.

STRENGTHEN LIBERTY BELL.

Clapper Removed and Steel Braces Inserted in Famous Relic.

PHILADELPHIA, May 4.—The clapper which had hung inside the Liberty Bell for 162 years has been removed and a "spider" of structural steel placed on the inside of the relic.

The "spider," or steel skeleton, stretches its six metal feelers down underneath the bell and at equidistant points around the chipped edges clasps them tightly so that the crack in it may be prevented if possible from growing further.

The removal of the clapper led to the spread of a report today that it had been stolen, and Chief Ball of the Bureau of City Property was kept busy denying the rumor. He explained that the clapper has been stowed away safely in the hall.

Whether the clapper will be taken with the bell to the Panama-Pacific Exposition will be decided by the Councilmanic Committee, which is preparing the plans for the journey.

'CARMEN' FOR WAR BENEFIT.

Geraldine Farrar to Sing in Aid of Paris Sewing Girls.

There will be a special performance of "Carmen" at the Metropolitan Opera House on Thursday evening, May 13, for the benefit of the fund for sewing girls in Paris. Geraldine Farrar will sing the title rôle and Mme. Frances Alda will appear as Micaela. Giovanni Martinelli will sing Don José, and it is expected that Pasquale Amato will be the Toreador. Giorgio Polacco will conduct.

Among those instrumental in making the arrangements are Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, and Mrs. Ogden Mills. The principals in the performance have agreed to donate their services in aid of the midinettes who have worked on the costumes they have worn on the stage.

Concert for Girls' Protective League.

A concert for the benefit of the Girls' Protective League and the employment exchange in connection with the league, will be held at the Ritz-Carlton Tuesday, May 11. The artists to appear are Miss Geraldine Farrar, Mr. and Mrs. Ossip Gabrilowitsch and Francis Rogers. The list of patronesses includes Mrs. Willard D. Straight, Mrs. Richard Trimble, Mrs. James A. Burden, Mrs. Otto Wittpen, Mrs. John Henry Hammond, and Mrs. Seymour L. Cromwell.

Grand and Comic Opera at Standard

The Standard Theatre, Broadway and Ninetieth Street, will house as its Summer attraction a season of grand and comic opera in English, alternating each week, by the Van den Berg-Congers Opera Company, beginning next Monday evening with a performance of "Il Trovatore." Jose Van den Berg will be the conductor, and the cast will include Bettina Freeman, Eva Quintard, Henri Barron, Leon Fastovsky, Alan Turner and Gilbert Wilson. During the second week the company will present Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado," with Mana Zucca as Yum Yum. There will me matinees Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Thursday Musical Club Concert.

The scholarship concert of the Thursday Musical Club will take place tomorrow evening at the house of Mr. and Mrs. John R. MacArthur, 346 West Eighty-fourth Street. The Kneisel Quartet and Sascha Jacobsen are to appear. Miss Katherine Sewall of 29 East Seventy-seventh Street, is receiving applications for tickets.

SIR WM. R. GOWERS DIES.

Widely Known Writer on Medical Subjects Succumbs in London.

LONDON, May 4.—Sir William Richard Gowers, M. D., widely known as a writer on medical subjects, died here today. He was born in 1845 and was a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, a Fellow of the Royal Society, and an honorary M. D. of Dublin University. Sir William was also an LL.D. from Edinburgh University, an honorary member of the Société des Medicins Russes de St. Petersbourg, a member of the Royal Society of Science of Upsala, Sweden, and the consulting physician of the University College Hospital, the National Hospital for Paralyzed and Epileptic, and for the Guardian Assurance Company.

Sir William was a graduate of Christ Church College School at Oxford and of University College in London. His contributions to medical science embrace many subjects, chiefly known to the profession; his Manual of the Diseases of the Nervous System has been translated into German, Italian, and Spanish. Besides his widow, he is survived by two sons and two daughters.

Stephen T. Smith Dies at His Desk.

Stephen T. Smith, general manager of the Underwood Typewriter Company, dropped dead yesterday while sitting at his desk in the offices of the company at Vesey and Church Streets. He was opening his mail when he collapsed. Because of his experience in the typewriter business he was appointed general manager of the Underwood Company for this city when it started in 1897, and shortly after became general manager for the whole country. His knowledge of typewriter patents was so extensive that he became known as a leading expert in that line. Mr. Smith lived at Shippan Point, Stamford, Conn., and is survived by his widow and four sons. He was a member of the Stamford Yacht and the Machinery Club.

Lee S. Burridge.

Lee S. Burridge, President of the Sun Typewriter Company, of 317 Broadway, died yesterday at his home, 160 West Fifty-fourth Street, in his fifty-fourth year. He was a son of the late Dr. L. S. Burridge and was born in Paris, while his parents were traveling abroad. Mr. Burridge was educated in this country and at Tunbridge Wells, England, and became interested in typewriters in the early eighties. He was the first to conceive the idea of a visible writing typewriter and founded his company in 1887. Mr. Burridge was interested in aviation and was the first owner of an aeroplane in this city, and arranged the first public exhibition of flying that was given by Curtiss at Bronx Park. Mr. Burridge founded the Aeronautical Society, of which he was President for several years, and was a member of the Aero Club and the Automobile Club of America.

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday..3¾@4 per cent. for the best names
Monday....3¾@4 " " " "
The quotation is for six months' paper.

Velvet Ribbons Still a Feature.

Velvet ribbons still continue to hold most of the interest in the ribbon trade. The demand varies only in the matter of widths. Narrow goods were popular at first, but the widths now being asked for are 9, 12 and 16, with buyers nibbling on goods of 22 lignes. The samples that are being imported from abroad show no change, it is said, and are mostly merchandise of a kind that has been used before.

Few Duplicates in Piece Goods.

Fall duplicates in the piece goods market are coming in rather slowly from the clothiers. Conditions in men's wear trade seem to be getting more like those prevailing in women's wear every season. If the selers are able to offer something good it will be taken up, but only as a spot proposition. It is now thought fairly certain that glens will figure largely in the Fall duplicating. A feature in operation at present is the substituting of self color stripes in place of the silk stripe.

Buttons Still Selling Big.

Button manufacturers and importers find an unusual feature to this season's business just now in the increase in the demand at the time when it usually falls off. The trade has being doing a record business and one that is confined to no one line but takes in everything, even to supplying the shoe manufacturers with novelties. If the button sales are any criterion, the season in the women's apparel lines must be a wonderful one. Pearls and ivories are being used, and 80 per cent. of the orders, it is said, have been placed on plain white and blacks and a combination of the two. The season is a little too early to determine what styles will be good for Fall, although it is fairly certain that the quantity used will be large, since this season's business has increased instead of diminished as time went on.

Less Duty on Silk Waste.

Collector Malone was notified yesterday by Assistant Secretary Peters of the Treasury Department of a big reduction in the duty heretofore taken on artificial silk waste. The merchandise, it appears, is composed of artificial silk threads, mixed with a very small percentage of real silk threads, in a tangled condition. Up to this time waste of this kind has been returned for duty at 35 per cent. ad valorem as artificial silk filaments under Paragraph 319. The department, after an exchange of views with the customs officials here, advised the Collector that when tangled the merchandise under consideration ceases to be a commercial yarn or thread, and should hereafter be returned at 10 per cent.

Coal Trade Situation.

Referring to the trade in anthracite, The Coal Trade Journal of today will say that the demand this week "shows the reaction which normally follows the close of a discount month. Buying was rather active toward the end of April, but this was only a temporary revival due to the desire of dealers to get a little extra tonnage shipped before the 10-cent advance went into effect. Now that there is no incentive for haste orders have dropped off for the time being." In regard to bituminous, the weight of opinion is that the trade is gradually getting in a stronger position and that the underlying strength will become more clearly visible in the course of a few months, and possibly within a few weeks.

Five Per Cent. Case Not Decided.

The inability of the members of the United States Court of Customs Appeals to settle their differences of opinion as to the interpretation to be given the 5 per cent. rebate provision of the tariff law was emphasized yesterday, when the tribunal failed to hand down a decision in the test cases. These have been pending since last November, and, while a decision has been expected weekly since the beginning of the year, a semi-official intimation was made in Washington last week that the differences among the members had been composed and that a decision would be promulgated yesterday. If a decision is not rendered before the Summer recess next month, the determination of the issue by the court will go over to Fall.

Voiles Are Much Wanted.

An excellent business in plain and fancy voiles is being done in this market at the present time, the converters taking them in good shape to supply the retail and jobbing demand for the finished goods. Quite a good business is also being done on them for delivery later in the year. Seed and splash voiles are active, the demand for the former being especially good. Lawns and fine organdies are also good, but the most wanted fabrics at the moment, and the scarcest, appear to be cotton gabardines and voiles made up with wide awning or pleating stripes. The mills continue to complain of a lack of profit on the plainer constructions, however, and this in spite of recent advances that have been made on them in the unfinished state.

The Crude Rubber Market.

While the manufacturing interests are not taking crude rubber for spot or nearby delivery with any degree of activity in this market at the present time, they are giving serious attention to forward deliveries of the plantation grades, especially pale crêpe. This rubber is now held here at 58 cents a pound, spot, while for July-December shipment it is available at 55 cents. For shipment during 1916, in equal monthly deliveries, it may be had at 50 cents. Smoked sheets, which are quiet, are quoted at 58 cents a pound, spot, while the present spot price on up-river fine, the best Brazilian rubber, is 39½ cents. There is very little selling pressure in evidence at the moment. Receipts from London and Para have been fairly liberal in the last week.

Linen Suits Taking Well.

Among the essentially Summer suits for women and misses none is selling better in this market at the moment than those made of linen and "beach" cloths. The big retailers are operating early in the belief that the vogue for suits, which came in with such a rush this Spring, can be indefinitely prolonged by prompt showings of the goods mentioned. The activity of the cutters on linen suits is reflected in the large sale of colored linens in the primary dry goods market. The bulk of the suits in question are made up with short jackets, such as the Eton and the bolero effects, while the most favored skirts show a neat use of pleating. Shirred and semi-circular skirts are also offered. A number of models incorporate vests, while others are made up with vestees. The various shades of blue seem to lead the color demand, while quite a few naturals are shown.

Gray Goods Were Quiet.

Gray goods were again quiet yesterday, aside from certain constructions of sheetings that were taken by the bag trade. Forty-inch, 4.25-yard goods were disposed of in quite liberal fashion for this purpose at 4½ to 4⅝ cents, the better goods bringing the latter figure. Print-cloths continued inactive, but firm, the mills being well enough supplied with business to tide them over any temporary quiet spell that may come up. The weakness in cotton in the last day or two has had the effect of lessening bids for the late deliveries, but, as the mills were not taking them very seriously at the prices offered, no great harm has been done. There was more selling of 39-inch 68x72s from second hands at 4⅞ cents, but not much was heard of other offerings of this kind. Fine and fancy goods were normally active. Spot print-cloth prices were unchanged at these bases:

39-inch, 68-72s....5c	38½-inch, 60-48s..3½c

MANUFACTURERS TO MEET.

The twentieth annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers will be held in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel on May 25 and 26. William Howard Taft, former President of the United States; Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio, and other speakers of national reputation will address the manufacturers. The subject of Mr. Taft's address is announced to be "The Clayton Act and Other Things."

James A. Emery of the National Council for Industrial Defense will outline the work of the newly created Federal Trade Commission, which is vested with plenary powers over corporate business interests, and there will be a general discussion of the effect of the activities of this body on the manufacturing industry. The Federal Commission on Industrial Relations, which has been investigating the causes of industrial unrest, will also receive consideration at the convention sessions. The attitude which the commission has assumed toward employers in general and the trend taken by the commission at its various hearings will be discussed by Walter Drew of the National Erectors Association.

The sessions of the convention will begin on the morning of May 25 and will be divided into four periods. Among the speakers scheduled to talk are Dr. Eugene L. Fisk, M. W. Alexander of the General Electric Company, and Arthur D. Little. There will be a general discussion from the floor on all topics and reports will be read on fire and accident prevention, union label, immigration, uniform State laws, trade marks and copyrights, and industrial betterment.

WHEAT.

The wheat market was narrow, but, after moderate price movements both ways, closed firm at a net advance of ⅛@⅝c. In the local cash market No. 2 red wheat was quoted at $1.69¼ and No 2 hard at $1.71¼, cost, insurance, and freight, track; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $1.66, and No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $1.66⅝, cost, insurance, and freight, Buffalo.

CORN.

The market for corn was steady throughout the day, in sympathy with wheat and on further complaints of unfavorable weather conditions in Argentina. There was also a better export inquiry, and sales for the day were estimated at about 200,000 bushels. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 87⅝c prompt shipment.

COTTONSEED OIL.

There was only a small volume of business in the cottonseed oil market and prices were lower in the face of firmness in both the lard and cotton markets. The range of prices was as follows:

COFFEE.

Interest in the coffee market at present is centred around the July position, which some interests believe is likely to work into a rather tight technical condition. Prices were generally easier, closing at 2 to 5 points net lower. The local spot market was quiet and unchanged, with Rio 7s quoted at 7⅝c.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts for week, 41,448 packages; last week, 34,913 packages. Exports to Europe, 1,200 packages; to other countries, 66 packages. The demand kept a little ahead of the supply for several days, and the market in consequence was decidedly firm, with a further gain of about ½c, particularly on the higher grades of fresh table butter. At the close the supply and demand were a little more evenly balanced and the tone was only steady, though present values may be sustained for a few days longer. Increased supplies are close by. The bulk of the fresh creamery is now selling in range of 29@31c, some of the fancier lots bringing 31½@32c and lower grades going at 27@28½c, with the exception of some very wild flavored stock from the Far West. Held creamery in light supply and quiet. Renovated firm, with desirable grades selling up closely. Ladles and packing stock in short supply, and the market closed strong, with a little export demand. Creamery, extras, (92 score,) 31c; higher scoring, 31½@32c; firsts, 29@30½c; seconds, 27@28½c; thirds, 25@26c; creamery, held, firsts, 26½@27½c; seconds, 25@26c; thirds, 23@24c; State dairy, finest, 30c; good to prime, 28@29c; common to fair, 23@27c; renovated, extras, 23½@24c; firsts, 22@23c; lower grades, 20@21c; imitation creamery, firsts, 21½@22c; ladles, current make, firsts, 20¾@21c; seconds, 20@20½c; lower grades, 19@19½c; packing stock, current make, No. 2, 19@19½c; lower grades, 18@18½c.

EGGS.—Receipts for week, 264,201 cases. Arrivals have continued on a very large scale, receipts for the past week exceeding all previous records. The market declined under the pressure of heavy supplies and stock in cold storage has accumulated rapidly. Many of the higher grades of storage packed eggs are going direct to the warehouses for account of shippers or track buyers, and at the close this is giving the market a slightly steadier tone on high grades, but the medium and ordinary qualities, which comprise a large part of the regular packings, are urgently offered and meeting rather an unsatisfactory demand at easy prices. Storage accumulations in New York and Jersey City at the close of April were about 596,000 cases, which is far beyond any previous record for this season of year. Dirties and checks have declined, but strictly prime lots are meeting a fair demand at present quotations. Nearby white eggs plentiful and cleaning up with difficulty, a large part of the business in range of 22@23c. Fresh gathered, extras, per dozen, 22@22½c; storage packed, extra firsts, 21½c; storage packed, firsts, 20¾@21c; regular packed, extra firsts, 20½@21c; regular packed, firsts, 19@20c; seconds, 18@18½c; thirds and poorer, 17½c; dirties, No. 1, 17@17½c; No. 2 and poorer, 15½@16½c; checks, good to prime, dry, 15½@16c; culls and poor checks, 10@15c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery whites, fine to fancy, 23@23½c; defective, 22@22½c; gathered whites, as to size and quality, 21½@22½c; Western, gathered whites, 21@22c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery browns, 21½@22½c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 20@21c; duck eggs, State and nearby, Indian runner, 25@27c; Baltimore, per dozen, 23@24c; Western, 20@23c; Tennessee and other Southern, 19@23c.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Catgut, Abrasives, and Pigment Among Articles Passed On.

In overruling a protest by Carl Fischer the Board of General Appraisers yesterday construed the provision in the tariff law for "parts" of musical instruments. The merchandise in controversy was strings made of catgut covered with silk, the latter material being the component of chief value. They were intended for use on musical instruments. The Collector classified the articles as manufactures of silk not specially provided for, and took duty at 45 per cent. ad valorem. The importer claimed duty at 35 per cent. as "parts" of the instruments. Judge Howell in his decision overruling the importer's contention said Congress evidenced an intent to declare that strings for musical instruments composed in chief value of other materials than gut or metal are not to be classified as "parts" of musical instruments.

The American Emery Wheel Works, Providence, lost in a contention relating to Boro-carbone, a commodity made from a clay known as bauxite. The Custom House authorities returned the commodity as being by similitude "emery grains manufactured" with duty at 1 cent per pound. The importing firm claimed assessment at 10 per cent. ad valorem under the provision for "crude artificial abrasives." Judge McClelland held that the evidence amply showed that the boro-carbone in its imported condition is similar in use to emery and affirmed the Collector.

The Adams Express Company, acting as forwarder, brought in footbath tablets, some of which were invoiced as antiseptics. The testimony showed that the tablets were perfumed and dissolved in water for the purpose of softening and smoothing the skin. They were returned for duty under the tariff at 60 per cent. ad valorem as toilet preparations. Among the claims was one that duty should have been collected at 15 per cent. as medicinal preparations. The board held there was nothing in the record to justify a reversal of the Collector.

William A. Foster & Co. were sustained in protests dealing with importations described on the invoices as "crude ivory bone black in chips." It was returned by Appraiser Sague as black pigment and, accordingly, assessed with duty at the rate of 15 per cent. ad valorem under the Tariff act. The testimony was to the effect that while the product is eventually intended for use as a pigment, it is not a pigment in its imported condition. In view of this the board sustained the claim for free entry.

A. Klipstein & Co. and Geisenheimer & Co. imported a commodity which was returned by the Appraiser as "vegetable black." It was assessed at 25 per cent. ad valorem under the act of 1909, and was claimed properly dutiable at only 10 per cent. as charcoal, bone char, or blood char, or in the alternative at 20 per cent. as an unenumerated manufactured article. As the paragraph under which duty was taken provides for black made from bone by whatever name known, Judge McClelland held the provision sufficiently comprehensive to include the merchandise in controversy. The Collector was affirmed.

Wool in Fair Demand.

LONDON, May 4.—There was a fair demand for the 11,600 bales offered at the wool auction sales today. Heavy wools were frequently withdrawn and good merinos were often 5 per cent. lower. Good crossbreds were steady. American buyers were quiet.

NAIL HOLES DID IT.

Took Flooring Out of Free List and Made It Dutiable.

It was decided yesterday by the Board of General Appraisers that nail holes in wood or lumber exclude such products from the benefit of free entry under the tariff law. The case before the customs tribunal was that of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, which protested the Collector's assessment on merchandise returned by the Appraiser as "hardwood flooring planed, tongued, grooved, and bored."

The railway company insisted in its protest that duty exemption accrued under Paragraph 647, which specifies, among other things, "sawed boards, or lumber planed, and tongued and grooved and ready for use as such." Judge McClelland said there is really no controversy as to the facts in the case. Every effect produced on the flooring in question, except the boring of the nail holes, was produced by a machine known as a matcher and planer, and but for these nail holes the flooring, in the opinion of the General Appraiser, would be free as claimed.

"The effect of the boring of these nail holes," said Judge McClelland, "is to place this flooring in a condition beyond that of sawed boards or lumber planed. It might be urged that because these holes were bored in connection with the planing process at very inconsiderable cost, although a step beyond planing, tongueing, and grooving, was too insignificant to be considered as changing the dutiable character of the merchandise; but we do not think that the question of cost should control or even influence a decision on that point."

EXPORTS STILL RISING.

France Led in the Shipments from This Port Last Week.

Exports at this port continued to show gains in the week ended May 1, according to the Custom House statement issued yesterday. Last week's exports totaled $24,763,189, compared with $24,312,996 the week before, and $20,565,585 in the week before that. This year's exports to date are $463,731,170, or $109,307,396 in excess of those of the corresponding period of 1914, when they aggregated $354,423,774.

France purchased war and other supplies here last week worth $7,316,468. The Netherlands came second with $4,039,139, while England fell to third place with $3,491,590. The British Possessions took merchandise manifested at $1,089,206, while Italy's shipments totaled $1,716,468. Since the British Order in Council relative to the seizure of merchandise intended for Germany, the exports from here to the Scandinavian countries show a decline. Sweden took goods last week valued at $926,584, while Denmark's purchases, which until lately were above the million-dollar mark weekly, dropped to $137,824, or a normal export volume in times of peace. Norway's share in last week's outward movement was $400,803. Argentina led among the South American countries with exports worth $986,360.

The export movement in domestics was the heaviest in many weeks, and totaled $781,645. The Philippines took the lion's share, $504,840, while the British East Indies came next with purchases of $39,403. Other good sized exports were made to Colombia, Central America, Cuba, Saloniki, and China. Cotton duck exports for the week were set down at $35,719, of which the Argentine took $15,365.

BUSINESS NOTES.

The opening day's receipts from the Government's auction of unclaimed and abandoned merchandise at the Appraiser's Stores yesterday netted $3,200. A good-sized crowd was on hand, and some of the lots developed lively bidding, prices in many instances exceeding the appraised values. The auction will be continued today, starting at 10 o'clock with lot 551, covering 11,300 feet of picture films.

An auction sale of clothing conducted yesterday by Van Praag & Co., 15 Greene Street, brought about 70 cents on the dollar. The bidding was of a brisk nature on the whole, but at times showed a conservative spirit. Plaids and pencil stripes, although the latter have been pronounced passe, were taken most eagerly.

WEIGHING AND SALES COMPANY.
PROPOSAL FOR SALE OF BONDS.

Pursuant to the terms of the deed of trust dated May 12th, 1911, made by Weighing and Sales Company to Empire Trust Company as Trustee, all persons interested are hereby notified that there has been this day paid to the Empire Trust Company, as such Trustee, the sum of Twenty Thousand Dollars ($20,000) to create a sinking fund for the purchase and redemption of bonds secured by said deed of trust. All persons interested are further hereby notified that pursuant to said deed of trust sealed proposals will be received by the Empire Trust Company at its office, No. 65 Cedar Street, New York City, within six (6) days from the date of the last publication of this notice, offering for sale bonds of the Weighing and Sales Company secured by said deed of trust, with all unpaid coupons thereto attached.

All such offerings shall state the name and address of the persons offering the same for sale, the numbers and par value of the bonds so offered for sale, and the price at which the bonds, with all unpaid coupons thereto attached, are offered for sale, which price must be less than the par value thereof and accrued interest. Such offer shall be contained in a sealed envelope endorsed "Proposal for sale to sinking fund of bonds of Weighing and Sales Company," and must be received by said Empire Trust Company at its office, No. 65 Cedar Street, New York City, on or before May 14th, 1915.

The money so paid to the Trust Company will be used in the purchase of bonds under said offers at the best price obtainable. No proposals will be considered except such as strictly comply with this notice.

Dated New York, May 1st, 1915.

FINANCIAL.

New Orleans, April 26th, 1915.

The City of New Orleans, acting under authority of Act 170 of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana for the year 1908, ratified by constitutional amendment, and now a part of the Constitution of the State of Louisiana, will receive sealed proposals at the office of the Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans up to twelve (12) o'clock noon, on the 28th day of May, 1915, for the purchase of $500,000.00 in face value of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans, authorized by and to be issued under and subject to the act aforementioned, and the constitutional amendment ratifying same, and of the numbers, denominations and maturities of the authorized issue of $2,000,000, and in the form of and in accordance with the bond schedule of the maturities of the entire authorized issue as given and prescribed by an ordinance of the City of New Orleans, being Ordinance No. 8628, N. C. S., approved May 14, 1912, and Ordinance No. 2340 Commission Council Series, approved April 20th, 1915, of said city, authorizing the present offering.

Three hundred and fifty of said bonds are of the denomination of $1000 and three hundred of the denomination of $500, and bear interest at the rate of five per cent per annum, evidenced by coupons attached, payable semi-annually on the first days of January and July, respectively of each year.

Said bonds are the second issuance out of the total amount authorized by said act and constitutional amendment, and are of the numbers, amounts and maturities, as follows, to-wit:

Three hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($350,000) of said bonds shall be of the denomination of $1000 each, and one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000) of the denomination of $500 each, and of the numbers, amounts and maturities as follows, to-wit:

Fifty (50) bonds, Nos. 6451 to 6500, inclusive, of the denomination of $1000, aggregating in face value $50,000, maturing July 1, 1953;

One hundred (100) bonds, Nos. 5901 to 6000, inclusive, of the denomination of $500, aggregating in face value $50,000, maturing July 1, 1953;

Fifty (50) bonds, Nos. 6401 to 6450, inclusive, of the denomination of $1000, aggregating in face value $50,000, maturing July 1, 1952;

Fifty (50) bonds, Nos. 6351 to 6400, inclusive, of the denomination of $1000, aggregating in face value $50,000, maturing July 1, 1951;

One hundred (100) bonds, Nos. 5701 to 5800, inclusive, of the denomination of $500, aggregating in face value $50,009, maturing July 1, 1951.

Said bonds are subject to call by the City of New Orleans on the first day of July, 1939, or on any interest day thereafter, at par and accrued interest on thirty (30) days notice of its intention to so redeem, published in the official newspaper of the City of New Orleans.

They are, by the aforesaid act and constitutional amendment, exempt from all State, Parish and Municipal taxes, and may be legally invested for the estates of minors and of interdicts, and are receivable by State, Parish and Municipal officers, where, by law, deposits of bonds are allowed or required to be made.

The payment of the principal and interest of said bonds is made a preferential charge upon the net revenues of the Public Belt Railroad of the City of New Orleans, and are and will be issued under and subject to the aforementioned statutes and ordinances, all of which are hereby referred to and made part of this advertisement for greater certainty and particularity.

Said proposals shall be received under and subject to the following conditions, to-wit:

Proposals must be in writing, sealed, and marked on the outside of the envelope "Proposals for the purchase of $500,000 of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans," and shall likewise be accompanied by a certified check on some chartered bank in the City of New Orleans, for an amount equal to one per cent. of the aggregate amount of the bid, which said check of the successful bidder or bidders shall be cashed and the proceeds retained by the City of New Orleans as a guarantee that the successful bidder or bidders will comply with its or their bids, and the said proceeds shall be applied to the payment of the bonds last delivered to the successful bidder or bidders, respectively. In case of the neglect or refusal to comply with any bid, the proceeds of said check shall be forfeited to the Public Belt Railroad Commission of the City of New Orleans.

No sale shall be made unless the aggregate of the bids received equals the full amount of the present offering of $500,000, in face value, and the adjudication shall be made to the highest bidder, provided, however, that no adjudication shall take place for less than par and accrued interest. All matured interest coupons shall be cut from said bonds and cancelled, and the successful bidder shall pay the interest which may have accrued on said bonds up to the date of delivery. The bonds shall be paid for in cash as fast as said bonds can be signed and delivered. All bonds will be delivered within thirty days from the opening of said bids. The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

Further particulars and information will be furnished on application to W. B. Thompson, Commissioner of Public Utilities, the Public Belt Railroad Commission, or to the undersigned. The final opinion of Wood & Oakley, lawyers, Chicago, Ill., as to the legality of this issue will be furnished to the successful bidder if so desired.

A. G. RICKS, Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans.

Sinking Fund Purchase of International Agricultural Corporation First Mortgage and Collateral Trust Gold Bonds.

Notice is hereby given that Bankers Trust Company, corporate Trustee under the First Mortgage of International Agricultural Corporation, dated May 1, 1912, to Bankers Trust Company and Frank N. B. Close, as Trustees, securing the First Mortgage and Collateral Trust Five Per Cent. Twenty-Year Sinking Fund Gold Bonds of said International Agricultural Corporation, will purchase for the sinking fund, bonds issued under said mortgage, to an amount sufficient to exhaust as nearly as may be the sum of $311,062.08, now held by said corporate Trustee in said sinking fund, and said corporate Trustee hereby invites sealed offers to be submitted to it on or before 12 o'clock noon, May 14, 1915, at its office, 16 Wall Street, Manhattan, New York City, for the sale to it of such bonds, at prices to be named in such offers, which offers shall be for all or any part of the bonds so offered, provided, however, that no offers will be accepted which shall be for a sum in excess of one hundred and three per centum (103%) of the principal amount of such bonds, and accrued interest. Notices of acceptance of offers will be mailed on or before May 15, 1915, to the makers of such thereof as are accepted, at the addresses designated by them, respectively. Delivery of bonds accepted, with all unmatured coupons attached, should be made at the office of said corporate Trustee on or before 3 o'clock P. M. May 19th, 1915, after which date interest on accepted bonds will cease. United States Treasury decisions require that Federal Income Tax ownership certificates for amount of accrued interest must accompany such bonds when presented for payment.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

The stock market recovered its calm yesterday, a fact which went to show that Monday's break had its origin fully as much in internal as in external causes. The chief of the latter, the attack on an American ship, was no less grave yesterday than it had been the previous day, but in the face of this prices steadied, and then rose in many parts of the list. At the end of the session, despite numerous reactions, many more net gains than net losses were shown. There was even some recrudescence of the sharp upbidding of industrial issues, although the showing made in this department of the market was an irregular one. In some parts of it realizing sales continued to dominate the course of prices, while in others a substantial part of the ground previously lost was recovered. On this movement, however, fresh selling was invited, which led to a retreat from the best prices of the day.

One of the most interesting items of the day's news bearing on the financial situation, though not directly connected with the stock market, was the receipt here of $2,000,000 of the gold recently released by the Bank of France. This came to us by way of England and was supplemented by a smaller shipment of gold from Ottawa. Both of these additions to our gold supply, particularly that which came from Paris, helped to keep in clear relief the noteworthy command which our present position in international trade gives us over the gold of the countries which are buying here with a free hand. The fact that some of the metal is now coming to us from France in fulfillment of reports which the cables have been carrying for a week or more is also interesting in that it shows that one of Great Britain's allies is drawing on her gold supply and thus indirectly at least lessening the demands which have been falling on the Bank of England. Those demands have been so great as to bring the proportion of the Bank of England's reserve down to a figure not only low by comparison with other years, but low, also, by comparison with the average of the period of the war. How great is the effect of the forces working in our favor is indicated by the fact that this gold is coming to us although we ourselves really have no need of it at this time. It may serve our purpose well enough should the present expectations of the establishment here of further large credits for European countries be borne out, but as matters stand our bank reserves are more than ample for all needs.

The other chief incident of the day in Wall Street was the announcement of the sale of $65,000,000 of 4½ per cent. bonds by the Pennsylvania Railroad to be put out under the new mortgage authorized by the shareholders of that company. The bond market was without definite information during business hours regarding the terms at which the bonds would be placed, but the bare announcement of the issue aroused much interest in the bond market, and the extent of the applications which the Pennsylvania bankers received for participation in the flotation furnished fresh proof of the breadth of the investment demand for issues of this class.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Charles F. Junod, for some years Western agent at Omaha, Neb., of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company has joined the banking house of Kountze Bros.

The United States Mortgage and Trust Company has $14,842 for the purchase of Fairmont Coal Company first mortgage 5 per cent. bonds up to noon, May 14.

The Committee on Stock List of the Stock Exchange ruled yesterday that trading in Butte and Superior Copper Company shares be permitted today. Certificates which state that they are transferable in New York or Boston will be good for delivery.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Looking Toward Russia.

President Fahey of the United States Chamber of Commerce, who was in the financial district yesterday, said that he had found American manufacturers and bankers preparing for a commercial invasion of Russia when peace is concluded. Mr. Fahey's organization is working with Congress for the drafting of new commercial treaties, among them, one with Russia. It is also probable that a branch of a United States national bank will be established at Petrograd when war ceases to be Europe's chief business. American business men are going ahead on the theory that Germany's place in Russia's trade must be taken by other countries, and that the United States will be in position to compete for a liberal share.

M., K. & T. Outlook Better.

Yesterday was the last day of the extension of the offer under which the $19,000,000 notes of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, which matured May 1, could be exchanged for new one-year notes bearing a higher rate of interest. It was said something under 10 per cent. of the notes were still undeposited, but so far as could be learned, no attempt had been made to organize the holders of these notes for the purpose of forcing a settlement. It is believed that more notes will be sent in when the holders discover that no arrangements have been made for buying up the undeposited securities. There is nothing to prevent holders from going to court to sue for the face value of their notes, but officials of the company do not appear to expect any suits, and the assertion was made yesterday that all holders were to get the same treatment.

Studebaker Drops on Good News.

Holders of Studebaker common stock received the maximum of what had been expected when the Directors yesterday put the shares on a 5 per cent. basis, yet selling of the stock afterward appeared to indicate disappointment somewhere, although advance inferences from sound quarters had been to the effect that a quarterly payment of either 1 per cent. or 1¼ per cent. would be ordered, with rather more emphasis on the lower figure. The stock had of late been selling higher than one would normally expect a potential 4 per cent. dividend payer to sell, but precedents have weakened since the war market began. It could be argued, though, that precedent would naturally cause a stock to react when expected good news made its appearance, but Studebaker's drop from the day's high level of 78 to 73⅛ after the dividend announcement seemed to overdo the conventional dip downward.

Income Back to the Property.

The American Cotton Oil Company indicated at yesterday's meeting by not resuming common stock dividends, that the policy of turning earnings back into the property on an extensive scale is being continued. A Director was quoted as saying that in the first seven months of the fiscal year, net income available for common stock dividends had amounted to $800,000. This was twice as much as the entire year of 1914 brought in, and more than $100,000 better than 1913.

The Rumely Situation.

The Noteholders' Committee and Preferred Stockholders Protective Committee of the Rumely Company have not as yet compared opinions as to the methods to be followed in the reorganization, but progress has been made by the former. The Stockholders' Committee will hold a meeting today and will probably discuss the report made by a special examiner of the company's properties, and, with this as a basis, decide what to suggest in conferences with the noteholders' organization. The latter has been in possession of the report for some days, without making public its contents. It is understood that the committees would prefer not to have the expert's findings known generally until the first definite step toward putting the company on its feet has been decided upon.

Distributing French Notes.

The American investor has never had to seek outside fields for his investment funds, but has found a demand for all his money at better rates of interest at home. For that reason bankers were curious to see what kind of a reception would be afforded the offerings made here by European Governments for war purposes. It was reported yesterday that the banking syndicate which recently underwrote an offering of French Government one-year five per cent notes at 99½ would shortly be wound up, and that approximately $15,000,000 of the notes remained in the hands of the syndicate. J. P. Morgan & Co., which bought out the issue, would not comment on the report.

Funds Which Must Be Invested Conservatively

In the investment of funds accumulated by your personal efforts, or funds representing an inheritance, or funds of banks or institutions with which you may be identified, the situation is one calling for deliberate decision, combined with a thorough understanding of those factors which make for sound values in any given type of security. We shall be pleased to suggest to you in this connection various types of conservative investment bonds, including those of public utilities, railroads, and American and Canadian municipalities.

Circumstances

often permit an Investor to buy a high grade security much below the price at which it was originally placed, even though its intrinsic value has increased.

The Market presents some striking examples of such cases.

RESERVE BANK HERE GETS NORTH JERSEY

OTHER BOUNDARY CHANGES

Dallas Loses Southern Oklahoma—Baltimore Pleads for the Reserve Bank Now in Richmond.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—The Federal Reserve Board today by a unanimous vote ordered the transfer of the member banks of Northern New Jersey from the Philadelphia to the New York district. The order affects 132 banks, with a combined capital and surplus of a little more than $32,000,000 and deposits of more than $161,000,000. It will add to the capital stock of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York about $1,920,000, or 6 per cent. of the capital and surplus of the member banks affected, and take the same amount from the capital stock of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia.

As a result of this order the twelve northern counties of New Jersey—Sussex, Passaic, Bergen, Warren, Morris, Essex, Union, Somerset, Middlesex, Monmouth, Hunterdon, and Hudson—will be restored to their normal trade channels connecting them with New York. New Jersey is divided just about in half, geographically speaking, with the wealthier and more densely populated portion thrown into the New York district. The dividing line runs in general east and west across the narrow part of the State, starting on the western boundary just south of Lambertville, curving north around Trenton, so as to leave that city in the Philadelphia district, then south to New Egypt, and on east to the coast just south of Sea Girt.

At the same time the Federal Reserve Board took two counties in West Virginia—Tyle and Wetzel, from the Richmond district and put them in the Cleveland district. A more important change was the transfer of all Southern Oklahoma, now attached to the Dallas district, to the district centring on Kansas City, except the five counties of Marshall, Bryan, Choctaw, Pushmataha, and McCurtain.

The two counties in West Virginia contained only five member banks with a combined capital and surplus of $531,000. The cession of territory in Oklahoma means a transfer to Kansas City of member banks with a combined capital and surplus of $6,217,000.

The board definitely rejected the demand of the banks in Wyoming and Nebraska that they be put in the Chicago district instead of, as at present, the district of Kansas City. The consideration of all other requests for changes in boundary lines was postponed. The most important of these requests was that of Baltimore which asked that the Federal Reserve Bank now at Richmond be removed to Baltimore, and the request of Philadelphia that the third district be compensated for the loss of northern New Jersey. On this subject the board's blanket resolution says:

Be it further resolved, That action on other pending petitions be deferred until further experience in the actual operation of the several districts, especially in the light of the new clearing system which is about to go into effect, and of the extent to which State banks take membership in the Federal Reserve system, shall have provided the board with the necessary data for a conclusion, it being the opinion of the board that action on petitions relating to changes in cities designated as the location of Federal Reserve Banks should be deferred until the board shall have reached a conclusion from experience as to any further readjustments in the boundaries of the several districts or in the number of districts which may be desirable in the operation and development of the Federal Reserve system.

Although the board's announcement of its action said that it was unanimous and that even Secretary McAdoo, who was absent, asked to be recorded in favor of the changes, it is believed that the final result was not accomplished without friction, and that there is a wide divergence of opinion about some of the requests, consideration of which has been postponed.

After the meeting, Governor Hamlin met all inquiries with the statement that the board had bound members to secrecy and that the text of the resolution could alone be divulged, with the briefs of the contending banks. All questions as to possible future changes met the same response.

The board's action regarding Northern New Jersey is a distinct reversal of the action of the Organization Committee, made up of Secretary McAdoo, Secretary of Agriculture Houston, and Controller of the Currency Williams, both Mr. McAdoo and Mr. Williams being now ex-officio members of the board. It had been expected that Secretary McAdoo and Mr. Williams, by fighting for their original decisions would divide the board on the question settled today.

Walter M. Van Dusen, Chairman of the New Jersey Bankers' Association, was chief spokesman for the delegation, which advocated the transfer of the northern half of the State to the New York district. He said that the original poll of the banks of the State by the Organization Committee showed in the entire State 122 banks favoring an alignment with New York to 65 for Philadelphia. From the member banks in the northern half of the State he said he had a petition for a transfer signed by 123 banks, while only nine banks on the new boundary line refused to sign on the ground that they were indifferent. These nine institutions did not oppose the transfer. Indeed, Philadelphia had not asked for Northern New Jersey, Mr. Van Dusen said, and was much surprised at the Organization Committee's action. Nor did Philadelphia oppose the transfer ordered today, except to the extent of asking compensation in other directions.

There is a particular interest here in the pending request of the Baltimore bankers for the removal to that city of the Reserve Bank at Richmond. Controller Williams is a native of Richmond, while his brother is a banker in Baltimore. There was an unconfirmed rumor today that the Board was considering the novel plan of compensating Philadelphia and giving Baltimore additional banking facilities, by dividing the city geographically and establishing two branch Federal Reserve banks on opposite sides of the dividing street, one corresponding with the bank in Philadelphia, the other with the bank in Richmond, but with both branches under the same local control. A similar plan has been suggested for New Orleans, dividing its trade between Atlanta and Dallas.

GOLD ARRIVES FROM PARIS.

Lazard Freres Receive $2,000,000, First Since War Began.

Lazard Frères received from the Bank of France yesterday $2,000,000 gold which came on the steamship Espagne from Bordeaux and was deposited at the Sub-Treasury. Also, $640,000 gold arrived from Ottawa in two lots of $200,000 and $240,000 and went to the Sub-Treasury for the account of one of the national banks. These were the first shipments of consequence into New York reported since Lazard Frères imported $7,000,000 two weeks ago.

The shipment from the Bank of France was the first known to have been sent direct to New York from Paris since the war began. Many millions have come from Canada for the account of France, but the only shipment across the Atlantic this year was $750,000 for Goldman, Sachs & Co., and Kidder, Peabody & Co., from London early in March. It is expected that more will come in the near future, as dispatches from London recently have commented at length on the plans of the Bank of France to release gold for New York.

TO BUY STEVENS ARMS CO.

Westinghouse Concern Needs Plant to Fill Rifle Orders.

The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company has taken options on several manufacturing plants in New England, including the J. Stevens Arms and Tool Company of Chicopee Falls, Mass., and announcement is expected within a day or two that the deals have been completed. The Stevens-Duryea Automobile Company, which is controlled by the J. Stevens Company, is included in the arrangements. The purchases were first contemplated by the Westinghouse management a few weeks ago when bids for 1,000,000 rifles for the account of a foreign Government were being figured out.

Chairman Guy E. Tripp of the Westinghouse Company said yesterday that matters had not yet come to a point to admit of discussion. Officers of the company declined to say what the probable price for the Stevens properties would be. In addition to the order for 1,000,000 rifles at $27.50 each, the company has placed tentative bids for another lot of the same amount.

The J. Stevens Arms Company's plant covers about eight acres, and in normal times employs 1,000 men. The company's equipment is especially adapted, it is said, to the manufacture of the rifles specified in the foreign order.

STUDEBAKER COMMON PAYS.

Initial Dividend at 5 Per Cent. Rate Credited to War.

Directors of the Studebaker Corporation declared yesterday an initial dividend of 1¼ per cent. for the current quarter on the common stock. Payment will be made June 1 to shareholders of record May 20. The usual quarterly disbursement of 1¾ per cent. on the preferred was ordered.

Earnings of the company since Jan. 1 have been running close to the rate of 20 per cent. a year on the junior shares, according to statements made in quarters close to the management. In the fiscal year ended Dec. 31 the net income was equivalent to more than 14 per cent. on the common stock, and a further increase over this rate in 1915, it is said, was made possible largely through orders for harness and automobiles from foreign Governments. War orders of the sort are understood to have amounted to approximately $17,000,000 since September.

Chino Shows Prosperity.

For the quarter ended March 31, 1915, the Chino Copper Company reports milling profits of $835,193, as compared with $259,201 in the previous quarter, and a surplus after dividends of $455,668 against a deficit of $149,000. These earnings were based on 14.37 cents for copper compared with 11.08 cents per pound in the previous quarter. The production was 11,732,000 tons, an increase of 2,769,000 tons.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Nervousness regarding danger of serious complications growing out of the latest war developments was still an influence in the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange, although there were indications at times during the day that the market was endeavoring to throw off the effect of this disturbing incident. In the earliest dealings prices for some of the leading stocks receded sharply under their closing quotations of Monday. On these recessions many bearish accounts were covered and there was also a large volume of commission house purchases. Prices gradually improved, with a good deal of strength showing by the early afternoon. Later, however, the market again tended to recede, with the final prices for the leading stocks well off from the best.

COTTON PRICES RISE IN ACTIVE TRADING

CABLES SHOW WEAKNESS

Bear Element Think Upturn Is Only Temporary—Flood Situation in Texas Improved.

Disappointing weak cables and overnight liquidation gave cotton a nervous and unsettled opening at a decline of about 12 points yesterday. Considerable cotton was thrown overboard, and the market presented a weak appearance. Commission houses let go their long lines which had been hanging in the balance, and the ring professionals showed a disposition to increase their short commitments.

Covering by some of the larger bear interests, however, absorbed these offerings, and toward the end of the first hour the undertone became steadier. This induced a good deal of local covering, and along in the afternoon the market shot up sharply, recovering about 24 to 25 points from the opening, and closed firm at a net gain of about a dozen points.

Although the action of the market indicated that urgent liquidation had been completed, the bear element, who have had their first inning in many weeks, are inclined to regard the upturn as only temporary. Weather is improving in the South, and it is pointed out that the reduction in acreage gives an opportunity for farm labor to give more extensive cultivation to the area that will be planted. The Texas traveling crop expert of one of the local firms estimates the reduction of acreage in that State at only about 7 per cent. One of the leading Alabama spot firms places the decrease in acreage for the Carolinas, Georgia, and Alabama at about 12 per cent.

The weakness in Liverpool was explained by the following cable: "Market easier in consequence weakness your market; liquidation Egyptian market consequent upon prohibition exports from Alexandria to Italy and Switzerland. Absence of buying power and long liquidation in Liverpool and American markets and diversely for selling here by British Government of Continental shipments of cotton."

There was a further improvement in the Texas flood situation, although it is admitted that in the inundated areas the crop will be about one month late. The forecast for the Texas belt called for fair and colder weather for Arkansas and Oklahoma, with unsettled weather in East Texas. The predictions for the Eastern belt were generally fair.

Arrivals of cotton at New York yesterday included 6,090 bales, which were believed to be destined for delivery on contracts. Savannah alone shipped 3,590 bales of this cotton.

Bulls point out that Southern spot markets have shown relatively little decline compared with futures, as Carolina mills are bidding about ¼c. below the highest level of the season, while contracts have made a maximum decline of about 80 points.

Southern spot markets as officially reported were unchanged, 7 to 12 points decline. The local market for spot cotton was quiet, 10 points advance, 1.30c. for middling upland. The range of contract prices, which closed firm, was as follows:

The Pacific Gas & Electric Co.
First Preferred Stock

is issued by the Company which has the contract for supplying gas and electricity to the Panama Pacific Exposition. The increased earnings that should come as a result of that business are being reflected in the statements issued by the Company. The serving of this great Exposition, which is a large community in itself, would have been a difficult undertaking for any company. The officials of the Exposition pay high tribute to the Pacific Gas & Electric management for their promptness and efficiency in installing gas and electricity for the Fair.

The Northern New York Power Corporation is completing a hydro-electric development of 12,000 horse-power on the Oswego River about thirty miles from Syracuse. These bonds are secured by first mortgage on this property at the very low rate of $75 per h. p.

Lease

The Company has executed a lease, with the Niagara, Lockport & Ontario Power Company, extending to December 31, 1940. Under the terms of this lease, the lessee covenants to pay an average net rental of approximately $120,000 a year. This lease has been deposited with the Trustee as additional security for these bonds. It is estimated that these rental payments will exceed by more than $1,200,000 the interest charges and the payments required to retire all now outstanding bonds.

Guarantee

All of the capital stock of the Northern New York Power Corporation is owned, and these bonds are guaranteed as to principal and interest by endorsement, by the Columbia Mills, Inc. The average surplus earnings of the guarantor, augmented by the average net rental payments amount to over $400,000 a year, or more than eleven times the average interest on these bonds and sufficient to pay the entire principal and interest in three years.

Equity

This property has been valued by the Public Service Commission, Second District, State of New York, for capitalization purposes at $1,498,000, which is $598,000 or over 65% above the par value of all outstanding bonds.

The Stone & Webster Engineering Corporation has investigated this property in our behalf.

FINANCIAL.

MONTANA WATER COMPANY.

Montana Water Company, a New Jersey corporation, hereby gives notice to the holders of all the First Mortgage Six Per Cent. Sinking Fund Gold Bonds of the Montana Water Company outstanding under its mortgage to Bankers Trust Company, as Trustee, dated December 10, 1908, that the Montana Water Company will redeem, as provided in Article IV. of said mortgage, all of said bonds on June 1, 1915, at the office of said Trustee, Bankers Trust Company, 16 Wall Street, New York City, at 110 per cent. of the par value thereof, together with accrued interest thereon to such date of redemption. After such redemption date said bonds will cease to bear interest and coupons for interest subsequent to such date will be void, and such bonds will cease to be entitled to the lien of said mortgage.

United States Treasury decision requires that Federal Income Tax Ownership Certificates for the amount of accrued interest must accompany such bonds when presented for payment.

MONTANA WATER COMPANY.
Dated April 24, 1915.

TO THE HOLDERS OF FIRST MORTGAGE 5% BONDS of the COLUMBIA GAS & ELECTRIC COMPANY, due January 1, 1927:

Notice is hereby given that sealed proposals for the sale of bonds of the above mentioned company under the mortgage from said company to the undersigned, as successor trustee, for account of the sinking fund, to the extent of Ninety-five Thousand Four and 95-100 Dollars, ($95,004.95) will be received at the office of the undersigned, Trust Department, 60 Broadway, New York City, on or before May 26, 1915, at 12:00 o'clock noon, in accordance with the terms of said mortgage.

No proposals will be accepted at a price greater than par and accrued interest, and the right is reserved by the undersigned to reject any and all proposals. Bonds accepted must be delivered on May 27th or security furnished that day if required, that delivery will be made within ten days.

Dated, New York, April 21, 1915.

The Pennsylvania Railroad is to meet the balance of $87,827,000 of convertible bonds maturing next October with the proceeds of a sale of $65,000,000 of new general mortgage 4½ per cent. bonds. The sale of this block, the first to be issued under the company's new mortgage, to Kuhn, Loeb & Co., was confirmed yesterday.

With the proceeds of $49,000,000 of consolidated mortgage bonds sold some weeks ago, the Pennsylvania will have provided itself with close to $114,000,000 of money this year. After taking care of the $87,827,000 of convertibles sold ten years ago and due Oct. 1 the company will have left approximately $25,000,000 of new capital for improvements and equipment purchases. The retirement of the convertibles involves an increase of 1 per cent. in the Pennsylvania's interest charges, the old bonds bearing only 3½ per cent. President Rea said yesterday that this sale would take care of the Pennsylvania's financing for the balance of the year 1915.

A great deal of interest was manifested in bond circles over the probable reception which will be given the new 4½s by the investing public. It is expected that the offering price will be par, or a shade better, making the yield a full 4½ per cent., and the popularity of the Pennsylvania's bonds with investors was taken as a practical guarantee of the quick distribution of even such a large block. In any event, before the bankers had sent out the customary invitations to houses which share underwriting risks with Kuhn, Loeb & Co., a considerable number of applications for allotments of the new issue were received. The underwriting commission will be 2½ per cent., or $1,625,000, and if the bankers realize any profit above this sum it is to be divided equally with the railroad.

The new indenture under which the Pennsylvania plans to care for its financing for a long period to come is not a closed mortgage, but is limited only by the amount of stock outstanding. At the present time this is $500,000,000. There is outstanding a total of $250,000,000 of underlying mortgage bonds which are to be refunded through the general mortgage, making the maximum addition to the funded debt now possible under this mortgage about $250,000,000, so that with the sale just announced the company still has a margin of $185,000,000 for future sales under the new mortgage.

The Union Trust Company of New York (established in 1864) has for many years made a specialty of Personal Trusts—under Will or under Agreement—and maintains a carefully organized department for handling them.

Many millions of dollars' worth of property—real and personal—have been entrusted to the company by conservative people, residents not only of New York State but of other states in which the Union Trust Company is authorized to transact business.

Correspondence or interviews with persons considering the formation of trusts of any kind—for themselves or for others—are solicited.

An Opportunity For Investment
IN COAL AND TIMBER!

Owing to the necessity of settling a large estate a splendid opportunity offers for a financier to realize a large sum on the sale of a property in Alabama (on the Southern R. R., and about sixty miles South of Chattanooga), a tract of 20,000 acres of table-land in the neighborhood of thriving factory towns and splendid agricultural district. A good part is in virgin poplar timber, some oak, chestnut, hickory, the rest in good agricultural land, together with a bituminous coal mine, the very finest and hardest coal in the South. Twelve miles of railroad and equipment, saw mill, coal mining machinery, new houses for workmen and a general store are for sale for a lump sum.
